Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Blanketed and bareheaded, the first seven men to come up in diving bell from the sunken submarine Squalus are shown on Coast Guard cutter Harriet Lane as they arrived at Portsmouth Navy Yard. Rescue workers are with them. William Isaacs, whose parents live at 4509 Beck street southeast, is fourth from right.

Divers Unsnarl Line 150 Feet Down; Will Open Stern Section

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H. (Thursday), May 25.—The United States Navy completed early today the perilous rescue of 33 men trapped since Tuesday on the ocean floor aboard the submarine Squalus—and the sunken craft was left peopled only by its 26 dead.

Under the giant searchlights of a fleet of mercy vessels, a rescue chamber bearing the last eight men finally was brought to the surface at 12:30 a. m. (11:30 p. m. E. S. T.), but only after an escape from a second near-tragedy.

For nearly four hours the unwieldy, 9-ton diving bell hung suspended 150 feet below the surface when a hoisting cable jammed.

Fresh Air Pumped

Men who already had been imprisoned for more than 36 hours in the stale, gas-ridden and icy-cold air of the crippled Squalus were jammed like sardines in the cramped rescue chamber. Only the fact that a hose reaching to the surface was attached to the bell, so that fresh air could be pumped down, prevented acute danger. A second hose was connected through which stale air could be drawn off.

As the bell broke the surface on its last trip, this message was flashed from the rescue ship Falcon.

"Eight men up on fourth trip. All in good shape and all survivors now out."

To Search for Dead

Thus was completed the roll of the living.

More than 40 fathoms below rested the dead, two of them civilian observers and one an officer—Ensign Joseph Patterson, jr., of Oklahoma City.

Even as the final eight were brought out alive, the Navy's high command gave the order to make the sea give up its dead, but immediate diving operations were suspended until daylight because of the accident to the diving bell. Then the bodies of the lost will be sought so that the submarine may be blown out and raised.

Lieut. O. F. Naquin, of Alexandria, La., commander of the Squalus, was the last to leave his ship, glued to the bottom 15 miles off Portsmouth since 7:40 a. m. (E.S.T.) Tuesday, when water, pouring through an open air induction valve, flooded the after compartments in a practice dive.

Four Officers Saved

Stepping from the rescue chamber with Lieut. Naquin was Lieut. William T. Doyle, jr., of Baltimore, second in command. Thus four of the five officers were saved, as Lieuts. John C. Nichols, of Chicago, and Robert W. Robertson, of Quanah, Tex., were rescued earlier.

Almost simultaneous with the "final" rescue, an indication came from Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, who directed the fight to save the Squalus' crew, that the nine men brought up in the third trip of the diving bell were in poor physical condition.

Ambulances Asked

In a radio message Admiral Cole said:

"Am sending nine men from Squalus for hospitalization and observation via Harriet Lane (Coast Guard cutter) arriving Navy Yard 1:30 a. m. daylight. Have ambulances."

Cheer upon cheer rose from the decks of the Falcon as the first seven survivors stepped into the free air. Each, as he was rushed quickly to

Offer to Sell Milk Inquiry Votes Laid to Postmaster

West Virginian Admits Presenting His and Ex-Partner's Services as Lobbyists

By James D. Secrest.

Charges that Whiting Faulkner, postmaster at Martinsburg, W. Va., had offered to deliver the votes of Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, and other members of the sub-committee on public health for $1,000 yesterday created a new sensation in the District milk inquiry.

The offer was made to the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, according to B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer, at several conferences, at which Washington police listened in and made stenographic records.

While the House sub-committee pursued its inquiry, the House adopted a resolution allocating an additional $1,500 for the investigation.

Faulkner, son of a former United States Senator and one-time chairman of the Berkley County Democratic committee, was subpenaed by Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, and confronted with the charges and transcript by J. Edward Burroughs, counsel of the sub-committee.

Denies Votes Promised

He admitted trying to sell the services of himself and D. C. Moler, State Senator of West Virginia and his former law partner, as lobbyists in the milk investigation, but he denied that he had promised to deliver the votes of Randolph and other sub-committee members.

The name of Chairman Bates, who for the last two weeks has directed the investigation of Faulkner's activities and evidences of informational "leaks," was brought into the uncompleted negotiations, according to Derrick.

Burroughs subsequently read from the police transcript of the conversation, quoting Faulkner to the effect that he could influence Randolph's vote and that Bates would vote any way Randolph advised him to.

Bates remarked he had never seen Faulkner before yesterday.

Advance Information

Faulkner allegedly boasted and gave proof that he was obtaining advance information regarding the investigation from Miss Julia Castleman, special clerk of the sub-committee, who was appointed upon the recommendation of Chairman Randolph.

While denying that he was obtaining secret information from the committee clerk, Faulkner admitted he had asked Randolph that she be appointed. Miss Castleman came to Washington from Martinsburg.

Hinting that the sub-committee has much more evidence of undercover activities than it had produced, Chairman Bates said that the whole matter will be presented to the sub-committee in executive session, probably the latter part of this week.

Randolph Denies Talk

Chairman Randolph, who was present during the testimony of Faulkner, denied that Faulkner had discussed the milk inquiry with him, although he explained they had had several conferences with regard to a site for a new Martinsburg postoffice.

He also brought out through Representative Bates that he had never suggested any witnesses or sought to influence the sub-committee's action in the conduct of the investigation.

"It is regrettable," he said, "that Faulkner used his name in the conversations with the Maryland-Virginia Producers Association."

Faulkner was introduced to Derrick, the testimony developed, in Randolph's office after the Smith resolution calling for the inquiry had passed the House but before the inquiry was begun. He was accompanied by I. D. Van Meter, a West Virginia milk producer and a director of the Maryland-Virginia association.

Knew Only Randolph

According to Derrick's testimony, Faulkner threatened that unless the producers association retained him, his partner, Moler, would sell similar services to the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy. Although Moler allegedly talked with James J. Ward, president of the dairy, Faulkner subsequently told Derrick that he would

Chamberlain Predicts Soviet Pact by June 5

Cabinet Accepts Plan Reported as Approved by Moscow

By the Associated Press.

London, May 24.—Negotiations on a three-power mutual assistance pact among Britain, France and Russia had advanced so far today that Prime Minister Chamberlain expressed confidence of full agreement within two weeks.

In a two-hour meeting the British cabinet accepted a plan which Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax discussed with Ivan Maisky, Russian delegate to the League of Nations, at Geneva. The plan was said by informed quarters to have been approved by Moscow.

Details to Be Worked Out

After the cabinet meeting Chamberlain told the House of Commons that "all relevant points of view have been made clear" and that he believed he would be able to announce conclusion of an agreement with Russia when Parliament reconvenes June 5, after the Whitsun recess.

Chamberlain was somewhat vague as to just what action the cabinet had taken, but the foreign office spokesman later said Moscow's latest proposals on the mutual assistance pact had been approved in principle.

Mutual Assistance

Some details of the British-Russian accord remained to be worked out, but Chamberlain said he did not anticipate that these were "likely to give rise to any serious difficulties."

The foreign office said a note would be dispatched immediately to Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador to Moscow, for communication to the Soviet government.

Roosevelt Names David J. Lewis as Rail Mediator

President Roosevelt nominated former Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, yesterday to be a member of the National Railway Mediation Board.

Lewis would succeed William M. Leiserson, who recently was appointed to the National Labor Relations Board, succeeding Donald Wakefield Smith.

Lewis gave up his House seat last year to run against Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, in the primary election.

King Calls War on U. S. Unthinkable

Royal Couple Goes Through Winnipeg Rain in Open Car on Victoria's Birthday

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent

Winnipeg, May 24.—From this central city of Canada, far removed from the tormented borders of Europe, King George VI told his mighty empire today that the moment had come when the Old World might well look for hope and guidance to the new.

"For a long period in history it was the mind of Europe which led the march and fixed the aims of progress in the world," the British monarch said. "But that tide of inspiration is no longer running as it did in times gone by."

The speech, delivered into a golden microphone after the King and Queen had thrilled Winnipeg and thousands of American visitors by driving through a downpour in an open automobile, was bold for a British sovereign. London correspondents said it was the "greatest venture into the realms of international politics ever made by a constitutional British monarch," who customarily indulges in nothing more than a family chat.

Birthday of Victoria

The occasion was "Empire Day"—birthday of Victoria, King George's great grandmother—and the speech was addressed to the nearly 500,000,000 people in the British empire. There were passages in it, however, that must have had a particular interest for Hitler and Mussolini.

Alluding to the fierce nationalism in some parts of Europe and Asia, King George said: "The sense of race may be a dangerous and disruptive force." Then he pointed to how the French and English in this greatest of Britain's dominions had held on to their pride and culture and yet had established a broad freedom and security.

Canada and the United States, he said, had had their differences, but never had they resorted to force or threat.

30,000 Americans on Hand

"No man, thank God, will ever again conceive of such arbitrament between the peoples of my empire and the people of the United States," he said, with obvious feeling.

Fifty-thousand Americans, most of them from Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota, were among the 150,000 visitors who trooped into Winnipeg, lusty capital of Manitoba, almost doubling its population.

Gov. Harold Stassen, of Minnesota, came here, and so did the mayors of the "Twin Cities"—Mayor George Leach, of Minneapolis and Mayor William Fallon of St. Paul.

The Indian band of the St. Paul Legion came up in full regalia, and drew a particularly nice smile from the Queen.

Hint for Washington

The band stepped down the street playing the Washington Post March.

The fact that these Americans came from points more than 500 miles away to see the King and Queen—first British sovereigns ever to visit the New World—ought to be a hint to Washington of the thousands who will pour in there on June 8.

When King George and Queen Elizabeth stepped from their train onto a red carpet leading to their automobile, they noticed that the Canadian Northwest Mounties had put the top of the machine up to protect them from the rain.

"Very Brave, Ma'am"

"Oh, we must have that top put down," said Her Majesty.

"You are very brave, ma'am," said Prime Minister MacKenzie King.

"But we must not disappoint the crowds," the Queen said.

"Quite right," agreed the King.

A moment before they started off, an attendant ran out from the train and handed the Queen an old umbrella. Thus she rode through the downpour, the rain sweeping in de-

Trapped Men Died at Posts, Officials Think

Could Have Escaped But Worked at Valve, Say Navy Experts

The 26 men in the rear compartments of the submerged submarine Squalus, now about given up as lost, died at their posts, naval officers here believe.

On the basis of reports received from the scene, officers unofficially built up a picture of what must have happened Tuesday morning when the new submarine sank into about 240 feet of water off the Isles of Shoals, flooding the whole after-part of the ship.

It is believed that the induction valve, a 30-inch opening admitting air to the engines which propel the craft on the surface, failed to close as the submarine dived. The valve operates by hydraulic machinery from within and cannot be closed before the submarine starts to dive, it was said.

Whether the valve failed mechanically or the order to close it came too late, will probably not be known until the ship is raised and a Navy court of inquiry is held. Reports indicate, however, that tons of water suddenly poured into the two engine rooms as the sea closed over the deck of the diving submarine, flooding the chambers.

The engine-room crews must have stayed on in the flooding chambers, attempting to close the inner valves which would have cut off the water,

Survivor Tells How Squalus Crew Calmly Fought Disaster

Diver Describes Eager Taps That Greeted His Arrival

By Frank P. Miller,
Diver at Portsmouth Navy Yard.
Written for the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 24.—I was the first diver to take the 240-foot drop to the submarine Squalus and spent 15 minutes hooking on the descending line to the forward torpedo room hatch where it was believed 33 men were alive.

As I walked across the deck of the sunken craft noise of my heavy boots apparently penetrated to the men inside. At every step I could hear them tapping from within. Every time I moved, tapping was the answer.

I heard no sound from the aft torpedo room. The only possibility for the men in there to be safe was to have reached the escape trunk in the after torpedo room hatch, but I very much doubt if any one of them made it.

I believe the submarine may be brought up sometime tonight for they apparently are going to keep working on her.

Although I was down on the sub only 15 minutes, it took about 73 minutes for me to come up and recover.

The water was extremely cold. It was a tough dive. The submarine lay on her starboard side at a five or six degree angle. There was no damage apparent. It was very dark,

Sailor Slammed Door By 'Super-Strength,' Rescued Man Says

By the United Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 24.—A young electrician's mate tonight told for his shipmates the story of more than 30 hours' imprisonment in the sunken submarine Squalus.

Saved, along with 32 others, from entombment 40 fathoms down, Judson T. Bland, of Norfolk, Va., speaking in a calm, quiet voice, told of the heroic rescue, and of the death of 26 companions.

Bland spoke in place of Lieut John C. Nichols, fourth in command of the ill-fated submarine, who originally was scheduled to answer the questions of the press. At the last minute Nichols was refused permission to leave his bed in the base hospital.

Seated in a swivel chair in the administration building of the Portsmouth Navy Yard—a building where even as he spoke, could be heard the sobbing of wives and children of the men who died in the Squalus—Bland gave a brief account of the sinking of the $4,000,000 submersible.

Under restricted questioning, with high-ranking naval officers close by to stop him should he tread on controversial grounds, Bland told of the ship's adventures from the start of the routine practice dive until he was lifted from the depths in the second ascent of the diving bell.

There was no panic at any time, he said.

"We knew something had gone wrong aft a minute after we dived," Bland said. "The captain came below, as water began coming in through ventilation lines. The men already were working fast to shut off the flow of water. The instant the standing officer knew water was coming in, he gave the word to 'blow the tanks.' This order was carried out immediately."

As the water poured in, Bland explained, the ship took a "terrific up angle—in my judgment, about 45 degrees." He said one sailor pounced upon and slammed the water-tight door leading to the affected area.

"It took super-strength to do that," Bland said. "I don't know how he

Isaacs in 1st Group; Missing Man's Wife Continues to Pray

Joy balanced dread in Washington homes last night as latest reports of rescue operation at the U. S. S. Squalus disaster scene reached friends and relatives of men entombed at the bottom of the ocean.

In the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Isaacs, 4509 Beck street southeast, joy was unconfined when a long-distance telephone call brought word their son, William, 31, a cook aboard the sunken submarine, was one of the first seven to reach safety.

But in the home of Mrs. Jeanette Miles Priester, 21-year-old wife of Torpedoman Alfred Charles Priester, a cloud of apprehension hung heavy over a tiny living room as hour after hour passed without encouraging news. Priester, who served at the Washington Navy Yard in 1934 and 1935, is believed to be among the dead. His young wife of less than three years and their 2-year-old son, Alfred, jr., live at 1322 Eleventh street southeast.

"All I can do is pray," said Mrs. Priester as she sat transfixed in front of a radio, her small son in her lap. "I've never been through anything like this before—I pray God Al is safe. This waiting is horrible."

There was open rejoicing at the Isaacs'. The family made no pre-

Bay Freighter Wins K. O. Decision Over 400-Lb. Sturgeon

Chesapeake City, Md., May 24 (AP).—A huge sturgeon lost a decision today to the freighter Barbaigan, of the Norwegian Steamship Line.

Entering the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, the freighter struck and crippled the sturgeon.

It was recovered by two rivermen, who measured it at nine and a half feet and weighed it at 400 pounds. The sturgeon was killed, stripped of 38 pounds of roe and shipped to Baltimore.

Murphy Attends Indictment of 2 Bank Officials

Los Angeles, May 24 (INS).—With Attorney General Murphy present in court, a Federal grand jury tonight returned indictments against two ranking officers of the $50,000,000 Pacific States Savings & Loan Co.

Those indicted were Robert S. Odell, president, and Gerald R. White, vice president.

Murphy, accompanied by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, arrived in Los Angeles by plane tonight and immediately went to the court where the grand jury was in session.

Stopping in El Paso last night, Murphy said he was coming to Los Angeles to take personal charge of an "enormous swindle."

Bridal Date Set, Sailor's Fiancee Clings to Hope

Dover, N. H., May 24 (AP).—Declaring she was to have been married next Saturday to Sherman Shirley, of North Little Rock, Ark., torpedoman reported "probably dead" aboard the sunken submarine Squalus, Miss Ruth Desautel, 20, refused tonight to give up hope.

"He's too good a guy to be trapped like that," asserted the young mill worker.

"I won't give up hope until officially notified of his death."

Her trousseau purchased, she said that in addition to a diamond, Shirley had given her a wedding ring, with the words:

"Keep it. It will be safer in your possession than mine."

Dr. Mayo Suffers Sinking Spell

Chicago, May 24 (INS).—Dr. Charles H. Mayo, world famous physician and surgeon, stricken with pneumonia last Friday, suffered a sinking spell late today and was removed from an oxygen tent and given a blood transfusion.

After the transfusion, he appeared to improve, his physicians said. Dr. Mayo, who is 73, had made satisfactory gains until today.

Boy, 11, Drowns In Anacostia

Paul I. McDaniel, 11, of 2235 Shannon place southeast, drowned yesterday afternoon in the Anacostia River.

Police recovered his body by grappling about 500 feet south of the Eleventh Street Bridge at 7:45 p. m. last night.

Police said the boy's clothing had been found on the bridge and it was presumed he had dived from the span for a swim.

Bergdoll Lands in U. S. Today But Entry Remains in Doubt

By the Associated Press.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll steamed toward his homeland yesterday after nearly 20 years of self-imposed exile in Germany, while Government officials debated whether he should be permitted to reenter this country.

The discussion arose after Harry Weinberger, the draft dodger's attorney, had informed the Senate Military Affairs Committee that Bergdoll was aboard the liner Bremen, due in New York today. He had departed unannounced from Germany after signifying a desire to serve a five-year sentence imposed after his conviction in 1920.

Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, the Army's judge advocate general, told the committee that the War Department was anxious to take Bergdoll into custody and send him to prison.

Gerald D. Reilly, solicitor of the Labor Department, said immigration authorities would oppose Bergdoll's entry on the ground that he had forfeited his citizenship by his nearly 20 years of exile.

A State Department official, R. W. Flournoy, told the Senate committee

President and Harrison Agree On Basis for Tax Revision

Congressional leaders began clearing the decks yesterday for speedy revision of corporation taxes after President Roosevelt and Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, made peace around a White House luncheon table.

Although no agreement was reached on a corporation tax program, the impression prevailed that the President was more receptive than at previous conferences to the adjustment of corporation taxes to remove certain business deterrents.

Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Ways and Means sub-committee on tax legislation, made plans for calling the group together within the next few days to begin the task of drafting a tax bill.

The President talked with Cooper before a luncheon meeting with Senators Harrison and Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina. Plans discussed, it is understood, call for hasty action on tax legislation, which would make possible an earlier adjournment of Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt is known to be anxious to get Congress away as quickly as possible. Democratic leaders

BUNIONS OF TOMORROW

If you're an official or a celebrity, the Government might offer you a glass of punch, at the United States building. It's pretty harmless punch, about one teaspoon of American wine to the gallon, I'd judge, and makes things kinda stylish. That carpet in the great hall is the thickest I ever saw. Must have cost the taxpayers plenty.

Eleanor Holm . . . mighty pretty

But Grover Whalen wouldn't want important furriners standing on the bare floor!

I wish they'd let me have a closer look at Eleanor Holm. From where I sat she looked mighty pretty. But has she got freckles on her nose or something? Maybe the U. S. Navy or the House of Representatives ought to adopt her as a mascot. The ole swimmin' hole was never like that aquacade . . .

It's a pretty smart idea, dunking the chorus girls in the water and showing the customers arms instead of legs.

It seems to me they've converted all of little ole New York into a midway in connection with the Fair . . . You can't buy much but souvenirs, and even in the shoe stores they offer you "the shoe of tomorrow" . . . The smartest thing I saw was the clock with two sets of hands, the red hands showing the daylight time. Right handy for us outa-town fellers.

"—the chorus girl of tomorrow"

By golly, I didn't realize the railroads were so romantic and sentimental. That's quite a show they put on, with all the girls kissing and snuggling in the old-fashioned coaches and carriages. If our grandpaps laid those tracks over the deserts and mountains we can still do something big, too.

When they show you old Abe Lincoln standing on the back platform it makes you want to solve the railroad problem and all the other problems.

It's a surprise to see 'em selling a nickel soft drink for a nickel here . . . I wish they wouldn't have to tear down all these pretty buildings; too bad they didn't design 'em so they could be used permanently . . . These hot dogs are as good as the ones you eat at our own State Fair . . . These flowers don't look real but I guess they are . . . I'll have to take Betsy for a ride in one of these push-chairs . . . I wish grandpap could see this fair, then he'd stop talking about the fair of '93.

• • • •

They tell me the most exclusive place on the grounds is that Terrace Club over there on the lagoon . . . Costs $5,000 to belong, and everybody's trying to find someone to give 'em a guest ticket . . . Shouldn't be hard for a Congressman . . . Be easier if we Congressmen could wear some kind of a uniform . . . Otherwise we look just like everybody else . . .

What kind of high jinks goes on in a $5,000 club? Nekkid gals and caviar, maybe.

"—all the signs point to comfort"

Maybe I ought to bring Junior up to be a glass-blower like those gents in the exhibit . . . But nothing beats farming . . . You can't eat glass. Unless you're a glass-eater . . . I wish I could get my farm fixed up pretty like that Electric Farm . . . Betsy never looked like those girls a-feeding the chickens . . . She's prettier, too . . . But they make it sort of a game . . .

If we had farms like that clear of mortgages everybody'd want to be a farmer.

Wish I could live to see the world of tomorrow the way it is shown here in the perisphere . . . Will things ever be that calm and orderly? . . . All these signs point to "comfort" but there is no comfort . . . I must find that place to get my feet fixed up . . .

Wonder if my old jalopy could plunge off a 3-foot bump and land on one wheel without a blowout that way.

Yes, that's the way New York looked when Pa took me there as a boy . . . This exhibit makes me sad remembering how I felt then . . . I ain't done so bad, though . . . Sure been plenty of improvement in the big town, though . . . Mostly thought up by boys like me from Ohio and Indiana and Iowa . . . I wonder if the world of tomorrow will be like this, all curves and clean angles and queer statues and pictures and all like machinery . . . I wish Betsy and me could be here to see it . . .

But the youngsters will be here, and they're a part of me and I'm a part of them.

Townsend Bill Reported Out; Vote Promised

Leaders Decide on House Showdown; Doctor Is Jubilant

By Robert C. Albright.

"Better make it $50," said Dr. Townsend.

"I'd say $60," said Louis C. Silva, his statistician.

"NO, better make it $50, to start," said Dr. Townsend.

The Ways and Means committee had just reported "without recommendation" the revised Townsend plan. Leaders had promised a House vote. Exuberantly, Dr. Townsend and Silva were explaining to a reporter just how it would work.

The $200-a-month to the old folks, for which Townsend's name is famed across the land is out. The modified tax in the new bill will yield only $4,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 a year. And that, Dr. Townsend computes, is enough to pay the 8,000,000 oldsters who qualify just $50—to start.

"Only a Beginning"

"But that's only a beginning," explained Dr. Townsend. "Once we get the principle established——"

Yesterday's 23-to-2 Ways and Means Committee vote reporting the Townsend bill followed a decision of leaders to carry the legislation to a floor showdown and "kill it off" in advance of consideration of the liberalized social security amendments next week. By this strategy they plan to put definitely on record wavering Democrats and Republicans who have been flirting with the plan. They estimate it will poll only about 125 votes.

But Townsend's views were slightly at variance.

Warns of Election Coming

"They didn't dare not bring it out," said the 72-year-old former country physician. "We have the most powerful political organization in this country. And there's going to be an election next year."

The good doctor paused for effect and then added:

"Maybe I better not do any threatening. We have been promised a record vote. But believe me we are going to act on that record. If this Congress won't vote for our plan, we will elect one that will. We will spit on our hands and go out and lick 'em. But maybe I'd better not threaten.

"The House vote is going to amaze you. It wouldn't surprise me to get a majority. I know we will get close to 50 per cent."

He had just talked it all over with Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida, who introduced the new bill only Tuesday. Townsend plans a round of conferences with members before he returns to Washington next week "to see this through."

Leaders tentatively plan to bring the bill to the House floor next Wednesday, under a closed rule that will exclude any amendments. Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, will go before the Rules Committee this morning to ask for the rule.

"They have been placing the blame on us and saying we were suppressing the bill," said Doughton. "So we decided to give them a House vote."

Social Securities Bill Up

Meantime Doughton introduced his committee's revised social security amendments, estimated to save employers and workers about $1,250,000,000 in taxes in the next three years, while liberalizing benefits to the extent of about $1,250,000,000 in five years.

"Freezing" old-age pay roll taxes at present levels for three years, permitting States with adequate reserves to lower unemployment insurance tax levels, starting old-age payments in 1940 instead of 1942, and generally broadening the benefit base, the bill will be brought to a final committee vote today.

To clear decks for consideration of this measure, probably late next week, the Townsend plan strategy was decided on. By this maneuver leaders hope not only to put Republican and Democratic Townsendites on the political spot, but ward off as well interference from riddling Townsend amendments when the social security bill comes before the House.

The new Townsend bill introduced by Hendricks and reported yesterday differs from the old plan only in tax features. The change was made, the doctor said, "to reduce opposition from small business."

Change in Taxing Plan

As opposed to the old flat 2 per cent transactions tax on all business, the new tax provisions range from a one-half of 1 per cent levy on the gross revenues of producing, manufacturing, wholesale and jobbing establishments to a 2 per cent tax on the gross revenues of retail businesses.

To receive benefits, persons over 60 must promise to forego other lucrative employment and agree to spend all of their pension each month.

Dr. Townsend estimated there are 12,000,000 persons over 60, of whom 8,000,000 would qualify for pensions.

Geometrical Progression

Then he applied his theory of "geometrical progression:"

"It will create $4,000,000,000 of additional business. Business will increase 500 per cent by the end of the first month, doubling every month. It won't cost a red cent. This whole thing will be paid for out of new wealth produced——"

"Shall we tell him how it will run the racketeers out?" asked Silva.

"No," said the doctor. "That's another story. Let's save that for awhile."

U. S. War-Risk Ship Insurance Urged

The Maritime Commission told Congress yesterday that war threats necessitate legislation to provide Government marine war risk insurance, reinsurance and ordinary marine risk insurance to meet emergency needs of American commerce.

The commission said its recommendaton was based on Government experience durng the World War, when a bureau of war risk insurance was established in the Treasury Department.

The proposed services would be offered to all American vessels in emergencies.

Bergdoll Lands in U. S. Today But Entry Remains in Doubt

Family of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World War draft dodger, is shown on steps of Capitol yesterday before going to dramatic hearing on bill designed to prevent his return to this country from Germany. tee that Bergdoll had been refused a passport four years ago on the grounds he was not a citizen.

The committee had under consideration a House-approved bill designed to close the doors of the United States to Bergdoll and any other draft evaders who might have fled this country to escape punishment.

After hearing conflicting testimony concerning Bergdoll's citizenship by representatives of various Government agencies, Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, of the Military Committee, announced no attempt would be made to speed the exclusion legislation through the Senate before Bergdoll arrived.

Eager to Serve Sentence

Weinberger said Bergdoll was eager to serve his sentence in order that his children could be educated in a "free country."

Bergdoll's 78-year-old mother, Mrs. Emma Bergdoll; his blonde German wife, Berta, and two of the Bergdoll children attended yesterday's hearing.

The mother, from whose home Bergdoll escaped the custody of two Army sergeants, told senators her son "always was a good boy" and that she could "not live without him."

Tearfully, Bergdoll's attractive wife testified that her husband's sole motive in returning was "to raise his children like he was raised."

Children Not Impressed

The dramatic hearing received scant attention from two of the Bergdoll children.

Emma, about 10 and with flaxen hair in pigtail braids, was fascinated by flash bulbs of photographers. Tiny Erwin hummed to himself until he fell asleep in the lap of Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, sister of Bergdoll.

Gen. Gullion said the War Department wished Bergdoll's return in order to prosecute him for twice evading the draft and for escape after conviction by a military council.

The general said Bergdoll faced "at least six years in addition to the four years and 10 months he did not serve."

President, Harrison Agree on Taxes

have been trying to expedite the Administration legislative program to bring about an adjournment by the middle of July, but there is still no assurance that this will be done.

Cooper, regarded as the White House spokesman on taxes, maintained his usual rigid silence. Leaders, however, intimated that the way was open for "limited" corporation tax revision.

Byrnes, who accompanied the President on a week-end cruise, likewise refused to talk. He was present at the luncheon meeting in the role of peacemaker, it was said.

Believed Byrnes' Idea

The luncheon invitation was extended, it was believed, at his suggestion. Byrnes presumably talked the matter over with the President while on the cruise. He felt, it was reported, that a fight between Democratic conservatives and New Dealers could be avoided if the President and Harrison sat down together and had a quiet, frank discussion of their individual views.

The basis for revising the corporation taxes, it is expected will be a four-point program suggested by Harrison at a conference between the President and Congressional leaders May 15. At that time, the President was cool toward the proposal. The meeting resulted in a disagreement after Harrison and the President had revealed definite differences of viewpoint.

Harrison's plan, based on studies made by John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, would substitute a flat 18 per cent corporation tax for the existing undistributed profits tax. Carryover of business losses would be allowed for three years instead of one as at present. The $2,000 limitation on corporation capital loss deductions would be repealed, and corporations would be allowed to revalue capital stock for capital stock and excess profits tax purposes each year instead of every three years.

Emphasies No Reduction

The President, it is understood, re-emphasized his oft-repeated statement that there should be no reduction in revenue from corporation taxes. There has never been any disagreement on this basic principles. Harrison, it was reported, reiterated his willingness to accept it.

Asks Long-Term Program

Pittsburgh, May 24 (AP).—Paul G. Hoffman, resident of the Studebaker Corporation, said tonight there could be no business recovery until speculation and competition in industry were increased through tax revision and loosening on "restrictions" on business.

In an address prepared for delivery to the chamber of commerce, the motor executive proposed a "constructive" long-term tax program, claiming that through chaotic and destructive taxes this country in six years had done more than any other nation to drive venture capital fromindustry."

Deatherage Sought Advice Of Nazi Envoy

Tells Dies Inquiry He Asked Tips on Organizing U. S. Drive

George Deatherage, commander of the Knights of the White Camellia, told the Dies Committee yesterday that he had conferred with an official of the German Embassy here on money-raising methods the Nazis employed before Hitler came to power.

The West Virginian said he wanted to learn from Nazi experience when he could expect to obtain big-business financing for his movement, which Chairman Dies has labeled anti-Semitic, pro-Fascist and pro-Nazi. His interview, he said, was with Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, embassy attache.

A voluble witness, Deatherage said a "World Service" organization in Germany which had supplied him with some "anti-Communist" information" is ready to accommodate anyone in the United States with material." This organization and a similar one in Italy serve as "information agencies," he said.

Deatherage informed the committee that in 1935 or 1936 he made a special trip to Newport, R. I., in the hope of raising funds from socially prominent persons there.

"We were starving to death for funds," the chief of the White Camellias explained. "There was money in Newport and we understood there would be some one there who would help us."

The good angel, said Deatherage, was Howland Spencer, New York real estate dealer who sold his estate opposite President Roosevelt's home at Hyde Park to Father Divine, colored religious leader. The witness said that Spencer gave him about $200. He added that he dined on Spencer's yacht with Frazier Jelke, New York social figure, and "young Astor."

Deatherage, who in the course of his testimony was lectured by Dies on the subject of democracy, told the committee of his "American Nationalist Federation," described in its platform as a "Fascist Party."

Liaisons Its Task

The federation, it was explained, is "a letterhead organization," designed to establish liaisons with various anti-Semitic groups throughout the country. One of the "party's" aims was said to be confiscation of the "illegal hoardings" of international bankers in order to pay the national debt. Among the groups with which the federation had maintained loose contact were the Militant Christian Patriots, the Silvershirts, National Liberty Party, Constitutional Crusaders of America and the National Gentile League.

Deatherage said Von Gienanth told him that the large industrialists had not helped Hitler until six months prior to his accession to power. Before then, the Nazis had struggled along as best they could, von Gienanth was quoted as saying.

Deatherage testified that Von Gienanth had declared there was more "anti-Judaism" in the United States than had ever existed in Germany.

Von Gienanth said the German-American Bund had "caused a lot of trouble," the witness added. A resident of St. Alban's, W. Va., Deatherage observed later that "there is no Nazi menace in this country—why, the German-American Bund couldn't come down and take St. Albans—we'd whip hell out of them."

The witness assured the committee that he has two tons of printed evidence about Communist activities, hidden in the hills of West Virginia. Dies said he would have a committee investigator check the material with Deatherage.

Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, U. S. A., retired, mentioned in correspondence between Deatherage and others, was unable to testify before the committee this week, said Dies.

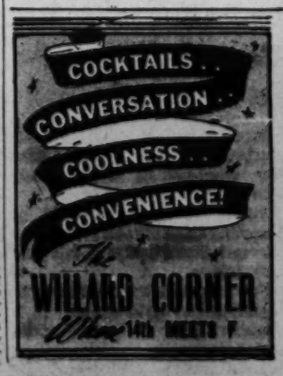
President Roosevelt's action in opening income-tax records to Dies committee investigators was attacked yesterday by the American Civil Liberties Union. The union said the proper method for obtaining this information would be through issuance of subpenas. It further objected on the grounds of Dies' alleged "prejudice and irresponsibility."

Hallanan Denies Charge

Charleston, W. Va., May 24 (AP).—National Republican Committeeman Walter S. Hallanan declared "Utterly untrue" tonight testimony before the Dies committee that he promised George Deatherage aid for a magazine to further a campaign against "subversive" Jewish and Communist organizations.

The Republican committeeman wired Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, offering to appear before the committee, saying "My vigorous and outspoken opposition to all movements tending to stir up racial, religious or class hatred is well known in West Virginia . . ."

Hallanan's office made public a letter to the committee from Harold S. Mathews, president of the Mathews Printing Co. of Charleston, in which Mathews said, "I know of my own knowledge that this statement by Deatherage is untrue."



On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

On a request by Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, the Senate will reconsider its vote confirming President Roosevelt's nomination of Capt. Harry A. Stuart to be rear admiral. He was promoted, though he had been passed over by a naval selection board.

Capt. Stuart

Capt. Stuart was born at Tazewell, Va., and is now director of naval petroleum reserves, under the Secretary of the Navy. Senator Walsh, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, said the committee recommended confirmation, with the understanding committee members could discuss it further when before the Senate. The nomination was confirmed in a routine way and when only a few senators were on the floor.

Walsh later made the formal motion for reconsideration, but said he was in favor of confirmation. Barbour also is a member of the naval committee.

The Senate Judiciary Committee filed with the Senate yesterday a recommendation that the nomination of Armistead M. Dobie as Federal judge in the Western District of Virginia be confirmed.

Earlier in the week the committee had given its tentative approval, subject to formal approval by Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia. Committee attaches said the two Senators had given their approval.

A Senate banking and finance sub-committee will consider on June 6 and 7 an amendment to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act which would prohibit use of RFC loans for moving industry from one State to another.

The amendment was introduced by Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, after he received reports the RFC had approved a $1,250,000 loan to establish a textile plant at Spartanburg, S. C. The effect of building the new plant, he said, would have been to close down two textile plants at Southbridge and Sturbridge, Mass. The RFC has announced the loan has been withheld.

"Investment capital is not on a sit-down strike, it is scared to death," Senator Bailey (Democrat, of North Carolina, declared today.

Bailey, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, was attacking Federal spending when he ceases its interference with absolved business.

"As soon as the Administration private initiative, prosperity will return," Bailey said.

Wirt Courtney, of Franklin, Tenn., took the oath of office yesterday as a member of the House from the Sixth Tennessee District. He succeeds the late Clarence W. Turner.

It now is unlawful to print a picture of a G-Man's badge.

A bill signed by President Roosevelt extends present laws against the unauthorized manufacture, sale or possession of official Government badges, identification cards and other insignia to ban their reproduction by photographs, engravings or other likenesses in periodicals.

Conferees Put 60 Million Back in War Material Bill

By the Associated Press.

A joint Senate-House conference committee restored $60,000,000 yesterday to the bill to acquire stocks of strategic war materials.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, chairman, said the measure, when repotred for final action, would carry the full $100,000,000 authorized by the House. This had been cut to $40,000,000 by the Senate.

The House passed and returned to the Senate with an amendment a bill to authorize a 14,233,000 expansion in Coast Guard facilities.

The measure, approved 252 to 93, would authorize construction of three new cutters at a cost of $3,000,000 each, acquisition of 15 new seaplanes at a cost of $2,490,000, and establishment of a Coast Guard airbase on the coast of Alaska at a cost of $2,733,000.

Candidates Address Voters In Arlington

Women Democrats To Give Benefit Luncheon Today

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0500.

Candidates seeking the nomination to the county board subject to Democratic primary August 1 addressed the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County yesterday at the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse.

They were Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, William A. E. McShea, Lorenzo Donaldson, Thomas R. Mechem, Bazil DeLashmutt, Leo Lloyd, Edmund D. Campbell and Minor Kavanaugh.

Mrs. Magruder, seeking her third term, asked for a vote of confidence.

William A. E. McShea spoke of his 24-year service as a member of the county school board, his appointment by Judge Walter T. McCarthy to the county board, and asked that his record be studied and given a vote of confidence. Lorenzo Donaldson said the water rate and general tax rate were too high and asked for a paid fire department to obtain a lower insurance rate. Bazile DeLashmutt outlined work of the planning commission of which he is a member, and advocated many improvements. Leo Lloyd spoke of his 24 years as a resident of the county and advocated sound government, all consideration possible for schools and playgrounds and many other improvements. Edmund D. Campbell stands for sound government and urged voters to give careful study to qualifications of candidates as to their ability to meet daily problems. Minor Kavanaugh said his platform was "the best for Arlington County."

The organization voted unanimously to become a cosponsor of the open-air spectacle, "The Birth of the Flag," to be staged at Ballston nightly, July 3 to 9.

Outlining scenes requiring a costumed cast of 1,000, the president, Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, listed 48 women present separately as members of a scene wherein they would represent the 48 States. All members of the group agreed to enlist their respective and associated clubs for other scenes in the production.

Ray C. Thompson, Washington newspaperman, who directed the Nation-wide publicity for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam at Hagerstown, Md., in 1937, and at Gettysburg, Pa., and Chickamauga at Chattanooga in 1938, was the guest speaker.

Thompson outlined methods of organization which have proved successful in other nationally successful undertakings, wherein the publicity phases were under his supervision.

Mrs. Simpson explained that the "Birth of the Flag" would be staged as a benefit for the youth of Arlington County, as the first step toward the construction of a central stadium and recreation center for all boys and girls of the county, as a model for the Nation.

Benefit Luncheon

Clarendon.—The Woman's Democratic Club of Arlington County will sponsor a benefit luncheon and "White Elephant" sale today beginning at 12 o'clock in the Rucker Building.

Carpenters in Demand

Arlington.—Announcement was made yesterday by Carter W. Friend that skilled journeyman and finished carpenters are in demand. All skilled carpenters residing in Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties are urged to register with the local office of the Virginia Employment Service located at 301 King street, Alexandria.

During the week ended May 20, employment was found for 183 persons, 111 in private industry and 72 on projects financed by public funds. There were 96 persons who registered for the first time and 153 renewed their applications.

Safety Conference

Arlington.—Elmer J. Blackmer, jr., secretary-treasurer and first aid fire training chairman of the Arlington County Firemen's Association, will head its delegation to the fifth annual State-wide safety conference to be held at Richmond today, tomorrow and Saturday. M. R. Bruin, first-aid chairman; Lorenzo Donaldson, fire marshal and Paul L. Snoots, alternate, also will attend the conference.

The conference is being held under the auspices of State government, industries and co-operating agencies including the local firemen's association.

$20,444 for Hospital

Arlington.—Officials directing the campaign for funds for the Arlington Hospital yesterday declared the project appears assured.

Gilbert L. Hall, president of the Arlington Hospital Association, stated that while the hospital will cost more than $100,000, building operations can be started if the campaign to raise $50,000 is successful.

Franklin Campbell, director of the campaign, announced at a meeting of workers last night at the Washington Golf and Country Club that $6,962 was collected over the week-end and that the total amount raised to date is $20,444.

Rockville Session Will Hear Objections To the Appointment of Mrs. Fennell

Commissioners to Listen to Protests On Probation Officer

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Rockville.—Objectors to the appointment of Mrs. Madeline O. Fennell, of Rockville, as probation officer of the Montgomery County Juvenile Court will be given a public hearing by the county commissioners at 11 a. m. today in the Rockville courthouse.

Several protests over the appointment of Mrs. Fennell last week by Judge John Gassaway, newly appointed Juvenile Court judge, have reached the county commissioners

Two new protests were lodged yesterday, one by the board of directors of the Montgomery County Mental Hygiene Society and the other by the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs.

The mental hygiene board threatened to withdraw the services of its psychiatrist, Dr. Ralph Crowley, from county Juvenile Court work.

Federation Takes Stand

Montgomery is said to be the only county in the United States having a psychiatrist of its own serving in Juvenile Court cases. Dr. Crowley has been handling this work for more than a year.

The federation adopted a resolution protesting against the appointment of a probation officer without at least one year's experience in probational work.

Both the federation and the board said their objections against the appointment were based solely on grounds of qualification and experience.

More than a score of other county organizations have adopted resolutions opposing the appointment of Mrs. Fennell to the post, which has been held by Mrs. Sadie Wisner, of Rockville, for the last eight years. Mrs. Wisner, a Republican, was appointed by a Democratic administration and served under Democratic, Republican and Fusion governments.

Appointed 10 Days Ago

Today's hearing is expected to result in a renewal of demands that the county commissioners refuse to pay the probation officer's salary to anyone not meeting Maryland code requirements for the post.

Suggestions have been made that the commissioners transfer the work to the County Welfare Board.

Mrs. Fennell was appointed by Judge Gassaway ten days ago on recommendation of former State's Attorney James H. Pugh, Montgomery County campaign manager for Gov. O'Conor. Pugh also is understood to have been instrumental in securing Judge Gassaway's appointment by Gov. O'Conor.

Mrs. Fennell is a graduate of Trinity College and has had a number of years' experience as a volunteer worker with the Girl Scouts and child welfare groups.

James Cunningham Rogers, Chevy Chase, resigned as chairman of the Montgomery County Juvenile Court Committee last week in protest against the appointment of both Judge Gassaway and Mrs. Fennell. In his letter to Governor O'Conor, Rogers expressed the belief that both appointments "were flagrant violations of both the letter and the spirit of the statute under which juvenile courts were created and are maintained."

Son Saved, Ill Father Collapses Here

text of hiding tears of joy when the word of William's safety was received. But the long strain took its toll. The elder Isaacs, ill for many years following an accident in which his back was broken while working for the District Government, collapsed after the ordeal of receiving reporters and photographers. He was assisted to his bedroom by another son, Howard.

"You don't know what I've been through," the mother sobbed. "I feel fine now—I'm so glad William is safe—but I still feel sorry for those other mothers and wives."

She clasped a picture of her son to her breast and rocked slowly back and forth in her chair. Members of the family revealed she had not been to bed since word of the disaster was received, but kept pacing from front porch to kitchen, her ears tuned to the radio for details of rescue work.

"They've taken my boy to a hospital," said Mrs. Isaacs, replacing his photograph on a table. "I don't know how bad he is hurt—but I do thank God for answering my prayers and bringing him out of that dreadful thing alive."

At Quantico, Va., Mrs. J. B. Robertson, mother of Lieut. (J. G.) Robert Neal Robertson, an officer aboard the sunken submarine, anxiously awaited word that her son had been brought to the surface. He was among those in forward compartments reached by rescuers.

"She is bearing up bravely," said a friend over long-distance telephone to The Post, "but I hope she doesn't have to wait much longer. We understand Lieut. Robertson is alive, but has not yet been rescued."

Brother Flies to Scene

News of the rescue operations was being relayed to Mrs. Robertson by another son, Lieut. John B. Robertson, jr., U. S. N., at whose home she is staying in Quantico. He flew to the disaster scene yesterday, leaving the Marine post at 8 a. m. in a plane piloted by a friend, Lieut. Edward Authier, U. S. M. C. Lieut. John B. Robertson is attending the Marine Corps School at Quantico.

Waiting with Mrs. Robertson are two sisters, Miss Nancy Robertson and Mrs. Peggy Robertson. Another brother, Francis S. Robertson, is an accountant with the RFC.

Lieut. Robertson, who was assigned to duty aboard the Squalus in January, visited his family in Quantico about three weeks ago. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934 and attended the Submarine School at New London, Conn. He is unmarried.

Little Alfred Priester jr., wriggled out of his mother's arms as she told of plans to visit her husband at Portsmouth, N. H., this summer. She kept speaking in the past tense—as though she knew Torpedoman Priester was dead—but would quickly catch herself, pause, and then continue.

"Al has been in the Navy 11 years," she said "but never once before have I felt the least worried about his work aboard submarines. He told me about the Squalus often. He liked her—said she had 'all the comforts of home'."

Mrs. Priestly hasn't seen her husband since January when he left to take ove. duties on the Squalus.

Another wife of one of the submarine crew received first news of the tragedy when she passed through Washington yesterday en route to Portsmouth to join him.

She was Mrs. Robert Franklin Gibbs, Rumanian-born wife of a Squalus seaman. She left their home in Lexington, S. C., Tuesday and knew nothing of the disaster until she was met at Union Station by her husband's uncle, F. O. Barrett, employe of the Government Printing Office.

Mrs. Gibbs speaks little English and when she finally understood what had happened the train had started to move again and Barrett was forced to leave, hoping someone on the train would be able to console her.

Sobs Uncontrolled

Portsmouth, N. H., May 24 (AP).—Above the clicking of typewriters, the incessant ringing of telephones and the babble of voices in the press room of the Portsmouth Navy Yard today rose an uncontrolled sob, and tenderly a weeping woman was assisted to an adjoining room.

Mrs. Eugene A. Hoffman, of Brooklyn, Mich., had been informed that her husband was among those listed as dead aboard the Squalus.

At New York, Mrs. Rita Boulton collapsed twice—first when told that her husband, William, had been placed on the tentative list of the Squalus' dead, and again a few hours late, when the Navy announced he had been saved.

In Portsmouth and again hundreds of miles away—Chicago—the wife of one survivor and the father of another expressed the relief of those whose loved ones had been saved.

"I felt about 75 years old before I heard my husband's name and almost lost hope," said pretty red-haired Mrs. Carlton B. Powell, 23. "Now I feel my own age."

"Oh, that's fine!" exclaimed Fred A. Nichols, of Chicago, when he was informed his son, Lieut. J. G. Nichols, was safe. "But tell me have you news of the others? Let us hope all can be saved."

In the mill cities of Lowell and New Bedford, Mass., two mothers, worn with anxiety, had but a single thought when told their sons were safe.

"Thank God!" said Mrs. William F. Fitzpatrick, of Lowell, mother of William J. Fitzpatrick.

"Thank God!" exclaimed Mrs. Adelaide Madeiros, of New Bedford, mother of Leonard S. Madeiros.

Not only was this the first time that the diving bell had been used for a wholesale rescue of men trapped aboard a sunken craft, but also it marked the first saving of men from a submarine at such a depth as 240 feet.

The rescue bell first was dropped over the side of the submarine rescue ship Falcon at 10:40 a. m. (E. S. T.), little more than two hours after a diver first touched the Squalus.

Approximately two hours later the bell brought the first seven survivors to the surface.

The first man to breathe free air again after 29 hours of confinement was Lieut. J. C. Nichols.

A civilian Navy employe and five enlisted men stepped out of the rescue chamber behind him, were rushed into a decompression tank and then taken to a Portsmouth hospital.

Shout Greets Appearance

Just as the bell broke the surface the sun came through the clouds, allowing Lieut. Nichols to step through a hatch in the roof of the chamber into a sprin-like atmosphere.

Overhead circled airplanes, civilian and naval. Around the Falcon, which raises and lowers the bell on a huge steel cable, a dozen ships stirred the surface. Many were civilian craft, but nearby was the huge bulk of the cruiser Brooklyn, and almost alongside was a sister ship of the Squalus, the Sculpin. Nearby too were Navy tugs and Coast Guard vessels.

From the decks of the Falcon a shout broke from the rescue crew, and echoing shouts were heard from other vessels.

One More Found Alive

Lieut. Nichols brought word that 25 men were still safe and breathing below, but said 27 apparently had been trapped in the flooded after compartments.

"Little hope is held that they are alive," said an official Navy statement issued soon after.

Five hours later, however, a naval officer announced:

"There has been a mistake. We have found one more man alive."

Dive Takes Seven Minutes

He was William David Boulton, seaman, from Luton, Iowa, first listed among the probable dead, but brought to the surface on the second ascent of the diving bell. Thus the list of probable dead dropped from 27 to 26.

Frank P. Miller, a Portsmouth Navy Yard diver, made the first descent to the Squalus at 9:15 a. m. (E. S. T.), landing on the deck seven minutes later. He was down 88 minutes.

At 10:40 a. m. (E. S. T.) the rescue chamber was lowered, and at 12:18 p. m. the first ascent was started with seven survivors. It was 12:45 p. m., when Lieut. Nichols stepped into free air and sunshine.

Commander Still Below

Almost immediately the bell was lowered again, and around 4 p. m. it rose once more with nine additional survivors.

The Navy Yard here first announced that only eight men had been brought up, but after a check of its lists revised the figure upward by one.

But the men who worked tirelessly on the huge diving bell apparently gave no thought to lists and figures—except for the number still trapped below—for the rescue chamber was lowered again almost immediately.

Again, at approximately 7 p. m., the mercy "elevator" broke the surface, once more bringing nine survivors, leaving only eight more breathing men below.

Once more the diving bell plunged down, its operators working against the slowly deepening dusk toward the completion of the rescue task.

It was on the return from this trip that the lines fouled, adding for four hours the threat of a new tragedy.

Bell Carries Food

Coffee, soup and blankets were carried down in the rescue bell on its first trip yesterday, as one of the major complaints of the men below had been the cold. Even on the surface the water temperature was around 35 degrees.

The rescue chamber—a huge, nine-ton affair—contained a cylindrical chamber on a rubber suction gasket base, which fitted against a wide skirt on the submarine's rescue hatch. The gasket attached, the water between the bottom of the bell and the submarine hatch was expelled by pumps. Then the hatches of the bell and the submarine were opened to admit the trapped men.

Capable of withstanding terrific pressure, the bell contained a mixture of helium and oxygen to lighten the danger of the dreaded undersea workers' disease, the bends (a formation of air bubbles in the blood stream.)

Two Go on Stretchers

Those who watched the big mercy machine meet its acid test termed it an unqualified success.

While the bell rose and fell the first of the men whose lives it saved were brought ashore at the Navy Yard here.

Clad in dungarees and blankets and showing the strain of a horrible experience, the first 16 were brought ashore by the Coast Guard cutter Harriet Lane.

While a guard of Marines stood by, about 150 persons watched in silence as the men, their hair disheveled, stepped into waiting ambulances and were whisked away to Portsmouth Naval Hospital. Two of the men were carried on stretchers.

Women Greet Survivors

A woman, apparently the wife of one of the survivors, rushed up and embraced him, crying: "Oh, you poor kid."

Two other women broke through the crowd and kissed a haggard sailor, as tears streamed down their faces.

The first man to step ashore, assisted by naval officers, was Charles Yukas, of New Salem, Pa. He said he was feeling "O. K." Asked if it was cold down below, he replied: "Ya."

A little Filipino messboy wore a grim, dazed expression as he stepped into an ambulance.

As the Cruiser Brooklyn took up a position near the Salvage ship Falcon, where Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, without sleep since the accident occurred, directed operations, the members of the Falcon's crew lined the rail.

A Dramatic Moment

Nearby were the destroyer Semmes, Coast Guard craft, tugs and launches bearing newsmen—about two dozen ships in all. Above circled planes.

Suddenly excitement spread aboard the Brooklyn. Word had been received that the diving bell had contacted the Squalus. Undemonstrative officers smiled grimly. Minutes later they shook their heads and said "that's tough." The Falcon had wigwagged "twenty-seven casualties."

"Are they dead?" was the question on the lips of all. The question went unanswered, but fear remained.

Then the surface of the water rippled and the huge metal bell broke into the light.

So intent was the Navy on its task—"save all those still alive"—that the Brooklyn on its arrival omitted greeting Admiral Cole with a 13-gun salute. Instead, Capt. W. W. Smith, commander of the Brooklyn, lowered a launch and sped to the Falcon, offering Admiral Cole all the facilities aboard the Brooklyn.

Congress May Investigate

A Congressional probe into the causes of the Nation's fifth submarine disaster may follow the searching investigation which the Navy will make.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, predicted a Congressional investigation, declaring that the loss of life was so great "that nothing should be left undone to ascertain its true cause."

Meanwhile, Chairman Lesinski of the House Pensions Invalid Committee, said he would introduce a bill to grant war-time rate pensions for disability or death resulting to officers and men in submarines and aviation.

Survivor Tells of Squalus Tragedy

No one asked Bland if this action sealed the doom of those in the flooded quarters, but his interviewers felt that this must have been the case.

Following the slamming of this door other valves were closed to protect the dry, forward parts of the ship.

"We lost all power almost immediately and all communication with the aft part of the ship," Bland said.

Dressed in white pajamas with a blue bathrobe and blanket draped over his shoulders, Bland paid tribute to the conduct of the officers and men of the stricken ship. From the moment the trouble started until the rescue work began, there was no sign of panic, excitement, fear or despair.

"Throughout the long day of Tuesday, and Tuesday night, no one was excited," he said. "Everyone was living in hope that we would be found. We fired smoke bombs at intervals. We first heard the engines of our sister ship, the Sculpin, about 3 in the afternoon. We knew they were the Sculpin's because hers are the same type as ours. We knew we were found and there was nothing to worry about."

Bland was asked how the men were chosen for the trip to the surface when the rescue bell made contact?

"We sent up the weakest men in the first party," he said.

None questioned this method of determining those to be saved first, even though the air was getting bad in all of the compartments. Bland explained that the officers tried to conserve the oxygen and released as little as possible from the emergency tanks. This was a precaution against an indefinite imprisonment.

Asked how they spent their time, alone on the bottom of the ocean, in pitch black darkness, Bland said:

"We passed away the time discussing the means by which they might rescue us."

Bland indicated that he believed all the men in the flooded aft section of the boat were dead.

Never an Answer

"We tried for hours to attract the attention of those in the aft department by telephone. We never got an answer."

Bland, who was in the control room at the time of the accident, said two men in a forward compartment, and two amidships, continually beat signals with hammers on the plate all night Tuesday.

"Cold as it was," Bland said, "their tapping hardly ever ceased. We got very good results. Sometime Tuesday night we were told that the Falcon, a salvage ship, would arrive about 4:30 a. m. Wednesday morning. We all knew the Falcon had excellent equipment, and also knew it had wonderful divers working in conjunction with the equipment.

"I am not afraid to say that there wasn't one man at one time thinking they wouldn't get out. They knew they would be saved."

Bland told of chlorine gas during his last hour on the boat.

"The chlorine gas was in the forward battery room," Bland said. "We kept gas masks ready to put on in case they were needed."

Some one asked Bland if he were in a position to see the working of the induction valve, which is being blamed for the sinking of the submarine, and Bland said he was not.

The American Navy never had a finer tribute paid it than Bland's words when questioned as to the behavior of the officers and crew.

"I never saw men handle a situation any better," he said. "The captain was perfectly cool. He gave his orders calmly, and the orders were carried out perfectly by each and every man."

but not dark enough to use marine lights.

All Cold and Shivering

It took me five minutes to connect the downward cable from the diving bell to the hatch. Coffee, soup and blankets were taken down in the bell and given to the men aboard the submerged vessel.

Seven men came up in the first trip. They were all cold and shivering. Most of them could not speak for several minutes. A man named Prebble seemed to be in the worst shape, but he proved to be all right after we warmed him up. None of the men that I saw appeared physically injured, but all were extremely cold.

Other divers went down later and closed the induction valve which caused the accident.

Ben Grey Tells Of Talks With 2 New Dealers

Utility Agent Says He Met McNinch 'Through White House'

By the Associated Press.

Ben Grey, public relations expert who recently figured as a "mystery man" in the SEC's investigation of Associated Gas & Electric Co., told yesterday of talking with two Administration officials about how much money the utility concern would be willing to spend on new construction.

Grey said the two were Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Communications Commission and former chief of the Power Commission, and Ben Cohen, Government attorney. He said his appointment with McNinch had been made for him "through the White House."

Talks Before Examiner

Grey testified at a hearing before Trial Examiner William Swift of the Securities Commission. His name first entered the inquiry some weeks ago when it was brought out that Associated Gas & Electric had paid him $55,000 in 1937 for services which were at that time undesignated.

Grey said he spent an hour with McNinch and told him how much money Associated Gas would be willing to spend in new construction if jeopardy tax liens against the system could be temporarily lifted so that the company could refund obligations.

The witness said that some of these conversations with McNinch were held after he was no longer on the Associated Gas pay roll.

$150,000,000 to Spend

He testified the company would be willing to spend about $150,000,000 over a period of years if the tax liens could be lifted temporarily.

Grey said he was denied an interview with Secretary Morgenthau but had talked with Undersecretary John W. Hanes about getting the tax lien lifted temporarily.

In his conversation with Ben Cohen, one of the New Deal's inner circle lawyers, Grey said he had discussed new construction expenditures.

rather than retreat to another compartment, officers declare. Had they done so, it was said, they could have shut the water-tight doors, and have been safe in the after torpedo room.

"Instead of saving themselves, they chose to try to close the valves against the terrific pressure of the water, and save the ship," a ranking submarine officer concluded, "and their shipmates in the other after compartments refused to shut them in when the water from the engine rooms poured into the other chambers."

Only a spin of the hand is required to close and seal the water-tight doors between compartments, it was stated. Other members of the crew in the after part of the ship must have deliberately delayed shutting off the engine rooms until it was too late, officers say.

"Lungs" at Both Ends

The doors of the control room must have been closed by those in the forward part of the ship, it was said. But in this connection it was stated that those forward, the survivors, would expect the engine-room crew to move aft rather than to the fore of the boat, for the escape hatches and "lungs" are at both ends of the vessel.

Whatever may be determined as to the cause of disaster—mechanical defect or failure to give or to carry out a command in time—officers were convinced that the conduct of the crew when the trouble began will later be shown to have been in the best traditions of the sea.

Seven Firemen Trapped, Burned, Two Badly, By Blast of Flame in Two-Alarm Blaze

Union Trust Co. Conflagration Quelled By Chopping Up Walk

Seven Washington firemen were trapped and burned, two of them severely, in a blast of flame while fighting a two-alarm blaze at the Union Trust Co., Fifteenth and H streets northwest, early yesterday. Rescued by other firemen, the seven were reported recovering last night.

The blaze, which broke out shortly after 4 a. m. in a storage room under the Fifteenth street sidewalk, was discovered by Newell Davis, Kensington, Md., watchman. He called firemen and warned charwomen to leave.

With only one entrance available to the storage place, the first group of firemen stepped into an inferno. As they began to pour water on the flames an explosion or a sudden draught of air blasted the flames, engulfing them. They were taken out by fellow firemen and rushed to Emergency Hospital.

Three in Hospital

Sergt. William J. Bunton, 45, of 1625 K street northwest, and Privates Earl Nagley, 41, of Arlington, Va., and Stewart Ritnour, 33, of 3181 Westover drive southeast, suffered severe burns on their faces and hands and were admitted to the hospital. All are attached to No. 1 Engine Company.

The others were given first aid and allowed to leave the hospital. They were Capts. Joseph Mayhew, 52, of 1811 Kearney street northeast, and Millard Sutton, 45, of 3014 Twenty-sixth street northeast; Private Raymond H. Hooper, 38, of 499 I street northwest, and Sergt. Charles E. MacFarland, 44, of 5207 Sherrier place northeast.

After the second alarm additional men chopped a hole through the sidewalk and the flames were extinguished by high-pressure hoses.

Several Treated on Spot

Fire Chief Stephen Porter responded on the second alarm. When he arrived, flames were roaring from the manhole and a large crowd had collected. He led a squad into the cellar where the others had been injured.

Several firemen were given first aid for minor burns and smoke on the scene by internes from George Washington Hospital.

It was reported that the store room was filled with paints, turpentine and other substances. The fire marshal's office is conducting an investigation into the cause of the fire.

Everything in the room was destroyed, but the damage was said to be less than $500.

Cattle-Rustling Bill Vetoed As U. S. Petty Larceny Policing

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt, vetoing a Federal cattle-raising bill, indicated yesterday the limit to which he thought the Government should go in extending its police powers.

With his hearty approval, he said in a veto message to the Senate, Congress had enacted legislation taking jurisdiction over such major offenses as kidnaping and bank holdups and thefts involving property valued at $5,000 or more.

"This (cattle theft) bill, however, extends this extension of jurisdiction to bring within its terms numerous offenses of the petty larceny type," he said.

"I am compelled, therefore, to ask the question, Why does the Federal Government extend its jurisdiction over any stolen cattle, hogs, sheep, horse, mule or the carcass or hide of any such animal, and, at the same time, leave out all others forms of stolen property of comparatively low value?

"Why not by the same theory extend Federal jurisdiction to the theft of all other kinds of personal property—property of a value which makes the theft a misdemeanor rather than a crime?"

The vetoed bill would make it a Federal offense knowingly to transport in interstate or foreign commerce or to receive any stolen cattle or other livestock or the carcass, hide or any part of a stolen animal.

Author Will Speak On War Referendum

Randolph Leigh, author of "Conscript Europe," will discuss the proposed war referendum at 8:30 tomorrow night at the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida avenue northwest. The meeting is sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Edna St. Vincent Millay, one of the major contemporary poets, has a new book entitled "Huntsman, What Quarry?" Gathered together in this slim volume, which matches in format her other works, is a new group of lyrical poems—poems concerned not only with the traditional subjects of love and death, but treating also many other themes. In this latest collection the young poet evinces the lyric perfection and poetic magic characteristic of her earlier works $2

Mr. Coburn Goes to Work By Way of Taking a Rest

Noted Actor Deserts Films to Launch Festival; The Capitol Still Needs Dancing Girls; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

SOME ARTISTS have peculiar conceptions of what constitutes relaxation. Take the case of that eminent character actor, Charles Coburn, for example.

Our old friend Beauvais Fox, one of the theater's more admirable stentors, airmails a bulletin from Hollywood to the effect that Mr. Coburn will say au revoir to the West Coast this week-end and depart for the East, calling it six and a Hollywood season with "Made for Each Other," "Idiot's Delight," "The Story of Alaxander Graham Bell," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Little Mother" and "Memory of Love." To the best of my memory, Washington has seen Mr. Coburn in only three of the six films to which he has devoted his activities during his current season in the studios.

= BELL

But that is aside from the point that Mr. Coburn's idea of a vacation is to plunge at once into the job of putting on the Mohawk Drama Festival, the annual summer event at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y. The festival this year will be dedicated to seven plays, spanning the period from July 11 to August 26. Mr. Coburn will appear in several of the productions by way of refreshment before returning to the celluloids next fall. Also proselyted from the cinema for the Mohawk summer season will be Thomas Mitchell, actor-writer-director, who did such distinguished work in both Samuel Goldwyn's "Hurricane" and, more recently, Walter Wanger's "Stagecoach."

There are many noted names in the theater associated with the Mohawk Festival, among them Walter Hampden, Cornelia Otis Skinner and Eugenie Leontovich, according to present commitments. This festival, by the way, was founded by Mr. and Mrs. Coburn in 1935 and since that time has come to be known as one of the foremost summer theater projects in the United States.

With an annual program of great plays, presented by a company of well-known actors; with a curriculum of study, a fine theater library, public lectures by authorities on the drama, exhibits, recitals in music and the dance and a meeting place in an atmosphere of dignity and distinction for those with common interests in the drama, the Mohawk Drama Festival may be said to be America's athenaeum of the theater.

I wish it were in Washington—or no farther away than Bethesda or Alexandria, at worst. But there it is, 'way up in Schenectady.

Gene Ford, production manager for Loew's Capital Theater, is still in the market for 12 girls to take part in the "Royal Welcome" revue, to be staged at the Capitol the week of June 9. Applications are still being accepted for a place in the "background" of this elaborate revue that is being planned for the week of the visit of British royalty to the National Capital. Don't try to tell me there aren't 12 girls in town who can dance and would like to get a chance to prove it on the stage! But where are they? It is Mr. Ford, rather than this column, who wants to know.

These vaudevillians certainly do get about. No telling from what distant spot Jack Powell, our favorite "drummer boy"; Eddie Peabody, Sibyl Bowan or any of the rest of them are apt to drop you—or me—cards. And now comes the case of Buster Shaver and Olive opening on the Earle stage tomorrow. You may recall that a slightly undraped pose of the diminutive Olive appeared on this page a few days ago. That was all Melvin D. Hildreth, who usually confines himself to the circus, needed as a reminder.

Mr. Hildreth recalls that when he was in Europe last year, Buster Shaver and Olive were playing in Hitler's favorite theater in Munich in a revue called "Tropical Express"—or so my Mr. Gerald G. Gross, my erstwhile pinch-hitter, relays to me, he having held converse with Barrister Hildreth since I have.

This becomes the more interesting because the picture in conjunction with which Buster Shaver and Olive will be making their stage appearance will be "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," which is not too cordial in its attitude toward the Hitler regime. Wonder what they will think of it?

I wonder, too, how many of the general public try to look "behind the screen" and determine just how all of the scenes they see depicted on the silver sheet were filmed? There has to be a camera somewhere. This is apropos of the fact that stunt fliers in Hollywood are talking about one of the greatest feats of cameraman-flying ever accomplished. It was in the making of "Only Angels Have Wings," a picture that will be coming along soon to the Earle. Frank Clarke, veteran picture stunt pilot, was chosen by Director Howard Hawks to get background pictures for process closeups of the terrific stunts performed in the air by Paul Mantz and other noted aviators. To get the shots, Clarke had to grind his camera while doing the identical stunts that were being performed by his intrepid photographic subjects. A nice trick, even if you can't do it. Try it some time with your Leica!

There will be something on this page eventually concerning last night's invitational preview of the Warner Brothers' production of "Juarez," held in the auditorium of the Interior Department, with Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests, as joint host. As this is written, the picture has not as yet been unspooled. By the time this gets into print, it will have been. So, just as a matter of friendly warning, more of this later.

Learn-One-Thing-Each-Day Note

"Juarez," in the pure Castilian, is pronounced "Juarez."

Something Goes On in the Hospital

LORAINE DAY, LIONEL BARRYMORE, cast in the foremost roles in support of Lew Ayres in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Calling Dr. Kildare," a sequel to "Young Dr. Kildare." This new release in the medico-mystery series will open as chief screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 24.

SHORTLY AFTER the indictment of Martin T. Manton, senior judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, he called all the other Federal judges of the district and invited them to his office . . . There he addressed them and told them he felt sure that none of them could believe the charges . . . Manton added a note about his integrity and long years on the bench . . . But an embarrassing silence met his plea. Not one of his judicial colleagues offered any comment . . . They waited until he had finished, turned on their heels—and walked out.

BEFORE HIS resignation, Manton was head of the Federal Luncheon Club on the twenty-fourth floor of the Federal Building. Membership is limited to the judiciary and members of the United States Attorney's staff . . . The club's walls are adorned with portraits of New York's most distinguished jurists, living and dead. Over the head of the table, at which Manton was accustomed to sit, he placed his own portrait—and it still hangs there . . . It will be removed if Manton is convicted.

PRICE SERGE Obolensky, who fled from his home during the Russian revolution and whose life was saved when he hid in his secretary's room while he was being hunted, visited the Soviet pavilion at the fair Saturday. Obolensky went incognito, accompanied by Count Vava Adlerberg, another emigre . . . Fifteen of the New Deal's top men, including Hopkins, Corcoran, Ickes, Murphy, Henderson and Eccles, helped the President prepare the speech he delivered the other night . . . Oscar Levant will play George Gershwin's "Concerto" and "Rhapsody in Blue" for the Gershwin Memorial Concert at Lewisohn Stadium July 10 . . . Rhea Whiteley, Martin Dies' ace counsel, will avail himself of the chance to prove a link between Fritz Kuhn and Gen. Moseley.

SATURDAY NIGHT a number of detectives pretended to be guests at the Rainbow Room and from vantage points scrutinized the actions of every man who entered the room alone . . . The detectives were there, they believed, to stop a suicide . . . Earlir in the week the Rainbow Room's manager had received a letter from a man who explained that he was elderly, that he had spent so many pleasant hours at the Rainbow Room and that he, therefore, had decided to end his life there by leaping through a window . . . The detectives waited—but nothing happened.

WHEN "The Mad Dog of Europe" is screened here, one scene will show Goering, Goebbels and Ernest Roehm fleeing from the Reichstag after the fire. The Hays office already has approved the scene . . . Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt suggested to Washington's lady-reporters, who were slighted by not being invited to the British Embassy reception for Their Majesties, that they don't punish the King and Queen because of this "misunderstanding" . . . Three Washington columnists were invited to the official reception—but they're not telling their colleagues about it, for fear of being ridiculed.

FREDERICK LONSDALE, the British playwright, still vows to write a play for Tallulah Bankhead . . . Lonsdale once had outlined a plot for Tallulah, but then abandoned it . . . The play concerned a young lady, stranded on a desert island with four men—an Englishman, a German, a Jew and an Irishman . . . Each tried to win the lady's affections, and the Irishman triumphed . . . "Why the Irishman?" Tallulah was asked . . . "Because," she explained, "then nobody can complain."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Holywood, May 24.—Don't know when I've heard a story packed with more daring drama than "Prince of Imposters," which Jack Warner is readying in a hurry to star Edward G. Robinson. This is the history of James Addison Reavis, the St. Louis streetcar conductor of the Civil War period who perpetrated the greatest fraud on the United States Government ever conceived by a single individual. Starting as a mild-mannered little man, he suddenly was afflicted with delusions of grandeur. Not only did he succeed in fooling his neighbors—but nations were taken in by his claims.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Reavis went to Spain, formed land grants, returned to this country and claimed 12,500,000 acres of the Southwest. By this time he was posing as a baron and Uncle Sam paid him levies for years. But he overstepped himself when he went to Washington to forge papers. The Government took him into custody in 1895 and his trial was the sensation of the day. What a role for Robinson—and playing opposite him, as Reavis' half-caste wife, will be Brenda Marshall, the new glamour girl at Burbank. Anatole Litvak will direct.

Mary Pickford's jaunt to London with Buddy Rogers is more than a rest and a vacation. On the best authority, I hear that Mary is heartily sick of being the wife of a traveling band leader and that the trip to London is intended to get Buddy's movie career rolling again. His orchestra is completely disbanded now and Rogers is free to consider picture offers for the first time in years. If the plan goes through of getting him a job in an important British production, Buddy, who is far more handsome now with his graying hair than he ever was as a juvenile, will be starred by his wife, when she resumes production here in Hollywood again.

English movie managers have put in a bid for Gene Autry to make a six-week personal appearance tour over there and Republic doesn't see why Gene shouldn't let them look at a real cowboy. But before Gene leaves on his private "good will" tour, he first makes "In Old Monterey" on the home lot. The lid is off for this one—in other words they aren't counting the sheckels in making a special of this yarn, which deals with Government condemnation of ranching lands in Californita for army purposes. Rallied around Autry will be Smiley Burnette and June Story, and Joe Kane will direct.

And still these glamour girls keep arriving. Irine (correct) Baranova, star of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, is on the RKO lot, testing for Esmeralda in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and if you can believe what they tell you, she can act like Bette Davis, out-glamour Hedy LaMarr, wear clothes like Norma Shearer and dance like Pavlowa. However, even if they sign here, there's no danger she'll get their combined salaries for her stint in the role created in the original version by Patsy Ruth Miller.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Stan Laurel, who just shed his Russian bride, Illeana, now has a crush on a French gal named Elsie Ardell; the formal invitations are out for Patricia Ziegfeld's wedding to William Robert Stephenson, June 10.; the name of Jack Holt's mysterious heartbeat is Marguerite MacDonlad; Doris Carson and Jeffrey Lynn aren't minding the warm weather, because they've got their busted romance to keep them cool; Miriam Hopkins and Anatole Litvak train out Saturday to see the fair in New York; Ruby Keeler, walking on air since she won the first flight of the femme golf championship at Hillcrest today; Eddie Albert buying Jane Bryan's dinner at the House of Murphy; Alice Fay, worn out, testing for 36 changes of wardrobe for "Falling Stars."

That's all for today.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 24.—Last year when the Temples took that famous jaunt East, they had a studio representative with them. But they're handling the Honolulu trip alone. So, the day they arrived, Mrs. Temple gave out that Shirley smoked a pipe with some Indians. Now all the little girls on the island are driving their parents nuts, because if Shirley smokes, why shouldn't they?

HOPPER

The next day Shirley was bitten by a dog. Her mother said it was a mild nip and didn't prevent her from going to Waikiki beach and spending a pleasant evening. There, evenings begin at 10:00 p. m.—creating another problem for parents. Players may not like it, but they learn it's always wise to have a studio contract man along in case of mistakes.

Bob Taylor found that out on his first trip East, and even Norma Shearer, wise as she is, would have been spared many headaches, if she'd taken one of the boys from here when she went back for "Marie Antoinette" opening.

When I asked Myrna Loy how she liked playing Lady Esketh she said: "Oh, I love it. But wait 'till you see Ty Power's performance. He's wonderful."

Ona Munson, who wears nothing but red dresses as Belle Watling, has had "Gone" autographed by every member of the cast in scarlet ink!

Town prety dull now that Rudy Vallee and Bee Lillie have left. Night before Rudy went he gave the customers an hour's song fest at the Tropics. Then he opened bubble water for all the cuties in the place!

Alice Eden has been invited to speak to her old school, Cumnock, the same night they're previewing her first picture in Des Moines, Iowa.

Poor Isa Miranda. Since she's been with us she has had English teachers, dramatic lessons, her hair's been done over so many times it's a wonder she has any left. And now LeRoy Prinz is teaching her how to walk.

When a studio asked Carole Lombard if she'd do one of their lesser B pictures, she said, "Sure, for half a million, 'cause I could retire on that."

His many friends will be delighted to know that Johnny Van Druten, after the fourth operation on his arm, returns within the month, entirely well.

Sir Cecil Hardwicke says he now knows what goes on in a flagpole sitter's mind—nothing! He's been up a tree in "On Borrowed Time" for six solid weeks, just sittin'.

Frank Morgan preparing for that rainy day by opening his own market in Beverly with a whole section given over to angostura bitters, which he claims are good for many things besides cocktails.

'Nazi Spy' and 'Kildare' Are Incoming Films

New Theater Week Lists Many Holdovers; Other Local Amusements

Earle

"CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY." The widely-publicized film dealing with German espionage in this country arrives, with Edward G. Robinson, Paul Lukas, Francis Lederer and Lya Lys in the leading roles. Leon G. Turrou, celebrated F. B. I. sleuth, acted as technical adviser on the production, inspired by revelations of the recent espionage trials in New York, Los Angeles and the Panama Canal Zone. "Salute to Summer" is the stage revue, featuring Buster Shaver, with diminutive Olive and George. Bert Granoff, an Earle favorite of long-standing, returns to take another leading part in the stage proceedings, which includes turns by the Ghezzis, in "Striking a Balance;" Sam Barton's "Cycle of Mirth;" Melba, "Goddess in Blue;" and the 16 Earle Roxyettes in several of their unique routines. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN." Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell and Mischa Auer fight it out for a second week with "Sandy," the ten-month old baby, whose unintelligible, but scene-stealing chatter has gone a long way in the success of this light-hearted comedy. Bing has four new songs and Miss Blondell and Auer enhance their reputations as comedians. Irene Hervey, C. Aubrey Smith and Jerome Cowan also are in the cast and "The March of Time" issue on the southland, "Dixie," is heldover.

Palace

"THE HARDY'S RIDE HIGH." The sixth in the Hardy family series is a holdover with Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, and Sara Haden as the Carvel group, which falls heir to two million dollars. The Judge's problem turns on the susepicion that he is not the rightful heir. A trip to Detroit by air, new clothes for the girls and a night club visit by Mickey are some of the highlights. Also on the Palace screen, is "Crime Does Not Pay" release, "While America Sleeps."

Metropolitan

"UNION PACIFIC." Cecil B. De Mille's epic film of the struggle to build the great Union Pacific Railroad continues, with Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck in the leading roles. McCrea is the Government trouble-shooter assigned to keep order along the right of way. Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman and Brian Donlevy are others in the large cast.

Columbia

"THE STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL." The moving story of the struggle of the unknown teacher of the deaf and dumb, who had the idea that he could revolutionize sound, reopens downtown, after a week at the Palace. Don Ameche, Loretta Young and Henry Fonda head the players, with Ameche as Bell, Miss Young as the deaf Mabel Hubbard, whose courage inspired him, and Fonda as Tom Watson, Bell's assistant. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"SNOW FALLS." Photographed in the Tyrolean Alps, the newsreel's travelogue this week concerns skiing. Other shorts are "Swans—Their Life and Habits," "Pilot Boat," and Walt Disney's "Ugly Duckling." The body of the bill is made up of 35 minutes of newsreels subjects selected from all of the latest editions. Opens tomorrow morning.

Swing orchestra is in its final week at the Spanish Garden ballroom Next Monday night, Lawrence Welk and his "Champagne Music" arrive to play for dancing, featuring the singing of Mildred Stanley and Walter Bloom.

Mount Vernon

"DARK RAPTURE." The Armand Denis-Leila Roosevelt travel film of the Belgian Congo is the attraction at the open-air drive-in theater, 3 miles below Alexandria on the Richmond highway. "Dark Rapture" opens this evening and will run through Saturday.

Civic Theater

"ARMS AND THE MAN." George Bernard Shaw's sharp comedy on the barbarisms of civilization is the final production of the season by the Washington Civic Theater. F. Cowles Strickland's cast includes Lansing Hall, Morris Arkin, Murray Sheehan, Norman Rose, Doris Cooper, Yvonne Kushner, Robert Wickes and Forney Rankin. Continues through this Saturday evening at the Wardman Park Theater.

Wilson Line

THE CITY OF WASHINGTON, the Wilson Line's steamer, makes two trips daily to Mount Vernon, at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. Each evening the ship makes a three-hour "Moonlight Cruise," leaving its Seventh street wharf at 8:30. There are refreshments and deck attractions, as well as dancing every night to McWilliams' Orchestra.

Win Awards at Hood College Sports Day

Sports day honors at Hood College, Frederick, Md., went to Miss Ann Coulter (right), who was awarded the white blazer, and to Miss Dorothy Shelmire (left), who won the riding cup in the annual horse show. The white blazer, one of the highest awards in the college, is given to a girl in the incoming senior class who has maintained a high academic standing, who has shown a spirit of good sportsmanship and an all-around college interest. Miss Shelmire, mounted on Highball, won the cup for the best form riding, as well as several ribbons in other horse show events

Little

Again that vastly popular film, "Moonlight Sonata," appears. The Paderewski picture opened at the Little Theater yesterday morning on the same bill with an interesting documentary short, "North Sea." The brilliance of the Polish pianist and the fury of the British waters combine to make a memorable bill.

As everyone must know by now, the Paderewski film's most unique attraction is a million dollar view of the great pianist as he plays four numbers, the only view Washington will have of him during the Nation-wide tour he is currently completing. Chopin's "Polonaise in A Flat Major," "Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," his own "Minuet in G" and the Beethoven composition of the title are his selections.

Director Lothar Mendes focused his camera at all angles close to the distinguished artist and has caught, in lasting and all-revealing celluloid, the master's technique.

While the story is a simple one of how the pianist brought two lovers together in an episode of his career, it boasts two players of the first rank. Marie Tempest, the celebrated English star, has the role of a charming lady who succeeds in unmasking a scheming imposter and plays the part with genuine grace. Charles Farrell, well-known on the American screen, has another role in this British-made film.

"North Sea" concerns a Scottish trawler, caught in a heavy sea between the Orkney Islands and Fair Isle, point half-way between Orkney and Shetland. Authenticity is the keynote of this Lenauer importation, for the plan of the film had been to merely describe the methods of the trawlers, but instead, the little steamer, with cameraman aboard, had run into a trip more exciting than most. Radio science brings much interest to this film, strangely pointing up the hazards those fishermen of the past underwent on their trips to the northern Herringopolis.

Rezoning Plea Denied in Alexandria

Council Refuses to Permit Store Next To Christ Church

The Washington Post Bureau,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 3787
Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

At a meeting whose docket was crowded with 33 items and in which discussion was spirited, the city council denied a rezoning petition, allowed an $1,820 claim for taxes and interest on a North Fairfax street site and transacted several lesser items of business.

The council denied the petition of Arthur Herbert asking the rezoning of 116 North Washington street from "A" residential to "D" commercial. Speaking in behalf of the proposal, Attorney Maurice D. Rosenberg, said a large mercantile firm planned to buy the property from Herbert. It also intended to acquire, he said, the adjoining house at 114 North Washington street recently bought by Dr. C. L. Fifer from Mrs. William A. Smoot.

These two brick dwellings would make way for a store building, of Georgian architecture, and also garage building in the alley in the rear of them, owned by Lipps Brothers and A. L. Ladd.

Rosenberg stated Dr. Fifer had purchased the building at 114 North Washington street with the intention of placing an office on the first floor and apartments above, and had been induced to give an option for the Sears-Roebuck proposition, the sale of both properties involving approximately $50,000.

The house at 116 North Washington street adjoins the yard of historic Christ Episcopal Church, and Joseph S. Blackwell, senior warden of the vestry of the church, spoke against allowing a store there, while the Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, which adjoins the 116 house, spoke in favor of the store.

Chauncy Brothers' claim for $1,820 for taxes and interest on the original investment for 11 years on a half-square of ground in North Fairfax street was allowed and placed on the first reading. Joseph Chauncey had appeared at a previous meeting of council asking relief from the city taking possession for the past 11 years of this land, and also charging taxes for same.

City Manager Carl L. Budwesky stated that the grant allowed by the PWA for improvements to the city jail and city hall is being held up, as the PWA authorities had sent an order for additional improvements at the jail before paying this grant.

Mayor Richard L. Ruffner asked if the original grant was not allowed after the PWA had been given plans and specifications for the improvements and council instructed the city manager to reply that the city is not now in a position to assume this additional expense, and to request the original agreement be kept by PWA.

The new city building code was adopted by the council, and copies will be printed at once to be available to contractors and builders.

Confederate Day Memoralized

Judge Ewin L. Davis spoke of the valor and fortitude of the men who served the Confederacy in a speech last night at annual Confederate Memorial Day exercises in Lee Camp Hall.

R. Samuel Luckett, commander of Robert E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, and Mrs. Margaret F. Bailey, president of the Mary Custis Lee Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, were in charge of the exercises. The invocation and benediction were by the Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, and chaplain of both Alexandria Post No. 24, American Legion, and Russell Mitchell Post No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Music was by a quartet composed of Mrs. W. Cameron Roberts, Mrs. Joseph Hoeft, Aubrey S. Goodrich and Stephen H. Field, with Miss Margaret Alexander as accompanist.

Following the exercises in the hall, the assemblage marched to the Confederate Monument, at the intersection of Prince and Washington streets, the spot from which the soldiers from this city marched on May 24, 1861, to join the Army of Northern Virginia; thence to the mound in Christ Church yard, where flowers were placed and taps sounded.

The Daughters of the Confederacy, Sons of Veterans and other patriotic organizations were in the line of march, headed by the Citizens' Band. The George Washington High School Band headed the cadet corps of both boys and girls from the school, also Boy Scouts and the Alexandria Light Infantry.

League of Municipalities Meets

The regional meeting of the League of Virginia Municipalities held yesterday in the Anchorage, 603 Queen street, was attended by delegates from 24 cities and towns in the region served by this group, and Seth Burnley, city manager of Charlottesville, also president of the State league, was the principal speaker.

The meeting opened at 3 p. m. with a welcome by Mayor Richard L. Ruffner, of Alexandria, followed by business talks during the afternoon, dinner at 6 p. m., and round-table discussion of general municipal problems.

Frank C. Hanrahan, county manager of Arlington, was the toastmaster at the dinner. Mayor Harry P. Davis, of Manassas, led the round-table discussion.

The two remaining regional meeting of the season will be held the coming week in Waynesboro and Strasburg.

Postmaster Accused of Offer to Deliver Milk Inquiry Votes to Producers for $1,000

not sell his services to Embassy-Fairfax, regardless of what the association did.

Faulkner, a slender, red-faced man, insisted under the questioning by Burroughs that he had only promised to try to convince Randolph and other subcommittee members of the "rightness" of the Maryland-Virginia association's position in the milk row.

He confessed that he knew no other committee members except Randolph, who recommended him for the Martinsburg, postmastership, and became confused when called upon to explain how he expected to influence their voting.

Denies Statements

Time and again he denied the statements attributed to him by Burroughs, who was reading from the police transcript of conversations between Faulkner and officials of the Maryland-Virginia association.

Faulkner likewise denied making frequent telephone calls to Miss Castleman and obtaining confidential documents concerning the milk investigation from her.

Derrick testified that Faulkner claimed he could control the milk inquiry so that the hearings would be largely limited to testimony concerning "bootleg" operations if the association retained him. The postmaster-lawyer suggested, however, that he not be counsel of record as his influence would be less effective, Derrick said.

When the negotiations opened, Derrick said, Faulkner said that if his partner, Moler, accepted a fee from the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy that the sub-committee's proceedings would be changed so that only testimony as to monopoly control and the need for opening the Washington market to Western cream would be heard.

Offer Rejected

Derrick said he consulted several directors and his attorney, John S. Barbour, before finally rejecting the alleged offer. Meanwhile, Chairman Bates and Burroughs were advised of the alleged proposal and the police were instructed to listen in on conversations.

As proof of his ability to obtain advance information, Faulkner stated on one occasion that he had a copy of a statement made by Derrick to Burroughs in private, Derrick said. The statement was made one morning and Faulkner claimed to have it that night.

Faulkner also claimed, according to Derrick, to have the details of secret testimony given by a former Embassy-Fairfax employe a few hours after it was received.

Frequently Faulkner warned Derrick that unless he was employed that the Maryland-Virginia association would lose in the milk row and the sub-committee would vote to open the Washington milk market to Western producers, Derrick testified.

Predicted Defeat

"Faulkner pointed out that we were going to be whipped," Derrick said, "and that we didn't have a Chinaman's chance unless we employed him."

Faulkner forecast the filling of five Democratic vacancies on the committee, Derrick said, and boasted that Randolph would select them.

"He said Bates was against us," said Derrick, "but that Randolph was neutral but could be swayed either way. He also said he could control the votes of other members of the sub-committee."

Faulkner predicted that the full House District Committee would be split, 10-10, Derrick said, and that Chairman Randolph would cast the deciding vote. He also said the sub-committee report would be forced out by June 1.

"Was my name mentioned in these conferences?" interrupted Randolph. "Was it said I had any knowledge of what was going on?"

Randolph Issues Denial

"Yes," said Derrick. "Faulkner spoke of having lunch and dinner with you and said he had discussed the matter in detail."

"I deny that, absolutely," retorted Randolph.

When Faulkner nervously took the stand he denied that he had promised to deliver his vote but admitted that he hoped to influence his decision.

"I said Mr. Randolph had an independent mind," Faulkner said, "and the only chance was to convince him by proper evidence."

He denied that he had at any time conferred with Randolph regarding the Maryland-Virginia negotiations.

"Did you at any time think of the possible embarrassment you might cause me and the Postoffice Department?" Randolph asked.

When Faulkner stated that he saw no objection to his lobbying so long as no attempt was made to bribe a member of Congress, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal asked:

"Did you take on lobbying as a sideline?"

In Hurry to go Home

Faulkner insisted, had he been hired, he would have had Moler do most of the work because of his postmastership. When the sub-committee talked of recalling him to the stand at a latter date, he pleaded that he must hurry back to Martinsburg to look after the postoffice.

Earlier in the day Derrick, under examination by Burroughs and his own attorney, related the association's detective activities in tracing "bootleg" operations over a period of several years.

Derrick said that $46,781 had been spent up to March of this year in this activity.

He showed by charts how the purchases of milk by the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy from the association had dwindled over the last several years until it ceased altogether while the number of delivery trucks used by the dairy increased.

He asserted that James F. Ward, president of the dairy, on one occasion admitted importing unlicensed cream and agreed to stop the practice.

Western cream imported by the association for ice cream manufacturing, Derrick said, was marked with a cheese coloring, sold to a broker, and later was returned to the association by the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy.

When the Health Department kept a 24-hour watch on the dairy, he testified, the Embassy-Fairfax was forced to buy association milk through the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy.

Derrick estimated that farmers in the Washington milkshed have been losing $1,000 a day due to "bootleg" operations. This estimate, he explained, was based on the difference between the basic and surplus price of milk which farmers had to absorb due to the loss of the market.

The hearing was recessed until Friday, when Derrick will be cross-examined by Stefton Darr, counsel for Embassy-Fairfax.

Inquiry Criticized

One faction of the House sub-committee on public health last night criticized the conduct of the District milk inquiry by the other while contnung hearngs on the Schule bll to open the Washington market to milk and cream from outside the local milkshed.

Following a day of testimony by Maryland and Virginia dairy farmers, all of whom opposed the measure, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, held a night session. The only witness who appeared, however, was Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, who has sponsored a similar bill.

"Don't you think the milk investigation has developed into a persecution of a single dairy?" Schulte asked Bolles.

Reprisal Feared

Schulte stated that a distributor had told him that he would be willing to sell milk at 12 cents a quart were it not that he feared that his producers would be stopped from furnishing milk to his dairy. He did not identify the dairy.

Bolles compared the recent Chicago dairy monopolistic exposure with Washington.

The consensus of the producers who testified during the day was that the Schulte bill would work to their economic disadvantage and might imperil the health of Washington consumers.

'Treated Mean,' Boy Hacks Sister, Parents to Death

Beaver, Pa., May 24 (AP).—A middle-aged couple and their pretty, red-headed daughter were shot and hacked to death today while they slept, and several hours later Coroner H. C. McCarter announced the couple's 17-year-old son had admitted the slayings.

The bodies of Forest Cooke, 45, his wife, Cora, 45, and their daughter, Eleanor, 25, were found in an attic bedroom of their rambling country home.

Their faces had been smashed with the blunt side of an ax and the mother and daughter had been shot with a shotgun. McCarter said the son, Paul Cooke, wept as he was taken into the room and cried out:

"I did it. They treated me mean."

McCarter said murder charges would be filed.

Francis E. Grimes Dies

Francis Edward Grimes, 40, died on Tuesday night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Norton Crump, 239 Braddock road, after a long illness. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Grimes; two brothers, Joseph M. and Charles A. Grimes, of Alexandria, and three sisters, Mrs. Crump, of this city; Mrs. Eva Gill and Mrs. Mamie Tolson, of Washington.

The funeral will be held at 9:30 a. m. Saturday from St. Mary's Catholic Church, and burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Missing Boy, 7, Found Safe in Prince Georges

Point Branch Dragged While He Slept Under Porch Near Home

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST,
821 Rheems Ave., Hyattsville, Md.
Telephone GReenwood 3589.

Donnie Lockhart, seven, was safe at his home in Capitol Heights last night after being found asleep under the front porch of a vacant house while police and firemen dragged Point branch at College Park for his body.

Donnie failed to return home Tuesday night after attending the Prince Georges County elementary school athletic meet at College Park. Discovery of a bundle of boy's clothing beside the branch, resulted in a call to police and volunteer firemen, who dragged the stream for several hours early yesterday.

Later Charles Kamm, 14, schoolboy patrolman, discovered the missing child under the porch of the house near his home. The boy explained he was afraid to go home after staying out late and fell asleep under the porch.

Democratic Women Luncheon

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, and a host of prominent Democratic leaders and officials from Prince Georges County will attend the annual luncheon meeting of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Maryland today at the Congressional Country Club.

The Prince Georges group will include Mrs. Frances McFadden, of Mount Rainier, State chairman of the organization, who will preside; Circuit Court Judge Joseph C. Mattingly and Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, both of Oxon Hill, members of the county board of commissioners and legislative delegation.

Prominent State leaders, including Gov. O'Conor, Mayor Jackson of Baltimore, and United States Senator Radcliffe also will attend.

Inquest in Baby's Death Deferred

Colmar Manor.—An inquest scheduled to have been held here last night in the death of 2-month-old Ellen MacCrea in a house fire May 14, was postponed until Monday night by Justice of the Peace Henry H. O'Neill. The continuance was granted to permit investigators to clear up certain angles of the case.

Two persons have been under arrest at Hyattsville for more than a week in connection with the case. An autopsy was performed on the child's body several days ago after it had been exhumed, but no evidence of foul play was disclosed, authorities said.

Laurel Flower Show

Laurel.—The Woman's Club here will hold its annual flower show tomorrow from 3 to 6 p. m. at the home of Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave, 315 Washington boulevard. Blooms and flowers of any kind will be accepted. Exhibits must be in place by 1 p. m.

Young Democrat Club Formed at Va. College

Richmond, Va., May 24 (AP).—John Currie, executive secretary of the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia, announced today the chartering of the first college club at Randolph-Macon, Ashland.

The club, organized separately from the Hanover Young Democratic Club, was the 117th to be chartered in Virginia.

HOW FAR IS A MILE?

LA SALLE

According to the dictionary, a mile is 5,280 feet. But not according to LaSalle owners! A mile, they say, is just a little stretch of the smoothest, easiest, pleasantest riding it is possible to experience. And for you a mile will be just enough to make you realize why almost half the people who try a LaSalle immediately buy a LaSalle. We're eager to have you take the wheel. How about it—today?

COCKTAIL PRIMER

Q. Why does a bartender shake cocktails?
A. To chill them — but principally to blend the ingredients.
Q. Are cocktails at their best immediately after this blending?
A. By no means! The world's most popular cocktails — the kind served on all fast trains — are blended long before you drink them.
Q. Is this an advantage?
A. Decidedly! Instead of being mixed with a quick shake — ingredients have time to "wed" into smooth, delicious perfection.
Q. How can I get these fine, flavorful cocktails?
A. By asking your dealer today for Heublein's CLUB COCKTAILS . . . ready-mixed in the bottle.

Fishbein Warns Health Bill to Curb Research

Editor Urges Surgical Trade Body to Seek Defeat of Measure

Manufacturers and retailers of artificial limbs, sterilizers and other surgical supplies were warned yesterday by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, that destruction of their business will be one of the consequences if the Wagner health bill is enacted.

"The main reason scientific medicine objects to what the Government is proposing is fear of what will happen to private enterprise, which is responsible for the development of insulin, serums and other advances, and the effect on philanthropic endowments to reasearch foundations," Dr. Fishbein said.

Addressing the annual meeting of the American Surgical Trade Association at the Wardman Park Hotel, the militant editor derided the argument that the average family is unable to pay for adequate medical care.

Fail to Budget Medical Care

"The housewife with, say, a $30 or $35 weekly wage to budget, sets aside so much for installments on the radio, beauty treatments and Junior's clarinet lessons, as well as food, rent, clothing and other essentials," he said, "but the family simply doesn't think to budget a small amount for medical care."

If anyone is going without medical attention it is the social service worker who is to blame, not the doctor, said Dr. Fishbein. Social service, he said, is satisfied to gather facts and statistics on the case and then let it drop.

Medical progress, he said, does not depend on distributing a lot of money, but on constant research and the stabilization of existing knowledge. The way to curb cancer, for example, is to promote early consultation with the physician and getting the benefit of already known facts in treatment, rather than by spending funds indiscriminately for radium, X-ray and other tools, Dr. Fishbein asserted.

Standing Ovation Given

"Thirty-one per cent of the country's hospital beds are vacant, yet the answer that is given is to build still more hospitals," the Journal editor said.

The speaker received a standing ovation when he called for defeat of the Wagner-sponsored bill. More than 300 surgical tradesmen are registered for the convention, which will close today.

Medical Association Group Here to Fight Wagner Bill

Board of Strategy Meets in Hotel, Will Descend Today on Senate Sub-committee on Health Program

The brains of the American Medical Association were mustered in a Washington hotel room yesterday to formulate strategy for a descent this morning upon the Senate committee holding hearings on the Wagner health bill.

Both in number and collective reputation, the group probably was the most impressive aggregation of physicians ever to appear before a Congressional committee. One by one, they will go before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor today and tomorrow and argue against enactment of the $850,000,000 national health program.

The delegation which drafted its plans yesterday at the Hotel Mayflower included the following:

Dr. Rock Sleyster, of Wautosa, Wis., newly installed president of the American Medical Association.

Dr. E. H. Cary, of Dallas, chairman of the A. M. A. legislative committee.

Dr. Olin West, executive secretary of the association.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of its Journal.

Dr. R. G. Leland, of Chicago, director of the Bureau of Medical Economics.

Dr. W. D. Cutter, of Chicago, secretary of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals.

Dr. Haven Emerson, public health authority, of Columbia University.

Dr. William C. Woodward, of Chicago, director of the bureau of Legal Medicine.

Dr. Frank Crockett, of Lafayette, Ind., a member of the legislative committee.

Dr. Holman Taylor, of Fort Worth, secretary of the Texas Medical Society.

Dr. R. L. Sensenich, of South Bend, Ind., a trustee of the A. M. A.

Dr. Walter Vest, of Huntington, W. Va., president of the Southern Medical Association and a member of the A. M. A. house of delegates.

Dr. Walter L. Donaldson, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the Pennsylvania Medical Society.

Dr. Wingate Johnson, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Dr. Robert L. Benson, Portland, Oreg.

Come From Convention

The delegation comes to Washington almost directly from the annual convention of the American Medical Association held in St. Louis last week, when a report rejecting the Wagner health bill was adopted without a dissenting vote.

It was learned that Dr. Sleyster will make the opening statement today and that succeeding witnesses will be presented to the committee, of which Senator Thomas, of Utah, is chairman, by Dr. Cary, in his capacity of the A. M. A. legislative chairman.

The witnesses are expected not only to condemn the Wagner bill, which authorizes the Federal Government to make grants-in-aid to the States to expand public health services, build many new hospitals and diagnostic centers and help finance sickness insurance in those States which desire it, but to offer substitute measures.

It will mark the first appearance before Senator Thomas' committee of an official A. M. A. delegation authorized to present that body's views. Several months ago a smaller group of association members was heard by the Interdepartmental Committee to Co-ordinate Health and Welfare Activities, drafter of the Wagner bill and headed by Miss Josephine Roche.

Dr. Leland probably will inform the Thomas committee of the A. M. A.'s own health survey, which has been in progress for more than a year and whose findings are expected to differ materially from those of the National Health Survey. The latter project was conducted three years ago by the United States Public Health Service.

Seminary Plans Commencement

Commencement week at Mount Vernon Seminary will open with a memorial service for Miss Jean Dean Cole, former head mistress of the seminary, at 11 a. m. Saturday in the Elizabeth Somers Chapel.

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, will conduct the service, with music by Adolf Torovsky, organist.

12 Civic Leaders Will Give Views On D. C. Budget

Opinions on budgetary needs of Washington will be given before the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations today by a dozen civic and business leaders.

This will end public hearings on the District's 1940 budget, which the House set at $46,900,000 and which the Senate is expected to boost considerably.

Witnesses Sought In Murder Trial

Several character witnesses testified for Clarence E. Nichols, plumber, accused of slaying his wife here, before Justice Laws adjourned court yesterday until Friday. Defense Counsel James A. O'Shea said he would try to locate several witnesses to the facts.

Nichols may take the stand Friday to tell his version of the quarrel in which Mrs. Viola Nichols was killed last September.

Bandit Takes Shoes Along With $20

An armed colored man escaped with $20 and a pair of shoes after holding up a branch shoe store in the 1100 block of Seventh street northwest yesterday. Theodore Fason, 24, assistant manager of the store, told police he was alone when the bandit entered. After looking at a pair of shoes, Fason said, the man pulled a revolver and took the money from the cash drawer.

The Squalus Disaster

Of the men who go down to the sea in ships, those who face the greatest peril are the crews of submarines. Of them it has been said that they have a permanent rendezvous with death.

The figures bear this out. In the past quarter of a century more than 750 lives have been lost in peacetime submarine accidents. United States submarines alone have been involved in 61 such accidents, with 12 resulting in fatalities.

During recent years the best efforts of marine engineers have gone into the effort of making the submarine safe. But the fate of the Squalus and its gallant crew shows that the goal has by no means been reached.

The Squalus was equipped with every safety device known to builders of the underseas craft. However, either through the carelessness of some member of the crew or through the mechanical failure of one of its complicated parts, it sank off Portsmouth, N. H.

The disaster was the worst in submarine history since the S-4 went down off Provincetown with a loss of 40 lives 12 years ago. For despite the promptness and the efficiency of the rescuing apparatus rushed to the scene of the accident, only a little more than half of the crew has been saved. The Nation must, however, be thankful that any were saved at all. Without the aid of the remarkable rescue chamber, perfected after the S-4 disaster, the officers and men of the Squalus who were safely brought to the surface might have shared the tragic fate of their fellows, who, it is conjectured, were trapped and probably drowned in the torpedo chamber.

No doubt, the submarine will continue to be the most hazardous of fighting craft. But, the Squalus disaster proves that American naval authorities have done everything humanly possible to learn from the accidents of the past and to guard against them and when, despite every precaution, accidents do nevertheless occur, to save as many lives as possible.

Evacuation From Spain

In an exchange of letters accompanying the Anglo-Italian accord of April, 1938, Italy agreed to evacuate her legionnaires and war material from Spain immediately after the close of the civil war, if not sooner. The long delay in bringing about this evacuation has been a source of international friction and has given rise to the suspicion that Italy was planning to entrench herself in Spain. By the same token the current announcement that Italian soldiers are to be withdrawn from the Iberian peninsula is a hopeful indication of diminishing tension.

If Italy takes all her troops home, the move will be regarded as the faithful, if somewhat belated, execution of a pledge given Great Britain. It is possible, therefore, that Italy's prospective action will tend to reanimate the agreement with Great Britain, the purpose of which was to establish a comprehensive basis of good relations between the two countries. But there is no certainty of this. Indeed, the odds may seem against it.

On the one hand, Great Britain and France are now linked by extremely close ties. They have pooled their interests not only in western Europe but in eastern and southeastern Europe and the Mediterranean as well. The antiaggression bloc, which the two democracies are seeking to build up, is as much directed against Italy as it is against Germany. And the axis powers, too, are now bound together by a very comprehensive alliance.

Thus, while the withdrawal of Italian troops from Spain will constitute an entry on the credit side of the Anglo-Italian treaty ledger, it may not be sufficient to offset sundry debit entries. Among these are the Italian campaign for aggrandizement at the expense of France, the reinforcement of the garrison in Libya and the conquest of Albania, upsetting the Mediterranean status quo. The relations between Great Britain and Italy are now distinctly overshadowed by the relations between the two great blocs facing each other in the Old World.

Clarification Needed

When the Supreme Court hands down a five-to-four decision it is safe to assume that there is much to be said on both sides of the issue at stake. Especially is that true when the legislation in question is vague and the court is compelled to draw its own conclusions as to what Congress intended. For that very reason close analysis of the court's opinion on Monday, in the St. Louis-Southwestern Railway Co. case, is desirable.

The differences between the majority and minority arise entirely from interpretation of the joint resolution by which Congress invalidated so-called gold-clause contracts. Justice Black, writing the opinion of the majority, held that obligations expressed in terms of foreign currencies, as well as in dollars, may be discharged by the payment of devalued dollars. With the support of Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Butler and McReynolds, Justice Stone contended in a dissenting opinion that the joint resolution does not apply to promises to pay in foreign currencies.

The railroad bonds in question guaranteed payment, at the option of the holder, in either dollars, pounds, guilders, marks or francs. The bondholders elected to take payment in Dutch guilders, which would have given them the equivalent of $37,335,525, instead of the $21,638,000 which the court has awarded them in dollars. In the eyes of the majority, multiple currency provisions signify an attempt to obstruct the power of Congress to regulate the value of money. Justice Black says they further "a mischief which the resolution was enacted to end."

It is true that this carefully drafted resolution is sweeping in character. It provides that "every obligation, heretofore or hereafter incurred, whether or not any such provision is contained therein or made with respect thereto, shall be discharged upon payment, dollar for dollar, in any coin or currency which at the time of payment is legal tender for public and private debts." The resolution was made applicable to "obligations payable in money of the United States."

Because the St. Louis-Southwestern bonds were "payable in money of the United States," as well as other currencies, the majority concluded that the resolution is broad enough to cover them. Indeed, it went so far as to state: "Congress sought to outlaw all contractual provisions which require debtors, who have bound themselves to pay United States dollars, to pay a greater number of dollars than promised."

While there is a certain logic in this conclusion, it also has very definite weaknesses ably pointed out by Justice Stone. It was not the obligation in dollars that the bondholders asked the court to uphold. Rather it was the obligation in guilders. Many American citizens have been required to pay obligations in foreign currency (much to their disadvantage) since the gold-clause resolution was passed. Congress has made no effort to ease their burden. Only in cases where the obligation is stated in terms of both American and foreign currencies, under the ruling of the court, are citizens relieved of the necessity of buying foreign exchange with depreciated dollars.

That fact seems to cast a good deal of doubt upon the intention of Congress. If the resolution had been intended to outlaw multiple currency provisions, as well as gold clauses, there should be some indication of that purpose in the history of the act. Justice Stone found none. "It seems fair to suppose," he says, "that if Congress proposed to end all possibility of creating an international market for bonds payable in dollars or alternatively abroad in foreign currencies, both without gold value, it would have given some more explicit indication of that purpose than is exhibited by the joint resolution."

Justice Stone refers to the majority decision as "a major operation of statutory reconstruction." Whether or not that criticism is justified, the meaning which the court has read into the gold-clause resolution calls for the attention of Congress. That body may have intended in 1933 to "strike down every conceivable provision for payment in foreign currency, delivery of commodities, or performance of services as an alternative for a promise to pay dollars." But the wisdom of permitting such a policy to stand is open to very serious question.

Retail Policies

The American Retail Federation is doubtless wise in departing from the customary practice of businessmen's organizations by adjourning without passing formal resolutions.

As a result, the two-day session of the federation held here in Washington was brought to an end with an amiable and sensible summing up of the basic policies on which Louis E. Kirstein, chairman of the board of trustees, thought the members would agree.

The keynote of his address was the importance of cooperation with the Federal and State governments in helping to solve the social and economic problems of the day. Then Mr. Kirstein indicated what some of these problems are by referring to the need of formulating a careful fiscal policy and correlating Federal, State and local taxation, with a view to encouraging private investment and increasing purchasing power.

Diplomatically, the speaker linked recognition of the Government's responsibility for providing social security with a demand for thorough revision of the social security program. Another "plank" acknowledged that consumer cooperatives were a legitimate form of retail distribution. But governments were urged to refrain from granting them subsidies and other special privileges not available to all retailers. There was also a well-balanced indorsement of collective bargaining.

After running through the list of "principles," one reaches the conclusion that a good many associations would be well advised to let one of their outstanding members sum up for them the results of their deliberations. That is particularly true in case of large organizations with a heterogeneous membership. The chief value of coming together for conference and discussion lies in friendly exchange of views and personal contacts, not in any definite conclusions to which an official approval has to be given.

Monsignor Ryan

The name of Mgr. John Augustine Ryan, whose seventieth birthday is being celebrated today, is one that for years has been spoken with profound respect even in quarters where a clerical title is not necessarily the best of recommendations. In the minds of most Americans Dr. Ryan stands as the pre-eminent example of the courageous Catholic liberal.

The term for various historical reasons is not perhaps wholly fortunate. "Liberalism" is a slippery concept and to almost any two persons the word might suggest almost opposite things. It might mean, for instance, the laissez faire capitalism to which Dr. Ryan, both as an economist and as a moralist, has been most conspicuously opposed. Again it was used to describe certain political propositions condemned by Pius IX in the famous Syllabus of Errors. Finally the words "liberal Catholic" were in the nineteenth century variously applied to such philosophic views as those of Lamennais, Dollinger, Acton and Von Huegel, all in their turn to some degree suspect.

With these, however, Dr. Ryan has little in common. His attitude on social questions has followed logically from his insistence that the role of religion in the conflict of labor and capital is not that of the "moral policeman of capitalism." Rather it is to reconcile the conflict by aiding the workers to obtain that much larger equity in both the profits and ownership of industry to which, as he believes, Christian justice entitles them.

This view, based on the ideas advanced nearly 50 years ago by Pope Leo XIII, is eminently orthodox. It was Dr. Ryan's bold application of a theoretic position, shared by nearly all his coreligionists, to particular conflicts of workers and employers, and to particular issues involving the question of civil rights and workers' liberties, that once caused many apprehensive Catholic industrialists to consider him a dangerous revolutionary in clerical guise.

Dr. Ryan became preoccupied with the labor problem while a theological student at St. Paul, Minn. He was one of those who early recognized the essentially radical implications of the encyclical, De Rerum Novarum. Other contemporary Catholic social theorists, and notably those under the influence of Belloc and Chesterton, conceived that the redistribution of ownership of instruments of production advocated by Leo XIII could be achieved only by substituting somehow a system of small proprietorships for corporate industry.

Dr. Ryan, however, has sought an answer in that system of industrial democracy which would give to labor an increasing share in the management of industry and would give to both workers and management much of the role now played by the investor. And while his profound concern with economic justice and ways to attain it, and with the maintenance unimpaired of our civil liberties, is rooted in Catholic philosophy, it has been constantly nourished by a deep faith in American democracy.

With the advent of the New Deal, Dr. Ryan has seen many of his views—notably the principle of minimum wages—incorporated into legislation. He himself has become an adviser on labor questions to the Administration. But he would no doubt be the last to say that the Christian solution of the social problem is as yet very near.

Nevertheless he has seen the whole Christian world—Catholic and Protestant—become thoroughly awake to the urgency of the problem. Under Dr. Ryan's influence the Catholic University, with which he has been so long associated, has become an important center for the study of sociology and economics, especially in relation to their moral aspects. It must, therefore, have been a moment of great pride when, last October, the Pope called the attention of the hierarchy to the importance of these studies and placed the fullest emphasis on their continuation and development.

Fireside Chat

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In '33 the Presidential chat had magic power. In '36 it was still the Administration's most potent weapon. For days before and after the chat it was then the chief subject of conversation among friends and neighbors. But today has the Presidential chat lost its charm? If so, how great the decline in its power? Can it be restored to power for the 1940 campaign?

No Gallup poll has yet obtained the public's answer to these specific questions.

They are open to discussion by editors, writers and the general public without fear of statistical contradiction. Their correct answer will go a long way toward telling who will win in 1940.

The chat in its mechanical technique has lost nothing. It is beautifully and simply worded. It is delivered in eloquent conversational tones, with the just correct dramatic pauses. Its promises of recovery are so cleverly phrased as to make us almost forget, at least for the time being, that recovery isn't here and that, like Hoover's prosperity, it is still around the corner.

Yet interest in the chat has unquestionably waned—no longer do friends and neighbors remind one another to tune in on the chat. The chat is on—I listen as of old but the children continue with their lessons. My wife naps after her many toils. Grandmother says, "Tell me what it is all about when he is through. I've got to phone." The farmer across the road tells me he forgot to listen in and wonders if all of this crop control is going to get us anywhere, anyway. My retail friend listened and liked it—he agrees with the President. My other business friends mostly didn't listen or like it.

This is a long way from telling the full story of the present-day's power of the chat to charm and influence public action and votes, but judging from what we hear and still more from our failure to hear much comment on the present-day chats, as compared with '33 and '36, I gather much fewer people now actually listen to the chat than of old and its influence as a weapon for social changes or for votes is on the decline. How To Help Business

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Robert C. Albright, in The Post of May 18, reports that the Budget Bureau has asked Congress to appropriate $225,000 to provide for "a new kind of ability and a new energy in the Department of Commerce." The Budget Director is quoted as saying that the $225,000 would be used to pay salaries of a "highly qualified" executive staff in the Secretary's office for development of plans directed toward improvement of business conditions at the earliest possible moment.

This statement has a reminiscently familiar sound. No reasonable citizen would deny to the Secretary of Commerce the type of assistance he seeks and should have; however, at the risk of being characterized as critical but not helpful, I suggest that implicit in this request for additional funds and staff are two debatable questions. First, that the quality of brains and experience sought by the Secretary are not now available within the department. Second, that the addition of high quality personnel to the department staff will, as per se, conduce to the improvement of general business conditions.

To be explicit, improvement in general business conditions is not within the province or ability of the Commerce Department to influence more than very remotely. General business conditions improved rather notably in this country for 300 years before the Commerce Department was first established in 1903.

No amount of gray matter in this or any Government department will remove the present obstacles to business improvement.

Existing business will improve, potential business will develop, and the much deplored idle capital will flow into the arteries of business when, and not until, our country shall have absorbed the import of a statement from the Executive and Congress somewhat as follows:

To All Private Capital Invested in Utilities, Including Railroads: It shall henceforth be the policy of Government to utilize no more of the taxes exacted from you for the building of facilities to be operated by the Government in competition with private capital. We belatedly realize that Government is inherently incapable of economically or efficiently operating the delicate and complex machine called business.

We now realize with mounting consternation that present and past policy respecting the American business machine is jeopardizing Government revenue, and that if our past policy were to be continued to its logical conclusion we should eventually completely dry up the heretofore free flowing streams of revenue so vitally necessary to the very existence of Government.

To Business in General: We deeply regret that, because a few individuals in our business life have been guilty of practices both unethical and inimical to the best interests of our common country, we stigmatized you all and attempted the impossible task of improving and reforming business by legislative experiment. We are mortified that we have not earlier realized our error and admitted it. We now admit it. We solemnly declare that henceforth we shall seek to inspire and deserve your confidence in our desire and intention to reduce Government spending and concomitantly reduce Government taxes.

In short, we now realize that Government itself cannot survive, excepting as the profits of ever expanding private business enterprise, actuated by normal human ambition, aspiration and hope of profit, make available to Government the lifeblood of its existence. We now comprehend that there is no essential difference between big business and small business. Both are actuated by the same motive, and this motive is the mainspring of all human endeavor.

A simple statement by Government embodying the above general concept of the relation of Government to its people would do more to revive and compel the outflow of private capital than the combined efforts of all Federal departments and pump priming with Federal funds. G. B. THOMPSON.

Mr. Allen's Reappointment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although I have never met the new Commissioner, your editorial regarding the appointment of Mr. Allen came as a distinct shock to me. Mere sportsmanship would seem to require a decent waiting period to see what can be accomplished before condemning the whole program.

Mr. Allen has repeatedly shown his sincere interest in our community, fought a good fight for suffrage and always assumed additional tasks cheerfully.

To kick a man verbally, after he has shown enough civic interest in an adopted community to serve the public, even at a personal financial loss, is in very poor taste, to say the least.

It is little wonder that relatively few big men are willing to expose themselves to the poison pens of disgruntled crackpots, who have axes to grind. Consequently, our public service suffers, while you complain about inefficiency.

Of course, the District should have a real voice in its government. But Commissioner Allen did more politically to promote this than your entire staff of editorial writers.

Now that Mr. Allen has assumed the thankless task of reorganizing an obsolete form of government, under which efficient administration is a virtual impossibility, why not give him a fair chance, since the job is difficult enough without backseat drivers?

The real letdown for the District of Columbia came with The Post editorial which panned our best friend for not accomplishing more during his Administration under our "horse-and-buggy" form of government. PLAY FAIR.

Referendum

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a well-known fact that foreign powers deliberately high-pressured us into the last war. Would it not be more difficult for these same sinister forces to influence the entire country than just Congress?

How is it that those who condemn the Administration severely in matters of business have implicit confidence in their wisdom in deciding the most important question that could ever arise?

If municipalities require a popular vote on large expenditures of money, why should we not vote on expenditure of human lives? Then if the vote was for war, we could at least know it was the will of the majority and not the monied interests.

Many declare in case of war "there is no time for a referendum." Since this does not apply to attack upon our own shores, would there be any hurry about rushing into a foreign war to pull somebody else's chestnuts out of the fire?

A foreign war is the only one we would have to fight. Would any nation or group of nations, in case they conquered England and France, dare to cross 3,000 miles in their depleted condition to attack the most powerful Nation on earth? Dictators may be knaves, but they are not fools.

Even if property belonging to big corporations in a foreign land were seized and a few Americans who refused to leave the war zone were killed, would that justify sending thousands more to be slaughtered? The man on the street wouldn't think so.

We were fooled once. Do you think the people could be fooled again so soon? OLIVE S. FORD.

The Post Impressionist

Sweet Chariot

ONCE UPON A TIME the word jam meant something to go on a slice of bread, but today it calls up a picture of honking cars and impatient drivers. Pious folk might well consider that the automobile is an invention of the devil, put here to stir men to wrath. But not so many years ago the horseless carriage was more than just a convenient form of rapid transport; it was the badge of prosperity, which lifted the owner above his fellows, as a man of means. Skittish as a high-bred horse, it demanded loving attention and constant petting. But mastered, it gave in return a sense of well-being and an untold amount of pride and satisfaction.

In those days, cars were more or less a lifetime responsibility, no more to be traded in for newer models than old Nellie out in the stable. I remember the arrival of the first one that came to our town, for it was shipped in by train. The whole population was there for the unloading, admiring the smartly squared off hood and the heavy brass fittings. A troop of men and boys followed its stately progress down the street, dropping off at their various places of business, but I imagine a baker's dozen of them went the full 2 miles out to the prosperous farm that it would henceforth grace.

The first winter it went only to church, and upon returning home was jacked up and allowed to remain in suspended animation, so to speak, until prayer meeting night. But when spring came, it was the habit of the owners to take their friends to ride on Sunday afternoons.

I can still feel the intense agony of waiting on the day they came by for us. The elder members of the family were unsympathetically calm, and read or rested after dinner, but I could not sit still. I wandered out to the garden to smell the sweetpeas, and picked a few that wilted promptly in my hot hands. The strawberry bed looked cool, and a few red-ripe berries lingered among the leaves. But they were warm, although the juice was like honey. I picked a handful and went out to the swing to eat them where I could watch the road.

Since it was the only car thereabouts, there was no mistake about it when the cloud of dust approached, and even the noise of the motor was irreproachably dignified. There was plenty of room for us all, but I sat in my mother's lap. The start was like the first dip of a roller coaster, and I clutched my pink sash as we swept around the corner. By the time we were halfway to town, ignominy had descended in a great wave, and sick with mortification and strawberries, I had to disembark and be walked home.

Far less painful is the memory of Northern friends who came to visit us in their limousine—in those days, all closed cars were limousines. The chauffeur, resplendent in cap and boots, was a source of pride and delight. We became the best of friends, and most co-operatively, he was propriety itself when he took me riding. I developed a passion for errand running—provided Gilbert was allowed to take me. Savoring every minute of intense satisfaction, I shall never feel so grand again as I did on those rides. Sometimes we would stop and pick up several of my especial friends, and with noses pointing skyward, the car full of little snobs tasted a social triumph more satisfying than an invitation to the royal garden party.

Youth is always immoderate in its tastes, preferring to be very clean or very dirty, excessively conventional or blithely defiant of custom. Apparently this extends to transportation, for the collegiate jallopy is a familiar and joyous pest along the road.

One of the boys in our high school crowd in some manner inherited a Model T—ancient even then—which we christened Napoleon. The reason for the name is hazy, but I suppose it had to do with inability to carry on upon an empty stomach, for Napoleon had a digestive complaint as serious as the one which afflicted its illustrious predecessor. There was a leak near the base of the gas tank, and since the percentage of miles per gallon was very low, Napoleon's fuel capacity was hardly enough for a 5-mile run. We used to pick out hilly country roads in our neighborhood for our rides, for although it was often necessary to push up, we could clamber in again and coast down. Napoleon met his Waterloo out near Kensington one fine summer day, and passed away with a gentle wheeze. Not even one gallon of gas would resuscitate him, and a junkman had to tow him away.

But a few weeks ago, after some 15 years, I saw either Napoleon or his ghost, returned, I suppose, for his hundred days. The same flapping fenders, the same heavy rope securing the left-hand corner of the top, the same air of divine right that belongs to a dictator. I heard a puff and the engine died, and a disconsolate youth slumped behind the steering wheel and met the eyes of little girl friend who sat beside him. I had an almost uncontrollable impulse to pull up to the curb and offer to help them push the half block to the next filling station, but a pressing engagement hurried me on. I passed by with a wave, realizing that one may salute, but not recapture, the dismal joys of adolescence.

Not many minutes later, I was caught on the bridge, hemmed in on all sides by large trucks and hundreds of automobiles. Looking around me, I had plenty of time to think, and to regret the passing of the day when ownership of a motor car brought so much real pleasure. For all their streamlined beauty and comfort, they are now regarded as necessities rather than luxuries. Asparagus and roses and automobile rides are always available, so we no longer look forward to spring time, or the Sunday ride.

Fair Enough

'Purely Transitional'

A COMMUNIST who deplores the ignorance of those who see only external differences between his "ism" and the axis disease writes, in surprisingly gentle vein, to assure me that in Russia political dictatorship is a purely transitional measure which this country, with its long experience of democracy and parliamentary institutions, would be spared entirely. He adds a belief that I have been outrageously alienated by the methods and fanaticism of communism, as though the methods and fanaticism were only slight irritations, when the fact is that they include lying and suppression of truth and opinion, the wholesale slaughter and deportation of dissenters and, up to date in this country, the most vicious abuse by aliens and Americans under alien inspiration of Americans who resist these methods and that fanaticism.

It seems nice to be assured that in this country gentle methods would be used to dispossess Americans of their homes and farms and corner stores, to place political appointees in charge of all the factories and seize all the properties of religious and patriotic groups if communism inevitably must be.

Americans Don't Bow To Rough Treatment

BUT THERE IS room for misgiving where he fails to explain by what magic the methods and fanaticism will be moderated to achieve these ends when the Americans go into the street to fight. For I think it must be anticipated that the Americans will not accept these slight adjustments in a docile spirit, being so long accustomed to private ownership of great or modest possessions and certain other institutions, and having no reason to repose confidence in a system which, in its one great effort, has always enforced democracy with the machine gun and the secret police.

I am compelled to assume that there would be considerable resistance and that then, under the excuse of miscalculation and unforeseen necessity, the Communist minority would suspend the promise of no dictatorship and treat the Americans rough. This would happen immediately, and, if the Communists won, the result would be the abolition of the American democracy and its parliamentary institutions for an indefinite period, which, in this country, would be much longer than the 22 years to date, with the end not yet in sight, which Russia has spent under the terror.

Bolshevik Reign Marked By Bloodshed

MY CORRESPONDENT submits that the dictatorship in Russia was necessitated by the fact that the people had spent their past under the tyranny of the czars, and this argument, a familiar one, always moves me to inquire why a people so dumb and bovine, so long accustomed to depression; needed more of the same by way of schooling for freedom.

No czar or czars ever shed as much blood inside Russia in an equal time as the Bolsheviks in their transitional period, and all the riots and border wars together which have marked the progress of the United States under the Republic, including the Civil War cost fewer lives than this long and bloody schooling of the docile Russian for a freedom which is still withheld by one man.

If the ignorant, spiritless Russian required such coercion it must be anticipated that the Americans would need even harsher preparation for the blessings of communism, because, with their vastly superior intelligence and highly developed national and individual spirit, they wuold fight just that much harder.

Methods Of 'Isms' Alienate Americans

UNFORTUNATELY for the Communist propaganda in this country, the methods and fanaticism of the bolos have created deep distrust of their word and have discredited the promise that if the Americans will yield quietly there will be no dictatorship. They have sabotaged labor unions, tried to intimidate patriotic Americans, bored into the Government in the guise of progressives to work for the destruction of American business by which the country lives, fought to aggravate economic troubles of industry so that continued mass poverty would cause civil commotion and invoked the protection of laws and principles which are desired as savagely in Russia as in Germany and Italy.

Naturally, Americans are outrageously alienated by the methods and fanaticism of the Communists and so by communism, itself. Those methods and fanaticism and communism and Hitlerism and fascism, too.

How to Torture Your Wife

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

From The Wrong End Indeed

SPEAKING to the American Retail Federation, Mr. Roosevelt remarked that

> Some highbrow columnists and some high-geared economists say that you and I think too much about consumers' purchasing power and look at our economic problems from the wrong end.

That is fair enough, although the matter might be stated somewhat differently. It may be said that because Mr. Roosevelt looks at our economic problems from the wrong end, he thinks not very successfully, even though he thinks a lot, about consumers' purchasing power. In fact, I believe, it could be demonstrated that Mr. Roosevelt is the victim of an optical illusion on this very point, and that this optical illusion disturbs his judgment on almost every critical issue of the New Deal.

Producer Is Prime Prosperity Force

THE ILLUSION consists in thinking that the customer in the retail shop is the prime mover in the industrial system. To think that is to look at economic problems from the wrong end, and thus to forget that no one can go shopping unless he himself, or some one else who provides him with money, has first earned, that is to say produced, goods that are sold in the shops.

But when Mr. Roosevelt asked the retailers "how shall we produce more customers with more money?" his optical illusion prevented him from seeing that the "purchasing power" of the customer who enters a shop to buy goods had first to be made by some one who produced goods.

The production of goods is the primary fact. Without production there would be nothing in the shop that the customer could buy. And without production there would be no purchasing power in the customers.

Here, for example, is a family, husband, wife and two children. They have a certain amount of purchasing power, that is to say, a certain amount of money to spend. Where does it come from?

The children go to the movies, having first obtained 20 cents from their parents to buy tickets. According to Mr. Roosevelt's theory, Johnny's purchasing power exerted at the box office is what employs Clark Gable and the Hollywood industry. He argues that to have more employment we must provide Johnny with more money to spend.

False Perspective On Spender's Role

BUT THE HIGHBROW columnists and the high-geared economists remember that Johnny got his purchasing power from his father. They remember that his father gets his purchasing power from his wages or from profits on the sale of goods or from dividends on money that he or his father saved and invested or from a Government check that is backed by a tax on someone else's wages or profits or dividends. Remembering these things, the highbrowed and high-geared insist on the simple fact that it is not the power to spend which causes the production of wealth, that, on the contrary, it is the production of wealth which creates the power to spend.

And they insist that to think of Johnny's purchasing power "as the milk in the coconut of all business" is to see Johnny's contribution to the national wealth in a very false perspective.

The problem is not, as Mr. Roosevelt suggests, how to get Johnny to spend more money. The problem is how to enable Johnny's father to earn more money. For Johnny will spend the money readily enough. The difficulty is to earn it. And when we study that difficulty Johnny's role in industry sinks into a very secondary position.

Thus with Mr. Roosevelt's one-third of the nation that are ill-clad, ill-housed, ill-fed, the emphasis on their lack of purchasing power, rather than on their lack of the means and opportunity to produce more purchasing power, has put the whole problem of poverty in a false perspective. For if the trouble with this one-third of the population were, as Mr. Roosevelt makes it appear, that they have not enough money to spend, if their lack of money were what keeps industry depressed, then the abolition of poverty would be as simple as rolling off a log. One would need only to print enough money and give it to them, and they would go to the shops and spend it and everybody would be happy.

Greater Productive Power Is Needed

THE COUNTRY is full of crackpot schemes of just this sort, and there is no principle in Mr. Roosevelt's economic philosophy, as outlined to the retailers, which can be brought forward against the schemes. If the problem is "to produce more customers with more money," rather than to produce more wealth, the printing press is the only machine we need.

Actually, the cause of poverty is that men are working on poor land, with poor materials, with bad tools, with poor skill, and under bad management. The reduction of poverty cannot be brought about by providing the poor with more "purchasing power." It can be brought about by providing them with greater productive power, by making available through public and private initiative better land, the credit to purchase better tools, the education to use tools better, the facilities of better markets, the research and enlightenment for better management.

Actually the New Deal has started to do all these things, and that is its great and abiding contribution to American life. But this complex of the President's on the subject of purchasing power has diverted the attention, both of the New Dealers and of the country at large, from the clear understanding that is needed for wholehearted action toward the reduction of poverty. The country would understand and gladly support a program of public investment in conservation, in technical education, in the development of power and the improvement of roads and markets if the whole effort were consciously and clearly dedicated to improving the productive capacity of the people.

Too Much Emphasis On Spending Power

BUT THIS EVERLASTING emphasis on spending rather than on producing, this demagoguery which flatters "the customer" and ignores the producer, this rather contemptuous attitude toward the elementary economic virtues, toward industry, thrift and initiative, —all of that is demoralizing and the rebellion against the New Deal is at bottom a reaction against this demoralization. The people feel that in putting his whole emphasis on the customer who goes into a shop, in withholding his sympathy and real concern from the problem of producing wealth by hard work and courageous investment, Mr. Roosevelt is indeed looking not only at our economic problems, but at human life as a whole, from the wrong end.

Public Must Wait For Television, Committee Finds

By the Associated Press.

A special committee of the Communications Commission predicted yesterday "practical television service to the public on a Nation-wide scale cannot be expected for some time in the future."

"Much development remains to be accomplished from both a technical and organization standpoint," the report said. "Facilities for the distribution of programs from one center to another have yet to be developed, financed and constructed. Much has yet to be learned concerning program production, as well as financing and reducing the cost thereof.

"It is expected that for the next few years the largest metropolitan centers will be the only centers receiving television service and that the smaller centers of population will not have transmitting service available for several years.

"The cost of receivers will be high during the first years of development, and this in turn may have an additional retarding effect upon the construction of television transmitting stations, particularly in smaller communities."

All Persons Are Equal?

By Mark Sullivan

Consider The Quints!

CONSIDER these quints. They stand before Kings. They are introduced as, "Five Queens, the world's darlings." When received by the King and Queen of England, the quints attract more eyes than the royal couple. Going to their meeting with royalty, the quints journey in state, in a private car. At home, they have at all times a retinue of nurses, doctors, attendants. They are rich. Only five years old and born in the most modest of circumstances, they have acquired property worth some $500,000. The world thrusts gifts at them, pays extravagant homage to them. By every standard, as the world looks at such matters, the quints are the five most fortunate persons on this continent.

The quints are outside the scope of topics with which this column ordinarily deals. I allude to them only because I think there is in them a lesson useful for present day America to learn. The lesson has to do with the field of social theory, politics, economics, the ideology of reform, the New Deal, democracy, communism—all that area about which the din of jargon daily beats upon our wearied ears.

To get this lesson, consider these five little girls not as quints but as separate individuals. The sole reason for the eminence of the quints is that they are quints—they were born simultaneously. Had their births been spaced, had they been born one or two years apart, they would be just five little French-Canadian girls wearing the plainest of clothes, in a humble and commonplace home. Royalty would not send for them, nor even hear of them. The world would beat no path to their door. They would lead the most commonplace of lives and go to the most obscure of graves. There are, in the Dionne family, some older children, and a younger one. But they were born one at a time; they are out of the picture. I wonder how they feel about the whimsicality of nature.

Columnist Waxes A Little Sarcastic

ANY ONE of the quints—if only one—would have been nothing. If you are born one, you are just average; if you are born one of five, you are superior.

Or, had the sum of the five been born as just one child—which I suppose is what nature intended—that one child would have been just a little girl in a gingham frock. The eminence of the quints is due wholly to some faint mysterious accident in a woman's womb. By that accident, these five children acquire a special privilege above all on earth. Thereby all other children become underprivileged.

To the New Deal, such overprivilege is intolerable. To the New Deal, only the underprivileged are society's concern. Getting yourself born more than one at a time makes for special privilege. It is a Tory trick; it makes you an economic royalist. It must stop.

I suppose there will be a law about it. Hereafter, by law, no quintuplets, no quadruplets, no triplets, no twins, under penalty of, etc., etc. Nothing but singles, absolutely. I suppose there will be a Government body to regulate it, a new alphabetical agency, GCA—Gestation Control Administration.

Equality Is Against Laws Of Nature

REFLECT UPON the whim of nature that elevated five little girls over all others on the earth. Reflect upon it and bear it in mind the next time you hear some demagogue yawp about equality. There is no such thing as equality, and nature did not mean there should be. This is a world that includes fundamental inequality between individuals—superiority of some, inferiority of others, in both cases dictated by nature. It is a world, too, that includes chance and luck, the elevation of some by blind accident, the lowering of others by accident equally blind.

Remember that. And when a demagogue tells you all persons are equal, know that he is lying to deceive you and advantage himself; or, often, that he is just a fool and believes his own words.

There is another word that just now the demagogues bleat even more frequently than "equality"—and just as falsely. They tell you they are going to give you security, social security, economic security, all sorts of security.

They even say they are going to give you security against war. More grotesquely yet, they say they are going to make the burdens and risks of war rest upon each and all alike. They have two bills in Congress that are to "take the profit out of war." That is, they are going to take the chance out of war. War shall bear down on one man exactly the same as on another. War shall not do more detriment to one man than to another. Equality again!

A Measure To Fit Demagogue's Dream

I HAVE A BILL myself—I am going to ask some friend in Congress to introduce it. I think my bill will satisfy everybody—and that is a demagogue's dream. I have not yet put my bill fully into statutory language, but it will run something like this:

"Be it hereby enacted: That in any future war in which the United States shall engage, all male citizens shall be subject to draft.

"Provided, however, that no citizen shall be drafted, nor required to go to war, until after the Government of the United States shall have duly and securely provided that the bullets of the enemy shall be sprayed upon the armies of the United States with such absolutely even uniformity that no one soldier shall run greater risk of being hit than any other soldier."

A Nosegay For The League

THERE WAS AN element of tragic irony in the speeches made at the League Council meeting this week by Lord Halifax and Georges Bonnet.

The British foreign secretary went out of his way to praise the spirit of the now almost moribund Geneva organization and to declare Great Britain's firm adherence "to the ideals of international collaboration of which the League has been and is a symbol."

The French foreign minister spoke in a similar vein.

THESE SPEECHES will not revive the League. In some quarters they will be regarded as little more than a nosegay of forget-me-nots cast into an open grave.

There is no indication that Great Britain and France plan to make the Herculean effort that would be required to bring the League to renewed functioning. Both nations are moving heaven and earth to bolster up the shaky structure of peace. But the scene of their activities is not Geneva, but London, Paris, Warsaw, Ankara, Moscow. And the method they are employing is a throwback to the days before the League came into being.

YET IT WOULD be wrong to dismiss the obeisance paid to the League by Messrs. Halifax and Bonnet as a wholly empty gesture. It was more than that. The tribute was, in the first place, the expression of the hope that somehow the decay of the League can be arrested so that, at some future time, it may be rebuilt and again made to function. And it was also a belated recognition of the great service which the League might have rendered but was never permitted to perform.

GREAT BRITAIN and France permitted the rape of Manchuria and the extinguishment of Ethiopian independence. They left Austria to her dismal fate, abandoned Czecho-Slovakia, turned Spain over to the tender mercies of the totalitarian powers, and stood by helplessly while Albania was swallowed up.

Every one of these developments was a nail driven into the coffin of the League. But with each successful aggression, the security of Great Britain and France was also weakened. Yet it was not until Hitler marched into Prague that the eyes of British and French statesmen were at last opened to the grim peril facing their nations.

Since then the London and Paris governments have been scouring Europe for allies. They have made progress. To a greater or lesser degree, Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey have been brought into the Franco-British camp. But Russia, whose support is regarded as indispensable if an effective barrier against further aggressions is to be erected, is still aloof.

THE PRINCIPAL difficulty seems to be that while Russia wants an alliance that is one in fact and in name Great Britain wants an arrangement which has the force of an alliance but does not look like one. In other words, Mr. Chamberlain is eager to secure the support that Russia might give to Poland and Rumania and Turkey, whose territorial integrity Great Britain has already guaranteed, but does not want to court the dangers that he fears may arise if Britain's destinies are openly linked with those of the Soviet Union.

Under the stress of necessity, the British government has nonetheless been drawing closer to the Russian position. The gap that still remains may soon be closed. An Anglo-Russian alliance is desired not only by France but also by a very considerable section of the British population. But there is, as yet, no certainty of this.

UNDER THE circumstances it would be strange if British statesmen did not suffer from an attack of nostalgia when they think of the League that was.

Were the League a flourishing institution, the support which Great Britain now seeks would not have to be bought piecemeal and at a heavy price, as is the case today. Given the vigor it was designed to have, the League would today command a force very much greater than that which the antiaggression bloc is likely to command. And at Geneva it was always possible for nations to co-operate without any suggestion that this co-operation involves any identification of ideologies. This is apparently not so easy outside of Geneva.

BUT THE LEAGUE of Wilson never came into being and even the League of 1920-1935 has become a wraith. So, Great Britain and France now find it necessary to make a new effort in the direction of that collective security which, had the League been backed by one-tenth of the effort now going into the creation of the antiaggression bloc, it could have made a living reality.

600 D. C. Lawyers To Have Outing

Judiciary Square will be manned only by a small garrison of clerks and marshals today while 600 District lawyers and most of the justices make holiday.

The courts will suspend for the spring outing of the District Bar Association, which will begin at 10 a. m. with a boat trip to Marshall Hall, Md., where luncheon will be served. The only agencies functioning will be the clerk's office of the Court of Appeals and the District, Municipal and Police courts.

Neighborhood Council Areas To Be Discussed

New Neighborhood Council areas will be discussed by the co-ordinating committee of neighborhood councils at 4 p. m. tomorrow at 1101 M street northwest. James Ring will preside.

Officers of the Southwest Children's Council will be elected at the final meeting of the year at 3 p. m. today at the Neighborhood Community House, 470 N street southwest. The Northeast Neighborhood Council will elect officers at 8 p. m. next Wednesday at the Northeast Branch Library, Seventh and Maryland avenue northeast.

The annual meeting of the First Ward Neighborhood Council will be held at 3:30 p. m. today at the Goodwill Industries, 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Horse Bet Of Tomorrow

New York State will soon get a chance to vote whether it wants to bet on races the easy or the hard way.

The difference between mutuel betting and bookie betting is the difference between working with a cash register and letting the boys in the backroom handle your money.

One is a system in which a man who wants to place a bet on a horse can do so without even getting his collar torn off. The other is a system in which he makes a bet after a struggle in which he loses most of his outer garments and all his physical stamina.

New York is the last stronghold of the bookie system. Nearly all the other tracks in America took pity on the customers years ago.

Horse race gambling may be an evil, but a bet is a bet and it is no less a bet because it has been made with the maximum discomfort in an atmosphere reeking with hypocrisy.

If the customers are to be allowed to wager at all, why should they be made to wear football helmets, shinguards and shoulder pads? And carry extra life, accident and health insurance?

If a man is legally entitled to put $2 on a horse is it for his best interests that he be forced to develop a football technique and stand for curt treatment and short prices from a lot of beady-eyed strangers instead of being allowed to walk up to a window and at least come through with his ribs intact? Huh?

If the law permits him to make a bet with an individual who doesn't even give him a receipt for his money, is there anything wrong in letting him make it to a mutuels window attendant who gives him a ticket recording the bet? What?

Is gambling any less an evil because you come through it without a broken leg and the sensation of having tried to bust through the varsity football line in your bare feet?

And if betting is legal is there any sense in not safeguarding the customers and letting the State share in the profits? Answer yes or no in the referendum this fall. This correspondent is for the mutuels. The talk about lowering the standard of horse racing makes him giggle. If the standards are lowered any more, either at mutuels or bookie tracks, it will be necessary to enter all tracks by subterranean passages. Wanna bet?

And Dave Dachs remarks that, although this is the 100th anniversary of baseball, a lot of the players are playing as if they were much older than that.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Loves Man Who Is Scorned by Bibulous Wife; Is It Wrong for Them to See Each Other?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 years old. Three months ago I fell madly in love with a man who is married. He is 20 years my senior. For the past four years his home life has been unbearable, as his wife drinks incessantly, thereby driving him from her and their home. I know I shouldn't see him, but we love each other very dearly. I think the world of his wife and she likes me and has been very kind to me. That I should cheat and deceive her is beyond my control.

Wanting not to hurt her, yet loving him as I do, is gradually tearing me to pieces. I can't stand the strain much longer. Should I go to her and tell her? She doesn't love him and doesn't really care to have him around the house, because she has told me so. Do you think that, under these conditions, it is all right for me to see him? We think so much of each other. Answer as quickly as possible, and thank you very much, P. R. G.

DEAR P. R. G.: In letting yourself drift with the tide of this unfortunate attachment, you are inviting social, psychic and moral catastrophe. For a girl of 19, reciprocal passionate love entertained even under favorable auspices (with a contemporary-age suitor as the person beloved) is a potentially perilous experience, inasmuch as it inevitably revolutionizes her whole personality and outlook, and tears her loose from the old, familiar moorings of her childhood's set of standards and values.

But the girl of that age who finds herself in the position of responding, with intense emotional awareness, to the socially prohibited address of a married man twice her age is, without question, standing on the verge of a precipice that leads nowhere except to a yawning abyss of destruction—of ideals, moral rectitude, self-esteem, the good will and respect of others; of every intangible social attribute which should be the permanent, inalienable possession of the individual throughout his lifetime.

The situation is heavily loaded with dynamite, all trained against the girl, for reasons almost too numerous to mention. For one thing, if she is profoundly attracted by the man, she is pitiably defenseless against his suit; while he, by virture of his habitual training in passional expression in marriage, is almost equally helpless to resist her intrinsic appeal. So you have the overwhelming danger (to the girl) of psychic and physical involvement, carrying brutal penalties of various kinds—the terrors of illegitimate pregnancy, the moral opprobrium of society, the inner sense of spiritual chaos which comes of doing violence to one's conscience, etc.

For another thing, the difference in ages stands as an almost insurmountable barrier to enduring, bona fide rapport—even if the man were eventually able, as sometimes develops, to put aside his wife in favor of you. Marriage surveys indicate that marriages made betwen girls of 19 years or less and men 25 years of age or above most frequently end in divorce. For a third thing, the world is cruelly harsh in judging the girl who becomes entangled in any sort of romantic alliance with the husband of a close friend; and the wife is usually first to marshal the battalions of resentment against her.

While this man's wife may have told you that she doesn't love her husband and "doesn't really care to have him around the house." I shouldn't like to be within hearing distance if you were to approach he, with the artless confession that you and he are in love with each other. I imagine she would turn on you like a firebrand, with every sort of excoriating accusation and condemnation; and upon him likewise.

Your current nervous anguish is only a mild foretaste of the suffering you would know if you were to become more deeply involved in this intrigue. You are, essentially, a person of scrupulous conscience and fundamental decency. By instinct and training, you are constrained to behave in open, honorable and self-respecting ways. Treachery and connivance are foreign to your nature; and, consequently, you have already paid a heavier price in suffering than another sort of individual might, in defying moral and social law to the extent that you have.

No matter how unhappy this man may be; no matter how sorely his wife fails his expectations; no matter how profoundly you pity him, nor how much you may long to console him, you haven't the right—and you know it full well—to express your solicitude through the medium of hole-and-corner love exchange. In so doing, indeed, you are giving the lie to the feeling you profess. You are collaborating in a crime against his honor and good name (and yours) that is no less heinous than his wife's sins of omission and commission. No argument exists for justifying a furtive love affair of the type described.

The only advice I can give you—and you must work out the details yourself—is to sever, immediately and finally, all unchaperoned contact, and all direct personal communication, with the man. Say nothing to anyone—unless to your spiritual adviser—about what has transpired; and from this day forth, concern yourself indefatigably and unalterably with the determination to avoid all entanglements, of any sort, with married men. Such entanglements are an invariable source of despoliation for untried girls.

It is so tireless and reliable in its classic styling and simplicity of design that it can be taken aboard plane, boat or car for long world cruises or just out of town for the week-end. The soft rabbit's angora woolen used is light enough for chill summer days in town, yet just enough coat for fall wear later on. Too bad the enticing color choices can't be seen here—but just imagine it in legion red, lemon, aqua, a sweet wood violet or creamy beige

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Method of Reducing Depends on Cause Of Excess Weight

WAYS AND MEANS of getting slim depend largely on the way you got fat. If overeating caused the excess, diet to remove it. If you gain weight easily, checkmate this aggravating tendency by developing a preference for low calorie foods. If you have been a lazybones, exercise.

Usually overeating, low calorie requirements or just pure laziness is at the root of avoirdupois—and usually it's overeating. It's so pleasant and easy to do! When you consider how casually you annex 1,500 calories at a bridge luncheon, or 500 at a more modest afternoon tea, you begin to appreciate how hard it is not to overeat!

Easy to Overstep Maximum

Even if you stay home and eat three fairly plain meals a day, it is easy to overstep the 2,200-calorie maximum of the average woman. Just one and one-half extra pats of butter a day would cause a gain of one-fourth pound a week, or about 12 pounds in a year!

The ideal way to deal with social calories is to go on high vitamin, low calorie menus the following day and use the surplus calories in energy right away. But when you have steadily exceeded your requirements over a period of time, the only answer is a balanced diet permitting you to lose at the rate of two pounds a week. Reducing isn't as much fun as gaining, but you can take weight off faster than you put it on—which should be some consolation.

Not all overweights are large eaters. There are people with fuel requirements so low that everything they eat seems to turn into fat. A good percentage of these people belong to the short, stocky type, and they wage a constant battle with the scales. If you fall into this group, "dieting" in the unpopular sense of the word is not for you. No, you will have to do something that will give you permanent control over your weight—you will have to learn to really like the foods low in calories; fruits, vegetables, lean meats, simple salads. When you learn to like these foods—as you will—there will be no more weight trouble for you.

Exercise Needed, Too

Or perhaps you are not getting too many calories. You may be using too few. Everyone needs a certain amount of daily exercise, but in this age of hurry, hurry, hurry, it's hard to find time for it. However, this is a problem you must solve. You will be delighted with the effect a little invigorating physical activity has on your health, weight and figure.

Perhaps you are convinced that all your trouble is glandular. It isn't likely that anything is wrong that a good balanced diet won't fix, but if your glands are misbehaving, by all means see your doctor. Let him prescribe treatment and the diet you will require to bring your weight to normal.

The Adaptable Clerk

"Now, I want to tell you one thing—you can't go wrong on a gingham suit."

"But this makes me look so—well as if I had just come out of the kitchen."

"That's just because you're not used to it. Nothing's smarter than gingham this season. And just look at this adorable jacket! Now I don't know how you are, but I really never feel right on the street without a jacket."

"You're sure these checks aren't too loud?"

"No, indeed! Anyway, you're the type that can wear striking things and bright colors. Besides they're so much more youthful."

"Still—say, I believe I'd better look at something in solid colors."

"All right. Now how would you like one of these pastel crepes? They're a little higher but——"

"Wait, don't you have any with jackets?"

"No . . . I don't believe so. But really they aren't wearing the jackets so much this season. Anyway you really don't need a jacket in summer in this climiate."

"Well don't you have them in any colors but the pastels?"

"Oh, but you don't want too bright a color for summer. I thing they're so hot looking, don't you? Another thing, you're the type that can wear pastels——"

"Well they all look sort of blah to me."

"That's just because you've seen so many of the gaudier things—with checks and stripes. But I really think these are in lots better taste, don't you?"

"I'm afraid I really ought to get something darker. These show the dirt so easily."

"Oh, but they're so much cooler looking than the darker dresses. And then they're so faminine. Everything's feminine this season. Now just look at this shirring—all those little dressmaker touches do so much to soften you."

"I know but—say, have you any good linen dresses?"

"Linens? Oh yes, right over this way . . . Now aren't these lovely? They're the imported crease resisting linens. Of course they're a little higher but——"

"These are so severe looking."

"Oh, but they're so beautifully tailored. After all, that's the real mark of distinction in a woman's clothes, don't you think? I don't know how you are, but I just don't like too many frills."

"Are you sure I could wear one of these linens anywhere?"

"Absolutely. They're much smarter than silk this season. And anyway cottons are so much cooler."

"Still—I believe I'd like to look at something in silk."

"All right . . . Now here are some perfectly lovely little pure dye silk prints. See this one . . . with the adorable little jacket."

"I suppose they'd be rather warm."

"Oh, no! Not this pure dye silk. It's really cooler than cotton."

"I suppose they're a little higher than the cottons?"

"Yes, but it's really economy in the end to buy a silk, don't you think? You can always go anywhere in a silk and you can't in a cotton."

"Still they're so light in color——"

"This is a light summer. Everybody's wearing light clothes——"

"Say, haven't you anything at all in a dark silk?"

"Oh yes, I have a perfectly adorable little navy crepe jacket dress. Of course, it's a little higher——"

"Let me see it . . . Oh say, this really has distinction! Still—you don't think it looks too hot?"

"No indeed! Nothing looks as cool in summer as dark colors."

"Still it's so plain . . . and I've always worn so many dark clothes——"

"Say—let me tell you something. Nothing is smarter than a simple dark dress in summer. Now after seeing this dress, don't you really have to admit that everything else looks . . . well a little cheap?"

Margaret Lindsay Says Hula Is Best for Figure

Hollywood, Calif.—Dancing for the figure has long been a beauty secret of Hollywood, but Margaret Lindsay, who would choose to teach dancing as a second career, says every figure requires different rhythmic movements.

The only dance Margaret would recommend for everyone is the hula, because it is the greatest promoter of grace and does not result in bulging muscles. Every part of the body except the shoulders is put into play with the movements of this dance. Besides its use in developing grace and poise, the hula also strengthens abdominal muscles and corrects some minor spinal troubles.

Correct Color Scheme Gives Unity to Room

Pulls Unrelated Furniture Into Harmonious Whole

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IN A NUTSHELL, the trouble with most rooms is that they don't make any point, decoratively speaking. In design or theme, they aren't one thing or the other, but simply a combination of unrelated details. Often it would take very little to pull the whole thing together, but that little makes all the difference.

Take the Hunters' living room, for instance—the furniture was all right; so was the rug. But the effect was dull and uninteresting 'till Hilda Hunter took the room in hand. To begin with, the rug, an Oriental, was unusual, with dull green as the predominating color, so Hilda had the walls painted in the same green, only in a tone not quite as dark as that in the rug. The woodwork was finished in ivory, then Hilda selected a figured linen in cream with the design predominantly brick red. This she used for curtains, and to cover the wall in an alcove made by a pair of built-in corner bookcases. A smal sofa in green covering just fit in here and Hilda made a pair of small extra cushions for it of the same linen.

A pair of easy chairs were then covered in a striped material, predominantly brick red, while an extra armchair got a covering of dull, deep old gold. Accessories of brass gradually replaced the odds and ends, and Hilda makes a point to have plenty of yellow flowers in her garden to cut for this room—she also likes zinnias here.

Now the room has exceptional distinction and individuality—with the same old furniture. Take a hard-boiled look at your own room and see if the mightn't tighten up the colors to make the most of the things you have.

New York on Edge for Visit of Royalty Fleet Departs Leaving Lonesome Girls Kitty Carlisle Wears Hat of Two Peonies

New York, May 24.

WE IN NEW YORK face the prospect of greeting Their Majesties properly. We have had royalties here before, including the beloved Albert of the Belgians and the late Marie of Rumania. Now we are boning up on the better etiquette. We know that we should not turn our backs on the Queen, that we should mix "Your Majesty" with "Madame" or "Ma'm," and that we must not speak to her unless she speaks first. We're up on the fundamentals. Now our first and most heartfelt prayer is that George and Elizabeth will come, stay and go in safety. It's a ticklish thing, this, and we beg for the best of luck.

ALICE HUGHES

12345612345612345 6

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, the Atlantic squadron of the United States Fleet sailed safely away, its officers and men feeble and worn from too many parties. You know the classic gag about how sailors immediately make for the Central Park lakes and their rowboats. I thought it was a joke, until I visited the park and saw the lakes literally surrounded with gobs and their pretty little girls. Funny business. And while the jolly tars hung around the park ponds, over 500,000 of our citizens visited the ships at anchor in the Hudson. Some visit, all in all. The boys now need a good rest cure aboard ship.

The fair is always full of wonders to me. After gobbling caviar at the opening of the gorgeous Russian building (and watching spouse Hall inhale a few snorts of vodka), I went over to the Turkish pavilion, and was amused at the young ladies who staff the place, wearing Turkish costumes. The authentic harem belle who checks hats is Lillian Holmotz, of Brooklyn; one of the cashiers is a fine old Turkess named Nora Panteleo, a Brooklyn beauty, and one of the waitresses is Miss Diana Biederman, also a Brooklyn belle. Evidently they couldn't find any Turkish cuties to run the show.

HERE'S AN observation on the fair. It is so huge that even a big crowd doesn't fill it, and somehow it looks sort of empty and lonely on those occasions. Maybe it's just too darned big. But doggone it, it is a great show, and when it fills up, next month, it will be a panic.

There's no prettier girl in this town than Kitty Carlisle, of the stage and the screen. I saw this dark-haired doll at "21" the other night, and her "hat" consisted of two real white peonies, fastened to her midnight locks with a long brown veil. That might look silly on anyone but a real beauty—but Kit is certainly that.

WITH THE INFLUX of visitors, our Courier Service, organized by a Brooklyn lady six years ago, is plenty busy. This outfit has all kinds of guided tours on tap—restaurant trips, shopping junkets, Greenwich Village explorations, and even play tours for visiting kids. Very smart and useful, this affair—nand not very costly.

Perfect Your Manners

SMILING and full of pep! But Dorothy and John don't realize their poor manners are spoiling the chance they'd hoped for—to get in with Elsie and Donald, popular young members of the country club set.

If only Dorothy had known that a girl accustomed to courteous attentions doesn't scramble out of a car unassisted, trot off alone to her front door. And if John had only been quick to step out of the car first, swing open the door, walk with Dorothy to her house.

They'd have shown their new friends that they are "in the know," the sort of people you can take anywhere.

Manners are such pesky things if you are not sure of them, always tripping you up just when you want to be ultra-smooth. Clever to find out what really sophisticated young people do in different social situations.

What to say when you must brush by others at the theater? Not an elaborate "Pardon ME," but "I'm sorry."

What to do when you're not introduced to all the guests at a big party? Correct to introduce yourself to people near by. Say cordially, "I'm Joyce Brown."

Dining with your beau at a hotel where there's dance music, it's your privilege to suggest dancing if he says nothing about it. And wait for him to pull out your chair as you get up to dance.

Canned Soup A Timesaver In Summer

By Martha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor.

GLOBE TROTTERS say that there are only a few spots in the entire world where they have not been preceded by the traveling canned-soup salesman. Canned soups are an ideal timesaver and are good as they come from the can, but they may be varied in endless ways. Canned soups make good gravies and are fine substitutes for cream sauce and other quick sauces.

Quick Sauces

Heat the contents of a can of condensed soup—mushroom, celery, asparagus, pea, etc. If not the correct consistency thin with milk or stock or thicken with butter and flour.

Sophisticated sauce: Add 2 tablespoons sherry to the soup.

Fish sauce: Dilute with ¼ cup or more white wine or add 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Do not permit the sauce to boil after adding the wine. For a variation add ¼ teaspoon or more curry powder or dry mustard, 1 tablespoon horseradish or a pinch or two of a dried herb.

Creole sauce: Add finely chopped or grated green pepper, onion and celery. Chopped pickles, peppers or capers may be added and anything that appeals to you that will give sauce distinction.

Eye Care in Summer

If you want to avoid eye strain wear dark glasses or a broad brimmed hat on sunny days. Avoid too much wind in your eyes when you drive. To ward off crow's-feet about the eyes pat cream into the area. Rub it upward and outward to the temples with patting strokes.

Prints of Every Shade Prevail At the White House Garden Party

Sweeping Frocks Notably Few as First Lady Entertains for Petticoat Government; More Than 2,000 Bureau Heads and Secretaries Attend

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

SWEEPING FROCKS of the type that may be "high-style" when Their Majesties entertain at the British Embassy on the afternoon of June 8, were noticeably few yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess at a garden party at the White House.

In a crowd of more than 2,000 women, there were not more than a dozen flowing dresses. Street-length outfits, featuring prints of every shade and description, all-white ensembles and an occasional dark chiffon were favored attire in the throng representing Washington's petticoat government—heads of bureaus, Capitol Hill secretaries, and a scattering of other women who draw regular pay checks from Uncle Sam.

THE FIRST LADY, however, wore a long dress—one of the prettiest in her wardrobe—a flowing chiffon model with mauve and blue flowers splashed on a white background; blending bands of narrow grosgrain ribbon edging the flaring skirt and drawing in the full sleeves to a tight cuff. A broad-brimmed white straw hat, with a white veil and a band of ribbon matching the colors in her dress, further accented her ensemble.

Receiving with her were several Cabinet hostesses, including Secretary Perkins and a number of other wives of high-ranking officials, each one representing a Government department.

The guests, arriving for the most part on the dot of 4 o'clock, formed a long line that moved slowly toward the receiving group for an hour and a half. Standing with Mrs. Roosevelt were Mrs. Garner, Mrs. Bankhead, Mrs. Hull, Mrs. Morgenthau, Secretary Perkins; Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. William V. Howes, Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mrs. J. Monroe Johnson, Mrs. Harry L. Brown and Mrs. Ebert K. Burlew.

EVERY LADY in the entire assisting line had on a print frock with the exception of Mrs. Brown, whose two-piece knitted frock was solid yellow, set off with a wide-brimmed black hat. Mrs. Burlew was the only one in the group whose pink and black chiffon frock was, like Mrs. Roosevelt's, ground length.

There was a consensus of opinion among a sizable group of short-skirted guests, however, that longer dresses are more graceful and more garden-partyish; and when two pretty young guests floated across the lawn in trailing frocks, they attracted much favorable attention. Later, several others arrived similarly attired.

Mark my word, you'll be seeing more and more floor-length gowns at afternoon parties from now on, even though a couple of Cabinet hostesses have already made up their minds to wear the shorter type to the royal garden party.

MRS. GARNER, who goes in for useful dresses and is constitutionally opposed to buying an outfit for just one occasion—even a King's fete—will wear a street-length dress of black and Copenhagen blue chiffon.

Mrs. Woodring is another who has elected to "go short." Her frock for the garden party will be white cotton voile, with a full skirt and a wide hem a good way from the floor.

Thus far, Mrs. Swanson is the only Cabinet hostess—though you can be sure there will be others—who has come out in favor of longer frocks for the occasion. Her's, at least, will be down to the ground. She bought it for her son's wedding and she says that no matter what the others do, she doesn't intend to have it "cut off." Mrs. Hull, Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Wallace and Secretary Perkins haven't yet committed themselves.

BUT BACK TO yesterday's party. Mrs. Hull had to slip away early in order to bid farewell to the President of Nicaragua and Mme. Somoza. Others in the line stayed until the last guest had been received and then joined the crowd for the program.

Meanwhile, the two red and white marquees beneath which cakes and punch were served, drew guests by dozens and scores. The Marine Band, seated on a platform near the stage, presented an additional dash of color, their scarlet coats contrasting gaily with the green sweeping lawn.

A musical program, presented as a climax for the fete, featured Ann Sorber, soprano soloist, and the Telephone Glee Club under the direction of Robert Davidson. Gertrude Smallwood Mockbee was accompanist.

SEEN IN THE THRONG: Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, chatting with a group that included Miss Mabel Boardman and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding . . . Mrs. Harry W. Blair, in a snappy white and brown ensemble, meeting friends on all sides . . . Mrs. James Meredith Helm, wearing one of the prettiest hats there, a flower-trimmed model in shades of purple and mauve that blended with her semitailored mauve and white figured frock . . . Miss Maxine Davis, in a trim black taffeta suit, set off with a white chiffon blouse and a broad-brimmed white straw hat, trimmed in wide blue velvet ribbon . . . Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, in a black and white ensemble, stopping to talk with a group of her journalist friends . . . Mrs. John Enochs, in a smart black and white ensemble.

Very much missed were other high-ranking Government officials, who are in Winston-Salem, N. C., attending a regional conference of the Woman's National Democratic Committee. Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board, is there; also, Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, Assistant Administrator of the Works Progress Administration. Others I missed seeing in yesterday's crowd, if they were there, were Director of the Mint Nellie Taylor Ross, Mrs. Blair Bannister and Mrs. Benton McMillin.

Couple to Make Summer Home In Annapolis

Mr. and Mrs. William Theodore Lawry, who were married May 11, will make their home in the vicinity of Annapolis during the summer. They spent their honeymoon in New York and New England.

The bride is the former Miss Jean Bowman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Bowman, of Newport, Wash., and prior to her marriage worked at the National Archives. Mr. Lawry, who is an attorney for the Internal Revenue Service, is originally from Leighton, Ala. Their wedding took place in the River Road Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Virgil Cosby, the rector, officiating.

In the absence of Dr. Bowman, the bride was given in marriage by Representative Charles H. Leavy, of Washington. She wore a silk marquisette gown with a fingertip veil and carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaid, Miss Patricia Ferris, was attired in pink mousseline de soie and a matching turban with a small veil, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium. Lester Hook, of Washington, was best man.

Mrs. Ida James Writes 2d Book

Friends of Mrs. Albert James who enjoyed her first book of verse, "Gossamered Glory," which came out last year, are now congratulating her on her second book, "The Deathless Flower," recently published.

The wife of a prominent attorney, Mrs. James is a resident of 6800 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., and is active in both club and social circles. Although she began writing only a few years ago, her verse, written under the name of Ida Elaine James, has appeared in a number of magazines, and her work has attracted favorable attention of such noted critics as William Rose Benet, Henry Goddard Leach, William Lyon Phelps and Charles Edward Russell.

Clement Wood, a widely known poet and critic, has written the new book's foreword, which indicates that Mrs. James' work at its best places her in a class with Edna St. Vincent Millay, Elinor Wylie and Sara Teasdale.

Mrs. James has been vice chairman of poetry for the DiDstrict of Columbia Federated Clubs and has served as president of the Maryland Branch of the American Poetry Society. A graduate of the Wisconsin School of Music, she is also an accomplished pianist.

Stellita Stapleton Entertains in Honor Of Emlen Davies and Robert Grosjean

ANOTHER in the strenuous series of parties honoring Emlen Davies and her fiance, Robert Grosjean, was given yesterday afternoon by Stellita Stapleton. Mobs of their friends jammed the terrace of the Stapleton house on Massachusetts avenue, while the future bride and bridegroom leaned on a piano in the living room looking calm and collected.

Mr. Grosjean is half American, his mother being the former Mabel Lahr, of Evansville, Ind. He attended Princeton and is an alumnus of M. I. T. He has paid his mother's home town a visit annually except when business or college interfered. The couple met in Moscow, where Mr. Grosjean had been sent by the Frosted Foods Co. to help Ambassador Joseph E. Davies with the large supply of frozen delicacies he took to his post, but it wasn't till the couple met in Brussels again last year that their romance really started.

EMLEN wore a simple figured print yesterday, with green predominating, and a white hat with a tiny white bird fore and veiling aft. The hostess also was in white, a sports frock topped off by a corsage of gardenias.

Preparations for the wedding on Saturday at Oakington are proceeding a-pace. As the path leading from the house to the improvised altar is a round-about one, Senator and Mrs. Tydings have had special steps built through some boxwood so that the bridal party can proceed in a straight line.

SEEN MILLING ABOUT: Mrs. Elbridge Durbrow, wife of the United States consul at Naples, who made the trip here from Italy especially to be a bridesmaid at the wedding, as it was through Emlen Davies, when she was visiting her in Moscow, that she met her husband. Mr. Durbrow has been slated by the State Department to study economics at the University of Chicago next year, in line with the Government's new policy to have certain members of its foreign service personnel specialize in this subject. Mrs Durbrow will remain in this country until after the wedding of Eleanor Preston to Capt. William Ritchie, set for early June.

Miss Barbara Goodwin, of San Francisco, another who had covered quite a distance to be in the wedding, being introduced around by Nathan Bartlett . . . Arthur Vandenberg, jr., getting a lady a drink . . . Maisie Howard, in a spring print . . . Carolyn Chantry talking to Lieut. Count Ettore Filo della Torre di Santa Susanna, newly arrived assistant naval attache of the Italian Embassy, and owner of one of the longest names in the diplomatic blue book . . . Ann Wilkinson, who topped off her spring print with a white straw hat . . . Mrs. William T. Mann, just back from New York . . . Benjamin Plunket in conversation with Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, who poured tea.

Austine McDonnell, up from Middleburg for the party . . . Marion Shouse, arriving a bit on the late and breathless side . . . Charles Gaines, William Blum and Donald Downs among the bachelors . . . and many others, most of whom stayed on late.

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD, distinguished ex-publisher, and author of the autobiography "Fighting Years," which is enjoying such a success, is here from New York with Mrs. Villard for a few days. They are stopping at the Hay-Adams House while Mr. Villard does some business and checks up on his daughter, Dorothea, who has an interesting job here following legislative hearings for a well-known pacifist organization.

Yesterday afternoon Dorothea had a few friends in to meet her father in the charming small garden of her apartment on N street, owned by the Gordon Dunthornes, who live below. A tiny garden, surrounded by a brick wall, it is one of the prettiest small ones in Washington, with a gravel terrace surrounded by beds of iris, geranium, and other flora.

Dr. Sharp, Bride On Honeymoon

Now on their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. George Tarplit Sharp, jr., will return soon to make their home in Washington. The former Miss Hannah Tyson Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Dawson Lee, of Ellicott City, Md., and Dr. Sharp, son of Dr. G. T. Sharp, sr., and the late Mrs. Sharp, were married Tuesday afternoon.

The wedding took place at the First Baptist Church in Alexandria, Va., with the Rev. Pierce Ellis, pastor, officiating at the 6 o'clock ceremony.

The bride wore a white suit with hat to match and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. William Neilson, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor and only attendant. Dr. Sharp, sr., was the best man for his son.

The parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Neilson James Sharp, and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ford, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, were the only ones present at the ceremony.

Miss Wood Plans Wedding June 24

Miss Mary Elizabeth Wood has selected Saturday, June 24, for the date of her marriage to Dr. Alfred Clement Conte, of Providence, where she recently spent several weeks.

Small Groups View Mrs. Feis' Roses

So that her friends may enjoy the roses of her Georgetown garden, which are in full bloom this week, Mrs. Herbert Feis is asking small groups in from time to time for a cup of tea.

Yesterday Mrs. Feis, whose husband is economic adviser to the State Department, entertained a few friends in her garden from 5 to 7.

Betrothal Announced

Mr and Mrs. John Dillard Battle, of Spring Valley, announce the engagement of Mrs. Battle's daughter, Miss Dorothy May McDonough, to Edward Renee Saulnier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Saulnier, of Boston, Mass. The wedding will take place June 10.

Mrs. W. V. Andrews To Be Mrs. Blair's Week-End Guest

Mrs. William V. Andrews, wife of Maj. Andrews, U. S. A., who is stationed at Chapman Field, Miami, will be the week-end guest of Mrs. David Hunt Blair, who with Mr. Blair, makes her home at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Maj. and Mrs. Andrews formerly lived in Washington, when Maj. Andrews was on duty here.

Mrs. John Cudahy, Others Back in U. S.

A number of State Department officials or their wives arrived in New York yesterday on the liner Manhattan from Hamburg and way ports.

Mrs. John Cudahy, wife of the United States Minister to Ireland; the United States Minister to Denmark and Mrs. Alvin N. Owsley, and Charles M. Hathaway, American Consul General in Munich, were among the passengers. Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, former Surgeon General of the United States, was also on board.

Winifred Henninger Is Host to Parents

The Rev. and Mrs. George S. Henninger, of Indianapolis, are guests of their daughter, Miss Winifred L. Henninger. They will go from here to New York to attend the World's Fair before returning home.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Henninger was guest of honor at a garden party given by Mrs. Elnathan Kemper Nelson.

Holland's Envoy And Mme. Loudon To Give Luncheon

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon will entertain at luncheon on June 2 in honor of delegates from their country to the general assembly of the International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs, which is scheduled to meet in the United States for the first time, June 1 and 2.

Voteless Women Favor Allen's Reappointment

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz Elected President Of League to Succeed Mrs. Louis Ottenberg; Meeting Held at Y. W. C. A. Vacation Lodge

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Commendation of the reappointment of former Commissioner George Allen for the purpose of accomplishing the reorganization of the District government was expressed in a resolution adopted yesterday by the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters at its annual meeting. The league also signified its willingness to co-operate with him and his associates in the undertaking and requested that its own departments be given opportunity to be heard on matters in which they feel qualified to speak because of their study and background of information.

The resolution was introduced by Mrs. Charles Weston, chairman of government and its operation, at the business session held on the grounds of Vacation Lodge of the Y. W. C. A., Cherrydale, Va.

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz was elected president of the league to succeed Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, who has served for the last two years; Mrs. Robert Leonard, first vice president, filling the unexpired term of Mrs. Basil Manly, who resigned; Mrs. Weston, second vice president; Mrs. Edna Johnston, treasurer; Mrs. William Kittle and Miss Belle Sherwin, directors.

League Office Successful Project

An innovation in the year just closed was the establishment of an office for the local league. For the season's program including this added activity, the largest budget of the organization's history was approved, $1,926. This was raised in contributions and membership fees and more than $300 of the amount is being turned over to the new officers. Mrs. Leonard has been in charge of a volunteer office force of 27 members which has kept it open daily with a rare record of volunteer co-operation in such an enterprise.

Mrs. Henry Chalmers, chairman of orientation, another new project, reported success in the plan of acquainting new members at once with the organization's aims and procedure to enable them to choose promptly the department of work in which they wanted to join.

Mrs. Weston, reporting as chairman of Government and Its Operation, discussed the league's part in hte District's progress toward suffrage for its residents.

Mrs. P. W. Chappellfi, chairman of Government and Economic Welfare, read brief resumes of its work on housing, under the chairmanship of Mrs. George Galloway; relief, under the chairmanship of Mrs. David Cushman Coyle; unemployment compensation and a labor department for the District.

Mrs. Moore Gives Education Report

Mrs. Allen Moore, chairman of Government and Education, reviewed its study of adult education under Mrs. H. E. Mobley; vocational guidance, Mrs. B. R. Wood; nursery schools, Mrs. C. P. Cochrane; instruction for handicapped children, Mrs. William H. Savin; school visiting, Mrs. J. N. Saunders and Mrs. Cochrane; Federal aid to education, Mrs. Samuel Horne and Mrs. Mobley, and school libraries, Mrs. T. V. Smith; protection of academic freedom, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Savin and Mrs. D. Blaisdell.

In a summary of the studies of her department, Mrs. Moore emphasized "the great need for the schools of the District is freedom from municipal and Federal control."

Mrs. Gordon Waganet reported on government and child welfare in the absence of Mrs. Charles L. Hodge; Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, on government and foreign policy, and Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, on government and the legal status of women.

Meeting Continues Through Day

Committee chairmen reporting were Mrs. Joseph McKenzie, membership; Mrs. Albert H. Putney, publicity; Mrs. J. C. McCaskill, college membership; Mrs. Wendell Lund, arrangements; Mrs. C. S. Duncan, bulletin; Mrs. Joseph Low, registration.

The meeting began at 11 in the morning and continued until 4 in the afternoon, with a recess at 12:30 for luncheon. Miss Joy Cutter of the Y. W. C. A. staff, who is hostess at the lodge, was in charge of arrangements for the luncheon, served on the screened porch. The meeting was held beneath the trees on the hill behind the houses. While the business session was in progress in the afternoon, a group was rehearsing on the front lawn for a skit—"Saturday Night at the Women's Bureau and House of Detention"—one of the dramatic presentations by which the league illustrates needed improvement in District institutions.

A.A.U.W. Hears Miss Lenroot

The amounts of money allotted to children in the social security act are niggardly compared to the amounts allowed for the aid to the old, Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau in the Department of Labor, said last night in an address at a dinner of the local branch of the American Association of University Women. Introduced by Mrs. Charter Heslep, chairman of the social studies group, she spoke on "Federal and State Co-operation in Maternal and Child Health."

"The Federal Government contributes 50 per cent of the cost of aid to the needy aged and one-third of cost of aid to needy dependent children—a maximum amount of $30 per individual a month for an aged person and $30 for a family of a mother and two children in the case of aid to needy, dependent children," she said.

Greater Justice Is Essential

"It is established without doubt that in whatever area of life we look at—education, health, social protection and social assistance—we come to the conclusion that the burden of rearing and maintaining children must be distributed on a basis of greater justice than at the present time.

Referring to the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Education, Miss Lenroot declared that, "more than reorganization of school districts, construction of school buildings, and improved preparation of teachers is needed. There must be acceptance of responsibility for a continuous school program adapted to the needs of children of all ages from the nursery school or kindergarten through the secondary-school period, if childhood is to be a time of progressive growth and development and creative experience."

Equal Opportunity Safeguards Democracy

The democratic ideal will not survive and increasingly be realized in human life if the great majority of the population does not have access to opportunity which makes individual life valuable nad personality significant. Nor can such opportunity safely be denied to any minority group.

Others at the head table were Mrs. Robert Olesen, president of the club; Mrs. Richard Hogue, Mrs. Laurence Fleming, Miss Margaret Klein and Miss Eleanor Davis.

National Symphony Committees Have Tea at Home of Mrs. Parker

THE SUBURBAN COMMITTEES for the National Symphony, of which Mrs. Edwin B. Parker is chairman and Mrs. Robert Le Fevre, of Chevy Chase, is co-chairman, met at the home of Mrs. Parker, on Twenty-fourth street, yesterday afternoon. They discussed work for the orchestra and had tea in the garden.

Among the subchairmen present were Mrs. J. C. Mason, of Alexandria; Mrs. Christine Church, of Arlington; Mrs. John D. Cross and Mrs. Justin Lawnie, cochairmen for Silver Spring; Mrs. Thomas Tremeare, Kensington; Mrs. Leonard Nicholson, Rockville; Mrs. Roy Potts, Takoma Park, and Mrs. Lyla Nash Wartenbe, Gaithersburg.

THE MOUNT HOLYOKE CLUB of Washington will hold its last meeting of the year at the home of Mrs. Maynard Owen Williams, 6720 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., tonight. A buffet supper will be served preceding the meeting, for which the current officers, headed by Mrs. McFall Kerby, the president, will be hostesses. Election of officers for the new year will take place. Mrs. Ferdinand E. Ruge is chairman of the nominating committee.

MRS. HENRY H. FLATHER, chairman of the Little House committee of the Girl Scouts, with Mr. Flather, will open Temple Hill, their estate in Anne Arundel County, Md., Saturday from 3 to 6, for the benefit of the Southern Anne Arundel Community Association. Tea will be served with Mrs. Henry M. Murray acting as chairman of the hostess committee.

Tulip Hill, historic house of Samuel Galloway was built in 1745. It is particularly notable, from an architectural standpoint, for its front and garden doors, but the entire house, set in a grove of towering tulip poplars, from which it takes its name, with West River at the foot of the garden terraces is an embodiment of the spirit which pervaded Maryland at the time it was built. A long driveway leads from the public road to the house and brings the visitor to a portico with tall pillars supporting a triangular canopy embellished with the figure of a comfortably plump Cupid throwing flowers at those who pass below.

MRS. JEAN BENNETT, president of the Soroptimist Club, was the only member present at yesterday's luncheon, at the Willard, whose birthday fell in May. A rosewood gavel and a large birthday cake were presented to her by Mrs. Caroline Stephen.

The club each month observes "Soroptimists Own Day," when members' birthdays are celebrated and the program is devoted to talks by Soroptimists on their professions. Miss Cynthia Warner yesterday discussed her nursery school.

Army and Navy Aid Parties Held

The second of two card parties and teas given for the benefit of the Army and Navy Memorial Aid at the home of Mrs. Claude Dudley, Chamberlain avenue, Kenwood, was held yesterday.

At the first, given on Tuesday, the hostess was assisted by Mrs. E. S. Kellogg, wife of Capt. Kellogg, U. S. N.; Mrs. Julius Furer, wife of Capt. Furer, U. S N.; Mrs Claude Miller, wife of Col Miller, and Mrs. Charles D. Roberts, wife of Brig. Gen. Roberts.

Assisting yesterday were Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the chief of staff of the Army; Mrs. Edward F. McGlachlin, wife of Maj. Gen. McGlachlin, Mrs. David J. Rumbough, Mrs. Kellogg, Mrs. Roy T. Morris and Mrs. Leon M. Grant.

Tables for cards were arranged in the garden, on the porches and in the living room, and tea was served in the dining room. Flame colored snapdragons and white stock formed the table centerpiece and the same color scheme was carried out elsewhere in the house.

There were about 150 guests present on the two days. The proceeds go to the fund with which organization does welfare work among the personnel of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps in emergency cases.

Eastern Star To Hold Parties At New Temple

Mrs. Madella Smith, chairman of the auxiliary temple fund committee of the Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, has announced a series of garden parties to be held at the site of the new temple, Sixteenth and Euclid streets, on June 21, 22, 23 and 24

The executive committee for this event includes Theodore C. Lewis, past grand patron, chairman; Mrs. Selma Klein, vice chairman; Mrs. Tillie C. Chauncey, past grand matron; Harry Schmidt, past grand patron; Mrs. Nora Riley, Herbert S. Middlemiss, Jack Seal, Anna Smitskamp, John Batson, Joe Rice, Mrs. Rae Carl and LeRoy Meyers.

Beta Sigma Pi Chapter Will Meet Tonight

The regular meeting of Delta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, will be held at the home of Dorothy Pederson, Stoneleigh Courts, tonight.

The program will begin with a short business meeting in charge of the president, Emma Wooten, and followed by a debate. The subject of the debate is "That Great Ambitions Have Wrought More Good Than Harm to Mankind," with Margaret Dooley and Nadine Smith taking the affirmative and Emma Wooten and Muriel Morgan, the negative side. Miss Opha Thompson will also discuss "Music As an Art."

Montgomery Women Protest Probation Officer Appointment

Federation Members Requested to Attend Hearing Before Commissioners at Rockville; Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan Makes Report

The Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday adopted an emergency resolution protesting "the appointment of an unqualified" juvenile court probation officer. The action was taken at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the federation held in the Friends meeting House at Sandy Spring, with Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, the president, presiding.

The club women were requested to attend this morning's hearing before the county commissioners in Rockville at which the qualifications of an appointee will be considered.

Mrs. Whalen, in her annual report, stressed the vast amount of work done by the clubs for public welfare. She also called attention to the great amount of interest in fine arts which she attributed largely to the inspiration of the late Miss Annie M. Wilson, who was chairman of this department of the federation for many years.

Early President Attends Meeting

A distinguished club woman present was Mrs. George H. Wright, who served as the second president of the county federation 30 years ago. Other guests present were Mrs. C. W. Gregory, of Frederick, president of the first district of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. James Robertson, of Annapolis, president of the Fourth District. The welcome to the federation was given by Mrs. Eric Englund, new president of the Wednesday Club of Sandy Spring, hostess club for the day.

The guest speaker at the afternoon session was A. Cornelius, administrative assistant in the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Discussing crime over the country, Mr. Cornelius remarked on the small percentage of women offenders.

Mrs. A. B. Foster, as chairman of the loan scholarship, reported that the Annie M. Wilson art loan scholarship needed but a small amount for completion. She also stated there was at present a balance of $1,177 in the fund, nearly all of which had been promised as loans to girls in the county for use in September. A new feature in county education work is the Americus Dawson Allnutt Loan Fund, the first to be established by the federation for the use of boys.

Officers and Chairmen Report

Other reports were made by Mrs. Henry M. Milburn, of Kensington, recording secretary; Mrs. Almus R. Speare, Rockville, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sydney H. Karr, of Bethesda, treasurer.

Department chairmen reporting were Mrs. Franklin Goetzendanner, Bethesda, American citizenship; Mrs. William Ward, Gaithersburg, American Home; Mrs. Grace Ryan, Kensington, education; Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle, Bethesda, conservation; Mrs. Louis A. Abbott, Somerset, fine arts; Mrs. Edward L. Smead, Chevy Chase, international relations; Mrs. Gordon M. Kline, Bethesda, legislation; Mrs. Vestus Wilcox, Gaithersburg, public welfare; Mrs. Mrs. Otho Talbott, Rockville library extension; Mrs. Jacob Taylor, Kensington, publicity.

Chairmen of standing committees who also reported were Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, Chevy Chase, county government; Mrs. Ronald McDonald, Silver Spring Club extension; Mrs. George E. Pariseau, Bethesda, consumer relations; Mrs. Earl W. Macy, Kensington, resolutions; Mrs. J. Reed Bradley, Bethesda, district editor. The chairman of hospitality, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, was a member of the Hostess Club.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gives Advice To Writers

Mrs. Roosevelt, most distinguished member of the National League of American Pen Women, has written a letter for its May Bulletin, giving advice and encouragement to young writers.

"Perhaps the best advice that I can give you," she says, "is to say that everything you do will be better for every hour of work which you can put into it. You may never be a genius, you may never write the book you want to write, but you should be able to make yourself a competent writer in some line. It may not be the line you had planned to take up, but it may give you the satisfaction of expressing your thoughts to some purpose.

With customary frankness and sincere modesty she also answers a question which puzzles everyone:

Most Puzzling Question Answered

"And now, dear fellow members, you have asked me to write how I manage to do so many things. The answer is extremely simple. I have around me people who are far more competent than I am, and who not only do their own share of work, but carry much of mine. The details are all remembered for me. Many times I do not know that things need to be done until after they are accomplished. In addition, the press helps me to impress you by recording practically everything which I do in a day. If any of you told in detail every move you made from the time you got up until you went to bed, you would find that you did a good many different things and that the variety of your occupation was quite astonishing.

"At least that is my experience with almost every woman of my acquaintance. It happens that as wife of the President of the United States I do things more often with people who represent great interests here and abroad. That may not take up any more of my time than would your next door neighbor if she came over to borrow some flour, but it makes a splash in the newspapers and everyone thinks that I am doing more than the average housewife.

Mail a Duty Not to Be Avoided

"It is true that some things, like mail, are a part of my duty because my husband holds a high position in the Government, but I have the recourses of Government bureaus and a trained group of people to help me expedite the answers. At some other period in our history it might have been possible to live in the White House and be really only a hostess and an adornment to society. Perhaps the fact that the adornment part of it struck me as being rather difficult is why I have made an effort to do something on the various problems that come to me in the mail.

"In the final analysis, the answer to the question: "How do you find time to do the things that you do?" is quite frankly, "I don't. Most of the real work is done by other people."

Blue Triangle Ends Club Year

The Blue Triangle Club of the Business and Professional Women's Department of the Y. W. C. A. borrowed the theme of the New York's "World of Tomorrow" for closing banquet last night which was the final program for the club year.

Miss Sara Motley, retiring president, spoke on "A Century of Progress in the Blue Triangle Club" of Tomorrow." Special music was furnished by Miss Marjorie Haight and Misses Marion and Majorie Allen.

New officers also were installed. The new officers included: President, Florence Nichol; vice president, Minerva Whitmore; secretary, Evelyn Sawyer; treasurer, Esther Swenson; membership chairman, Emma Humphrey; recreation, Ruth Wagner; social service, Virginia James; public affairs, Tommie Lee Nix; Blue Flash editor, Helen Sunday; supper chairman, Flora Buchanan; music chairman, Marion Allen.

Among the honor guests were Miss Bertha Pabst of the National League of Women Voters; Miss Jessie Smith, of the U. S. Navy Department, and Miss Genie Sutton, president of the Xenos Club.

Peter Dounis Elected Greece Society Head

Peter Dounis last night was elected president of the Greece-America Society of Washington at a dinner meeting held at the Vezantium Greek American Restaurant. He succeeds Miss Annee Darlington, who has served for the past several years, and last night was elected recording secretary.

Other new officers are Dr. Harold Fowler and William A. Revis, vice presidents; Mr. Revis, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Fowler, Mrs. Dounis, Miss Patricia McKee and Miss Estelle Elliades, executive committee.

D. C. Women Attend Lyman Conference

Members of the Phyllis Lyman Colony, National Society of New England Women attending the conference of the national society in Osbury Park, N. J., include Mrs. George L. Palmer, national registrar and founder of the Phyllis Lyman Colony; Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, president; Mrs. George E. McCann, past president, and Mrs. Frederick O. Smith, director. They are stopping at the Hotel Berkely-Carteret, and today will visit the World's Fair on New England day, and be guests at a luncheon served in the New England building.

Accessories Can Make or Mar a Room

says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

I know many women who, having furnished their homes in exquisite taste in so far as the important pieces were concerned, ruined all their careful planning by a haphazard choice of accessories. One woman confessed, when I chided her for an ill assortment of china bric-brac in her otherwise tasteful modern living room, that she had had them for years and hated to part with them. Sentiment is an essential part of living, it's true, but it has its place. I suggested that she keep them in a little den she had, or if she wished in her bedroom, but above all else to remove them to any place where they weren't so flamboyantly wrong. So, first of all, have accessories thoroughly in keeping with the rest of your furnishings. Second of all, use all accessories with restraint. Rather none at all, than too many. If over-generous friends of family keep thrusting more and more upon you, follow the Japanese custom . . . use a few at a time, then put them away and use a new set, varying them from time to time.

Pan-American Co-operation Bill Approved

Sen. Johnson Questions Bolivia's Status as One of 21 Republics

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved yesterday a bill by Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, authorizing co-operation between this Government and 21 South American nations in certain civil activities.

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, who opposed the measure, raised the question whether Bolivia, one of the "21 republics" designated in the bill, was actually a republic.

George S. Messersmith, Assistant Secretary of State, was reported to have told the committee the form of Bolivia's government had no bearing on the measure under consideration.

Johnson said later he asked Messersmith to cite the authority for certain agreements entered into by President Roosevelt with President Somoza of Nicaragua. The State Department official said he had no knowledge of these agreements.

Mr. Roosevelt and the Nicaraguan President agreed on the extension of an undetermined amount of credit by the Export-Import Bank for highway and other improvements in Nicaragua. They agreed also on co-operation to develop non-competitive agricultural products in the Latin American country.

"If this was done under the authority of the Export-Import Bank," Johnson told reporters, "it conforms with the letter but not the spirit of the law. We have not repealed the constitution yet."

It was Johnson's contention that agreements of this nature should be approved by Congress before being put into effect.

The co-operation bill approved by the committee would authorize this Government to carry out projects in accordance with treaties, resolutions, declarations and recommendations at the inter-American conference for the maintenance of peace in Buenos Aires in 1936 and the international conference of American states at Lima in 1938.

Chamberlain Sees Soviet Pact June 5

The next step would be drafting of the pact, which probably would be done in Moscow.

There were reports Halifax might meet Soviet Premier nad Foreign Commissar Molotoff or Foreign Affairs Vice Commissar Potemkin in Paris or some other city for signing of the agreement.

Provisions of the proposed pact have not been disclosed. Informed sources said general principles, already agreed upon, include:

A guarantee of mutual assistance among Britain, France and Russia for aid in the event that any one of the three powers is atatacked; and agreement for immediate consultation and military staff talks among the three countries.

Note will be taken of pledges which Britain has given to Poland, Rumania, Turkey and Greece, but it is not known just what provisions will be made in this connection.

The Baltic countries will be left out, but Russia may give them her own guarantees if she wishes.

These terms follow closely the original proposals of Russia, which Britain first opposed on the ground that they were too far-reaching.

French Optimistic

Paris, May 24 (AP).—The foreign affairs committee of the Chamber of Deputies was given an optimistic report by its chairman today that "early realization" of a British-Russian accord was to be expected.

Belief was expressed that both Russia and Turkey soon would join fully the British-French led front, which now includes Poland, Rumania and Greece. Turkey already has an agreement with Britain, and Russia has a mutual assistance pact with France.

The French cabinet was expected to decide at an early meeting on cession to Turkey of the Hatay Republic formerly the District of Alexandretta of French-mandated Syria) as the price of a Turkish mutual aid pledge.

British-Polish Talks

Warsaw, May 24 (AP).—Although official confirmation was lacking it was reliably understood today that a British military mission has begun conversations in Warsaw with Polish military leaders.

An apparently inspired communique issued by the official telegraph news agency said, "Poland has no reason to raise any objections or reservations" to the negotiations between western powers and Soviet Russia.

War With U. S. Is Unthinkable, King Declares; Royal Pair Braves Winnipeg Rain in Open Car

The umbrella gave King George and Queen Elizabeth little protection yesterday as they rode in an open carriage through the streets of Winnipeg on Empire Day. Thousands of spectators crowded into shelter along the parade route of sodden flags and bunting spite the umbrella and spoiling another one of her ravishing outfits, this time a cocoa-colored ensemble, with a straw hat of the same hue, a smoky fox fur and a maple-leaf spray of enamel outlined in diamonds.

King George, wearing his undress naval uniform, had nothing overhead.

King's Hand Hurt

A sensation was caused when it was noted that two fingers of His Majesty's right hand were wrapped in bandages. He had caught them in a door on the Royal train. One report said that when the accident occurred he exclaimed: "Bother." This was discounted by men who remembered that His Majesty once profanity has been developed to its absolute zenith.

Waiting for the royal procession to come along, a crowd in front of the German consulate booed the swastika flag hanging from the Nazi building's staff. Police asked consular officials to take the banner inside as a precaution against trouble, but the request was refused. Complications were averted, however, when the King and Queen came into view, distracting the crowd's attention from the swastika.

After the usual round of parades, presentations and other ceremonial the King and Queen went to Fort Garry the former headquarters of the Hudson Bay Co. Here the 168-year-old trading company, which did much to win Canada for Britain, made good on a promise it made to King Charles II to pay two elks and two black beavers for their charter whenever His Majesty should enter the territory.

King George appeared today, and formally collected his "rent"—two elks heads and two beaver skins. The presentation was made by Patrick Ashley Cooper, thirtieth governor of the Hudson Bay Co.

Queen Mary in Pain

London, May 24 (AP).—Queen Mother Mary was officially stated tonight to be suffering as a result of the automobile accident in which she was bruised yesterday.

"Her Majesty Queen Mary's progress is taking a statisfactory course, though stiffness and pain are troublesome," said a bulletin issued at Marlborough House, her home. "An X-ray examination excludes any damage to the bones. The condition of the eye is improving."

Mention of the eye was in reference to an injury disclosed only today. This injury, "although painful, is not a source of anxiety," an earlier bulletin had said.

Danzig Protests Third Shooting on Border; Poles Say German Violated Frontier

By the Associated Press.

Free City of Danzig, May 24.—A third shooting affair on the border between the Free City of Danzig and Poland brought another protest from the Danzig Senate today as Nazis buried their first victim in Kalthof with the personal condolences of Reichsfuerer Hitler.

A German truck driver, en route from East Prussia to Germany across the Polish corridor, declared he was fired upon by a Polish border patrol at the Tczew (Dirschau) bridgehead. The driver was not hit.

A similar incident was reported at the same place a month ago.

(Poles said a Polish frontier guard fired in the air when it appeared the German driver was attempting to cross the frontier on foot.)

Arthur Greiser, the Free City's chief executive, sent two notes to the Polish commissioner, adding to a series of protests exchanged since Gustav Gruebner, an old-time Nazi, was killed in Kalthof last Sunday.

In one note Greiser protested today's incident at Tczew and named six instances in which he declared Danzig territory previously had been violated—among them several alleged crossings of the boundary by Polish troops and military fliers.

In the other note Greiser demanded recall of Thadeus Perkowski, assistant Polish commissioner, whose chauffeur killed Gruebner, and the chief Polish railway inspector. Greiser said the two were "compromised" in Gruebner's slaying, which foliowed an attack on the Polish customs house at Kalthof.

Hitler sent a large lily wreath by a special airplane to Gruebner's funeral in Kalthof today.

Japan Sees Plot

Tokyo, Thursday, May 25 (U.P.).—Kokumin, a newspaper circulating largely in military circles, alleged today that the impending British-French-Russian agreement carries a secret clause under which they would assist Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek

Maisky Cancels U. S. Talk

Geneva, May 24 (AP).—A short-wave broadcast which Ivan Maisky, Russia's delegate to the League of Nations was to have delivered to the United States and Great Britain was canceled by the Soviet delegation tonight two hours before delivery time.

The delegation's only explanation of the cancellation was that it was "for technical reasons." It was reported, however, that Moscow had ordered the cancellation after British Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement today on the progress of British-Russian alliance negotiations.

British to Join French Army In War Games

Paris, May 24 (AP).—A French newspaper reported today that British troops would join the French army this fall in annual war games which usually are held in eastern France behind the Maginot line of fortifications facing Germany.

Louis Brette, military affairs writer for the newspaper Excelsior, said a battalion of English guards would take part in the Bastille Day celebrations July 14 and "contingents of British troops will participate in our coming grand maneuvers."

He said the war games, in September, would bring a large delegation of British officers and troops.

The war ministry refused either to deny or confirm the report.

Italy Gets Hitler's Alliance Plan

Rome, May 24 (U.P.).—Reichfuehrer Hitler's plan for immediate Italo-German joint action to achieve their demands in Europe and Africa was understood to have been delivered to Premier Mussolini today by his son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Ciano, who returned today from Berlin, where he signed the new Italo-German military alliance.

At the same time Col. Gen. Erhard Milch, German secretary of state for aviation, arrived in Rome by airplane to begin discussions with Italian Undersecretary for Air Giuseppe Valle

Pilot Dies in Army Plane Explosion

Marlette, Mich., May 24 (AP).—An Army airplane exploded and crashed five miles west of here today, killing the pilot, Second Lieut. Hamilton McClure, 27, of Selfridge Field.

Lieut. McClure, whose home was at Fort Worth, Tex., was alone on the Plane.

Japan Reported to Have Halted British Liner and Seized Mail

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, May 24.—Firing two shots across the bow of the 16,688-ton Brtish liner Ranpura, a Japanese destroyer today stopped and boarded the vessel and confiscated London war office confidential mail 1 mile from Hongkong, according to the local English-language daily, China Press.

The halting of the liner has been generally reported, but the rumors of confiscation of the war office mail coul dnot be confirmed tonight.

Japanese navy ships today also stopped and searched the 17,537-ton French mail line ship Aramis 17 miles northeast of Hongkong.

The China Press reports the British admiralty has ordered destroyer escorts for all British vessels.

Shanghai, May 24 (AP).—Japanese leaders gave further strong indications tonight of determination to lessen the hold of Occidental powers on foreign settlements and concessions in China.

Friction on this issue was most dangerous at Shanghai and Kulangsu, international settlement at Amoy, South China, with Britain the chief opponent of the Japanese.

(In Tokyo a foreign office statement declared eradication of anti-Japanese activities in foreign concessions and settlements in China was justified "even if accomplished by resorting to force.")

Police Tell Of Brawls at Girls' School

Mrs. Smith to Call Katharine Lenroot As a Witness in Hearings on Ouster

Capt. John E. Bowers of the Seventh Precinct and three privates under his command yesterday testified on conditions at the National Training School for Girls during the regime of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith.

Scenes of disorder of disarming an inmate of a "foot-long" butcher knife, and of a free-for-all which resulted in policemen being struck by bricks, were described by the police to the District Commissioners during the second day of public hearings on the reasons for Dr. Smith's dismissal from the institution a year and a half ago.

Meanwhile, Dr. Smith disclosed she would have as witnesses Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the U. S. Children's Bureau; Mrs. Richard W. Hogue, former president of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. William Kittle, president of the District Minimum Wage Board; Dr. Winifred Richmond, St. Elizabeths psychiatrist, and Dr. Lucy Woodard, of the Miners' Teachers College. Dr. Smith will appear on her own behalf next week, she said.

Sworn At, Police Say

Testimony at the hearing included allegations that inmates at the training school were often seen roller skating along the school road and used profane language to passing policemen.

Opposing previous testimony, a former teacher said Dr. Smith did use discipline measures by placing unruly girls in the cell block, making them stack the wood pile and depriving them of "a very lovely" picnic at Dr. Smith's Maryland country home.

Dr. Smith used "endearing terms" to inmates to make them behave, according to Private Howard Smith. Dr. Smith denied this.

Officer "Disgusted"

Cross-examining Private Smith, the former superintendent demanded to know what terms she used. He replied: "Darling and sweetheart." When she asked how he remembered "so well," he said:

"Because it disgusted me at the time and I still remember it."

Mrs. Catherine Freeman Robeson, a former teacher, testified that WPA workers "caused much concern." She said the girls "made advances to the men."

"Always a Problem"

She testified she had been struck by a potato "as well as fists" by her charges. She said there was evidence of "fighting and immorality" among the inmates before Dr. Smith became superintendent, and "would always be a problem in the institution."

The hearing will be resumed today at 2 p. m. when Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, will call more witnesses to substantiate the commissioners in approving the ouster order by the Board of Public Welfare.

Gov. O'Conor Signs 16 D. C. Area Bills

Suburban Sanitary Board Authorized To Issue $200,000 In Temporary Notes

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 24.—Sixteen southern Maryland bills, affecting areas contiguous to the District of Columbia, were approved by Gov. O'Conor today.

The last was headed by a bill authorizing the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to issue up to $200,000 in temporary notes.

The Montgomery County police bill, which evoked a storm of protest on the ground it will place the force under domination of county political powers, was signed by the Governor.

The measure empowers the county to conduct its own examination for candidates for the force. At present the county must select new police from an eligible list established by the State employment commissioner.

Increase of 15 Men

The bill provides for appointment of a police civil service commissioner, an increase of 15 men, a pension plan for retired officers, a trial board, and a monthly salary increase of $5 after two years' service. The bill further exempts the 15 new appointees from any examination. They probably will be named by the commissioners at their meeting at Rockville Tuesday.

Another Montgomery County bill approved by the Governor vests the board of commissioners with discretionary authority to abolish the office of supervisor of county aid and transfer the work to the welfare board.

House bill 539, authorizing formation of the Maryland-Washington regional district in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties adjoining the District of Columbia, was signed.

Section 221, article 16, public local laws, pertaining to the Montgomery Board of Assessment, was repealed.

Incorporation of the town of Washington Grove was approved in another measure.

Glen Echo Bill Signed

The town of Glen Echo was empowered to convey certain property to the Suburban Sanitary Commission.

Other measures signed included regulations for employment of special attorneys by Montgomery County; excepting the Southern Maryland Tri-County Co-operative Association from certain taxes; regulating Montgomery County road maintenance; providing for payment of Montgomery County commissioners' expenses; conveying certain Montgomery County real property to Jesse A. Lay and Charles R. Jurley; relating to road maintenance by citizens' committees; governing Montgomery liquor sales; relating to reporting auto accident injuries in Montgomery County.

Two Washington County measures, appropriating an extra $2,000 for the county library, and forbidding court attaches to practice law, were signed.

Among State-wide bills approved were one permitting a 55-mile speed limit on dual highways and one clarifying the State unemployment compensation act.

The Governor vetoed six bills, five because of defective legal wording.

The occupational diseases bill, opposed by C. I. O. unions and favored by A. F. L. groups, was approved.

Guardsmen Aided

National Guardsmen were made legal employes of the State and eligible for accident compensation. The ranking National Guard officer was directed to obtain insurance coverage for guardsmen who may be hurt in peace-time duty.

D. C. Dentist Wins Honor At Peony Show

Dr. White Exhibits Rare Collection at Takoma Park, Md.

Dr. Earle B. White, of Kensington, Md., Washington dentist, and president of the American Peony Society, was awarded the certificate of special recognition last night at the eleventh annual peony show of the Takoma Horticultural Club held at the Takoma Branch of the public library, Fifth and Cedar streets northwest.

The collection of hybrid peonies grown from seed planted in 1931, which captured the honors for Dr. White, were bright red and similar to poppies. Dr. White who makes a hobby of raising peonies, claims there is only one other collection of this type in the world and that this is owned by Dr. A. P Saunders, of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y.

Besides Dr. White's exhibit of the 10 rare blooms were seedlings of "Lobata" brought from Perry, England, showing the first year's bloom of the hybrids.

The award was made by the show committee headed by Mrs. Howard L. Knight. Dr. White was the judge for the other exhibits.

Best Flower in Show

An 8-inch pink "Jules Eile" exhibited by Miss Lottie Fahrenbruch, 314 Takoma avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was judged the best flower in the show. C. E. Senseman, of Silver Spring, Md., won the ribbon for the second best flower in the show with his display of a white "Avalanche" measuring 5 inches in diameter.

The third best flower was a Japanese variety shown by Miss Mae Simpson, 1433 Longfellow street northwest.

Miss Fahrenbruch held the highest number of points in the show winning first awards in three classes and a third in the arrangements class. Miss Mae Simpson ran second, capturing three blue ribbons and a third in the miniature class.

John Bishop Ill

Clarence W. Moore, president of the club, announced that due to the illness of John Bishop, chairman of the twenty-third annual rose show opening at the library today at 8 p. m. George U. Graff will be in charge. The show will be conducted until 10 p. m. today and open tomorrow from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m.

Georgetown U. Founding Rites Begin Sunday

Pontifical High Mass To Open Celebration Marking 150th Year

Beginning with a pontifical high mass at 10:30 a. m. Sunday, Georgetown University will devote next week to academic exercises celebrating the 150th anniversary of its founding.

Delegates from universities, colleges and learned societies will attend the exercises, which will reach their climax Saturday with the Sesquicentennial convocation and award of honors at 4 p. m. on the campus.

A feature of the celebration will be the Sesquicentennial pageant on Friday evening, June 2, dramatizing the evolution of the university since Andrew White built a log house at St. Mary's in 1634 to instruct the Piscataway Indians and colonists.

Lectures Each Day

Conferences, round table sessions and lectures will be presented each day of the week by a different school of the university. Monday will be the day of the College of Arts and Sciences, Tuesday, the Graduate School, Wednesday, the School of Law, Thursday, the Medical School, Friday, the School of Foreign Service and Saturday, the School of Dentistry.

An alumni banquet will conclude the proceedings Saturday night, and commencement exercises will begin on Sunday, June 4, with the Baccalaureate Sermon.

An address by Attorney General Murphy, broadcast on a nationwide hookup from the John Carroll Auditorium at 3:30 p. m. Thursday, will conclude the Law School program. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the forum on monopolies on Wednesday afternoon, while labor problems will be discussed by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Joseph Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor.

Hogan to Speak

Speakers at other discussions will include Frank J. Hogan, president of the American Bar Association; Dr. James Brown Scott, honorary president, American Society of International Law; Edmund W. Flynn, Chief Justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court, and Prof. James Hart, of the University of Virginia.

Honorary degrees will be conferred on Speaker Bankhead and Hogan, both graduates of the Georgetown law school. The senior class of the law school will present an oil portrait of Bishop John Carroll, founder of Georgetown, at the Class Day exercises at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

Club Plans Memorial

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, chaplain of the Cosmopolitan Club, will conduct the annual memorial service for departed members at 12:30 today in the Carlton Hotel. Edmund O. Carl will preside.

Va. Safety Parley, Exhibit to Open At Richmond

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 24.—One of the largest groups of exhibits of safety appliances and educational displays ever assembled in the city was being arranged at the Jefferson Hotel here today in preparation for the opening of the annual Statewide safety conference tomorrow.

Col. Marion S. Battle, chairman of the executive committee, called a meeting of that group tonight to complete details for the three-day program.

More than 100 speakers will take part in the discussions which are expected to be attended by 1,500 to 1,800 persons. There will be three general sessions and 35 sectional conferences.

Accused Plotter Sent to Hospital

Douglas Goodnough, 27-year-old Fairfax County (Va.) painter charged with attempting to kill Blair Cupp by forcing him to drive in front of a speeding Southern Railway train, was ordered yesterday committed to the State Hospital for the Insane at Marion, Va.

Judge McCarthy, of Fairfax, signed the order after hearing testimony from Dr. E. S. Waring, of Fairfax, and Dr. J. Edward Payne.

'Closed' Distillery Operated, U. S. Agent Says at Kite Trial

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 24.—George H. Kirkpatrick, special investigator for the Federal alcohol tax unit, testified today that other agents had seen in operation, when it was supposed to be closed, a licensed distillery which Lester V. Kite, Melvin Kite and Charles Good are charged with having operated with intent to defraud the Government of taxes.

The witness told of a raid on the Lester V. Kite Fruit Distillery No. 4 on November 21, 1938, and identified photographs showing two 50-gallon barrels of brandy under inverted vats in the fermenting room of the distillery and another 50-gallon barrel under the floor.

Defense counsel objected strenuously to introduction of the photographs on the ground they did not show the whole picture of the distillery layout.

G. J. Strickler, Shenandoah merchant, and M. L. Foltz, of Grovehill, testified they had bought unstamped gallon jugs of apple brandy from Lester Kite.

Joe C. Guyton, senior inspector for the alcohol tax unit, testified he inspected the distillery, which was located near Stanley, July 27, 1938, and that he found no records that were supposed to have been kept there. Lester Kite had said his son, Melvin Kite, kept the records in Washington.

Guyton said he became suspicious of the distillery as it made no call for a storekeeper gauger during the busy season as other plants did. Only 33 barrels of apple brandy were gauged at the distillery in nearly two years, Guyton asserted.

Nathan Joffe, general manager of a Baltimore wine concern, said his company shipped residue from the manufacture of wine to the distillery for further distillation and that some of the shipments in return from the plant appeared to be smaller than the amounts expected.

Architect Asks Permit to Build 41st St. Houses

Opponents Reverse Stand; Had Believed Flats Were Planned

Matthew Lepley, architect, requested the Board of Zoning Adjustment to grant a zoning variance to permit construction of two semi-detached single family dwellings at 5409-5411 Forty-first street northwest. Five nearby property owners opposed the petition, but reversed their stand when they learned Lepley didn't plan to build four-family flats as they had supposed. Lepley represented L. Miller, local real estate man.

In another case, H. L. Thornton, of Aspen street northwest, who previously had signed a petition urging construction of five three-story apartment houses argued against granting of the petition.

Thornton, who said his great-great-grandfather owned all of what is now Takoma Park, had asked the board to grant a variance to permit the construction on the square bounded by Aspen, Whittier, Third and Fourth streets.

His earlier petition, which was denied, was opposed by T. William Buckley, representing the Manor Park Citizens Association; William H. Parsons, Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association; Mrs. Phillip Chase, 6616 Fourth street northwest, and Mrs. J. E. Miller, 6614 Fourth street northwest.

At that time Thornton said the property has been a loss to him for more than 25 years. He said apartment houses would be the only profitable type of development.

The Rev. Joseph V. Buckley, pastor of the St. Francis Xavier Church, 2800 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, appeared before the board in behalf of the Very Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore, asking for permission to establish a parochial school at Twenty-seventh and O streets southeast.

Area Kiwanians Help Form Club At Taneytown

Taneytown, Md., May 24 ((AP)).—Two hundred Kiwanians from three States gathered tonight to help organize the recently formed Taneytown Kiwanis Club.

The visiting club members, including high-ranking district officials, installed officers and presented the local group with its charter, flags, banner, gavel and bell, traditional equipment given each new club.

George E. Dodrer was installed as the first president of the new organization. Other officers were Elwood Baumgardner, vice-president; Irving M. Morris, secretary-treasurer, and seven directors—Dr. C. M Renner, Raymond Sauble, Charles Ritter, Raymond Wright, Robert Smith, Rev. Guy P. Bready and Wilbur Wentz.

Bethesda Library Group Formed

An advisory council for the Bethesda Public Library Association was formed last night of delegates from civic, educational and religious groups under the presidency of Anthony Gould. The meeting was called by the board of trustees in the County Building at Bethesda, and Emory Bogley presided.

A summary of the steps leading to the formation of the library association was given by Mrs. Walter Perry, secretary, and reports were heard from J. Henry Hiser, for the location committee; Mrs. William Winkler, for the book committee, and Mrs. A. B. Foster, for the membership committee. A proposed budget was presented by the Rev. Francis Cockrell.

Y. M. C. A. Old Timers Mark 3,079 Years of Membership

Charles H. Butler, Who Has Belonged To Organization 60 Years, Wins Gold Medal; 76 Others at Banquet

Three thousand and seventy-nine years of membership in the Young Men's Christian Association was celebrated collectively last night by 77 members at the annual Old Timers' Reunion banquet at the Central Y. M. C. A.

With 60 years of participation in the organization, Charles Henry Butler, Washington attorney, was given a two-starred gold membership card. Twenty other members with more than 50 years to their credit were also given gold certificates.

Thompson Speaks

Huston Thompson, attorney and former president of the Y, praised the organization as a builder of physical, mental and spiritual fortitude.

The Y. M. C. A. is doing notable work in helping "men adjust their lives to the civilized, or uncivilized, world in its present surroundings," Thompson declared.

Other speakers included Harry O. Hine, former secretary of the school board; Charles W. Pimper, and Charles H. Butler, who spoke in acknowledgement of congratulation of Leonard O. DeGast, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., who presented honorary membership cards.

Other fifty-year cards went to Arthur S. Cowsill, Leslie E. Collins, M. D. Chance, the Rev. J. D. Buhrer, L. E. Breuninger, Harry Blake, C. E. Beckett, W. W. Everett, E. C. Graham, C. L. Dinner to Honor Dean Dobie Set At Charlottesville

Charlottesville, May 24 ((AP)).—State Senator John S. Battle, president of the Charlottesville Bar Association, said today that a dinner in honor of Dean Armistead M. Dobie will be held at the Farmington Country Club Saturday night.

The event is dependent upon the Senate's confirmation of Dobie as Federal judge of the Western District of Virginia before that time, but Senator Byrd has sent word here that the confirmation can be expected within the next two days.

Among those attending will be Federal Judge John Paul, who is the present judge in the Western District. Dean Dobie, when he dons the Federal robes, will be a colleague of Judge Paul.

Mrs. Scott Wins Flower Award

Mrs. Eugene W. Scott, of Norbeck, Md., was awarded the sweepstakes award yesterday in the spring flower show of the Community Garden Club of Rockville, Md., for winning the greatest number of blue ribbons.

Gold ribbons were awarded to Mrs. J. Harry Gormley, Rockville, for artistic arrangement; Mrs. W. Randolph Talbott, Rockville, roses; Mrs. Thomas W. Troxell, Gaithersburg, Md., peonies; Mrs. Edwin L. Morrison, Montrose, Md., climbing roses; Mrs. J. Forest Walker, Gaithersburg, and Mrs. George Tillman, Montrose, perennials.

In the junior group, the prize for the most artistic arrangement of tall flowers went to Miss Elaine Cromwell, of Rockville. Miss Susan Helfrich, Rockville, received the award for the best arrangement of short flowers, and Philip Gates, Rockville, was the winner in the arrangement of miniature flowers.

Exhibit Reveals Efforts of Man To Aid Deaf

The centuries' old efforts of man to aid the hard of hearing are described in an exhibit at the Volta Bureau in Georgetown.

The exhibit describes how the ancients placed tubes from one building to another to listen in on various intrigues; how their ancestors used mighty hunting horns to carry their voices to the tribes or distant companions and to latter-day progress when the ear of the mule inspired the ear trumpet.

Then, there are the devices women wore under their hair, and a fan, made of a sheet of vulcanite, that ladies placed against their teeth, carrying sounds to their ears by bone conduction.

70 Resign In Kensington Chamber Row

Cleveland Quits As President With Other Officers

A factional squabble within the Kensington Chamber of Commerce was climaxed last night by the resignation en masse of its president, first and second vice presidents, secretary, treasurer, three of the four directors, 11 committee chairmen and 51 members.

The president who resigned is Washington I. Cleveland.

At the outset of last night's meeting, Cleveland read a prepared statement in which he cited the existence of "a bitter feud between two factions of the chamber which has resulted in the disruption of orderly procedure, prevented the transaction of business and rendered the organization powerless to function as an active civic organization representing the community."

Conferences between representatives of the two factions, appointed at the April meeting to iron out differences, were fruitless, he said.

Cleveland then announced that he and his supporters were resigning, effective at once, and would immediately organize a new organization to be known as the Greater Kensington Civic League.

Proceeding in a body to the Kensington Junior High School, the Cleveland faction voted to continue in office all the officers, directors and committee chairmen, with the exception of Richard F. Green, who had served the chamber of commerce and to apply for membership in the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Cleveland appointed a committee to effect organization, instructing it to report at a special meeting on June 7.

After the dissenting members had walked out of chamber meeting, Alfred D. Noyes was elected acting president; John Morgan, temporary secretary, and George Smith, temporary treasurer. The latter two succeed Leo Tooley and L. F. Curtis, respectively.

The chamber elected to membership 46 persons whose applications, according to Noyes, had been pending from two to four months without being acted upon.

The acting president said that permanent officers will be elected at the next meeting on June 28. He appointed a nominating committee, headed by R. F. Green, which will draft a slate.

Mastodon Relic Snagged by Youth While Fishing

Three little fishes swam right by Paul Tullar, 13, when he tried his luck in a stream near his Chafee, N. Y., home, but see how his patience was rewarded. He snagged this huge jawbone, and Geologist Irving R. Reimann, of Buffalo, identified it as an authentic mastodon relic. "Some catch," agree Paul and Mrs. Reimann as they examine the 5,000-year-old bone

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Careful, there, how you inveigh against the umpire. He may be Emmett (Red Ormsby, and you'd be hooting an American hero of the vintage of 1917-18. But the big fellow in blue you may have seen at Griffith Stadium the last couple of days probably wouldn't be bothered, anyway. Mere shouts of "Robber!" are vastly more pleasant than the zing of a thousand machine gun bullets that whistled past his ears in Chateau Thierry, at Soissons, on the Meuse, in the Argonne and at St. Mihiel.

POVICH

Red Ormsby, of the Fifth Marines, came through the big fuss in France, but not too nicely. At the finish he was in a front-line hospital, his being seared by mustard gas. He came back to the United States on a stretcher, but he came back, too, wearing France's Fourragere, the highest military decoration that nation can bestow.

"Gallantry in action," they explained when they pinned the gaudy braid to the breast of the red-haired Marine in a French hospital. When Red Ormsby invades a club's dugout to clear the field of any players that may be obstreperous, it's a comparative breeze for him. Not quite as tough, at least, as invading a German dugout with a fistful of hand-grenades and taking your chances.

Ormsby's Case an Exception

That was Ormsby's chief part in the World War, chucking those grenades and getting 'em nicely on their way in the allotted eight seconds after he had pulled the pin. But by his own admission, Ormsby was an unorthodox grenade-thrower. According to Army precepts, he didn't have good form. He never could get the same distance or the same accuracy throwing the Army-way, with the stiff-arm, overhand looping throw.

Back in his sandlot days in Chicago, Ormsby was something of a pitcher and when the top sergeant watched the big red-head get off a grenade with the regular snap-throw of a baseball pitcher, and get it off nicely, he made an exception. Ormsby could chuck that thing as he liked.

Yesterday, in the little umpire's room at Griffith Stadium, Ormsby said he guessed he'd thrown a thousand of the little bombs into German dugouts. A rifle wasn't part of his equipment. He had to get by with a revolver and an apron-full of grenades, eleven to the apron.

"I just stood up there and heaved 'em, until I saw what happened to a buddy of mine," Ormsby was saying. "Those Germans used grenades, too, you know, and one of 'em hit my pal where he was carrying his own. The whole eleven exploded and blew him to bits. After that, I was strictly a side-ways thrower. I wouldn't expose my front as long as I was still carrying one of those things in my apron."

Three times Red heard the zero-hour command to go over the top and three times he dashed into no-man's land. War made a fatalist of the fellow. He guessed it just wasn't his turn, then, to be blown out of this world. He guessed the same thing last year when he lay in a Chicago hospital for twelve months, received extreme unction of the church three times and heard doctors tell him he had no chance to live.

Considers Himself Lucky Individual

"I didn't figure it was my turn to go then, either. I told those doctors I couldn't afford to die. I had twelve children and Mrs. Ormsby to support. Now I'll tell you something: I didn't die. And today, I'm in fine health."

Two days before the Armistice, as he lay in a shellhole on the Meuse before the attempt to regain his own lines, Ormsby became a hospital case. "It was probably my own fault, though. They had told us to expect a gas attack, and I had lost my mask. I just had to lie there and take it until the stretcher-bearers came and got me. It was no fun."

He considers himself a lucky individual, at that. As he lay in a front-line hospital, his regiment, the next day, attempted to cross the Rhine and be the first outfit to move into Germany. It was a few hours before the Armistice was signed, and the Fifth Marines were literally slaughtered as they tried to cross on pontoon bridges.

"But let me tell you about one colored boy we had in our outfit. He comes back to our lines telling us he's just shaved off a German captain's protruding head with one swipe of his bayonet. We didn't believe it.

"'Dat German didn't believe it, either,' grinned the colored marine. "No-suh. Dat haid looked up at me fum the ground and sez 'you didn't touch me.' I sez, 'Mister, if you still think I missed yo, you just try to shake dat haid ob you'rn.'"

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 24.—Reporters aren't allowed in the impolite society of locker rooms, when the boys take their hair down, but with the aid of several of the active principals we are privileged today to bring you a medicated account of a locker room speech delivered by Leo Durocher to his sweaty artists after they dropped their fifth straight game on Tuesday.

CONSIDINE

It is sad that we must delete certain terms and old anglo-saxon monosyllables that made the speech a thing of great literary beauty. It ran something like this:

"All right, now, you ring-tailed apes, you saw today what happened to Poffenberger. Well . . . remember this: As long as I'm connected with this club no player is ever going to stay out after midnight, without getting a heavy fine. Who do you think you are? I can't get it through my head. You'd think you were going along with a fifteen game winning streak.

"A Real Heart to Heart Talk"

"Well, you're not. And unless you cut out this bone-head baseball, and give me a lot of fire and a lot of zing, you're not even going to be in the big leagues. Don't you like it here? Do you guys know what it's like in the minors? Listen, I've had 14 years in the big show. I don't know what I would have done without baseball. I love this big league life. I love it, being here, and I'll fight my purple gizzard out to stay up in the majors. That's what you're going to do, or I'll brain you.

"You lose another game, and lose it because your numb brains made you lose it, and you're going to get a little surprise. You're going to sit right here in the locker-room after you lose it. And you're going to sit and sit. You're not going to take a shower. You're just going to sit in your wet suits and think. Think about what those lame skulls have been doing to you. About the mistakes that made us lose.

"That ain't fun. They use to keep us in the locker rooms until 8:30 some nights, when I was with the Cards. And Frisch would walk up and down, up and down, and he didn't spare nobody. I was captain of the team, but he gave it to me worse than the rest. You never forget those things. And from now on I mean to see that you never forget that baseball is a little more than putting on a uniform at three o'clock and taking it off at five."

Leo was burning white hot. He had been blazing for hours before that. Not long before the final game of the Cincinnati series began he heard his name being called by Lee Grissom, the Red's eccentric left hander.

"Yah, y'no good so and so," Mr. Grissom was bawling at him. "I seen you come down sick yestiddy, so's you wouldn't have to bat against me."

Sounds Like Old Times, Eh?

Durocher walked over in front of the Red's bench, and cleared his throat. Speaking as much for the benefit of the adjacent fans as well as Grissom, he let loose a blast so ripe and lusty that the ground on which he stood never again will bear the tender fingers of grass. The blast had roughly to do with Mr. Grissom's antecedants, character, ability, looks and abdominal structure.

Grissom could think of nothing for a while. Then he blurted: "Yeah? Well don't forget that one of these days you'll be battin' against me. I'm pretty fast."

"I could hit you with a fungo bat, you wart-eared aard-vaark," Durocher roared. "If I didn't hate to exert myself I'd crease your skin right now. And, listen, if you ever throw one at my head I won't even duck. With that stuff of yours, it wouldn't be worth ducking, you (censored)."

Mr. Will Klem, the old arbitrator, whose job it is to see that members of rival teams don't fraternize before a game, hove into view but Durocher finished the sentence. "I guess that'll cost me fifty," Leo said, "but it was worth it."

"Gracious, no," sighed Will. "It was real nice to hear you, Leo. Took me back 40 years."

Still furious, Leo stalked over to the Dodger bench. Half way across he passed easy-going Ernie Lombardi. And out of the corner of his mouth, big Ernie said:

"Don't mind Grissom, pal. If you think Poffenberger's wacky, you oughta get a load of that hooligan we got. We're chippin' in soon to get the big chimp a cage."

500,000 See Blue Peter Win Derby

Fox Cub Second; William Woodward's Hypnotist Runs Out Of Money at Epsom

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Sports Correspondent.

Epsom, England, May 24.—Lord Rosebery's Blue Peter defied the fates that haunt a favorite today and won England's 155th Derby with a smashing drive down the stretch that ran his 26 rivals into the emerald turf of Epsom Downs.

Favored at 7 to 2 as the biggest field since 1922 cantered up to the post, Blue Peter, a chestnut son of Fairway and Fancy Free, ran the tortuous mile and a half course as if he owned it.

He came home striding smoothly and fully four lengths ahead of Edward Esmond's Fox Cub with Lord Derby's Heliopolis, the early leader, another three lengths back.

U. S. Horses Run Out

The two American standard-bearers, William Woodward's Hypnotist and Ralph Beaver Strassburger's Salford II, never seriously figured. Hypnotist, carrying Woodward's hopes of winning the Kentucky and English derbies in the same year, challenged briefly, but finally wound up seventh. Salford II was twelfth.

Blue Peter's time was 2 minutes 36 4-5 seconds, well off the stake record of 2:32 3-5 set by S. Joel's Pommern in 1915, when the race was run at Newmarket. The stake record as far as the Epsom Downs course is concerned was set at 2:34 flat by Lord Derby's Hyperion in 1933 and equaled by the Maharajah of Rajpipla's Windsor Lad the following year.

500,000 See Event

A crowd of close to half a billion, including the Dukes of Kent and Gloucester, saw the powerful chestnut come rolling home in front, first favorite to win the Derby since 1935.

It was an exceptionally popular victory among the "common people," who had wagered thousands of crinkly pounds on the favorite's sturdy back.

The bookies were a little less enthusiastic. They dropped the equiv-

Masterson Chased; Griffs Get 14 Hits

Travis Hits Homer With Man on Base; Welaj's 2 Doubles Produce 4 Runs

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats—of all people—scored 16 runs yesterday in a sudden show of power not previously identified with Mr. Clark Griffith's 1939 product. Spraying basehits all over the premises, they slugged their way out from behind a 5-0 deficit and licked the St. Louis Browns by the score of 16 to 6.

The proceedings contained 14 Washington hits of assorted dimensions topped off by the club's fourth home run of the season, the contribution of Cecil Travis with a man on base. But the actual leader of the Nats' attack was Rookie Johnny Welaj, who did a mopping-up job with a brace of two-baggers and a single that produced four Washington runs.

No pain was caused among the 3,000 cash customers and the 7,000 schoolboy patrol guests by Shortstop Charley Gelbert, either. Three Nats scurried home when Gelbert swatted a two-bagger against the left field wall in the fifth inning.

Masterson Rescued

What the Nats did was rescue young Walter Masterson from a very dismal afternoon on the pitching mound. Making his second big league start, Masterson surrendered five runs to the Browns in three innings of wild and ineffective pitching and was removed from the scene.

Ken Chase turned in a clever relief job thereafter, to receive credit for the victory. Chase kept the Nats in the ball game by holding the Browns to a single run in the last six innings, striking out five batters along the way and allowing only five hits.

The Nats found young Jack Kramer, prize rookie of the Browns' pitching staff, facing them at the start. Kramer's 5-3 lead and young Mr. Kramer himself disappeared from the scene in the uproarious fourth inning, when six hits moved five Washington runs across the plate.

Take Early Lead

Nine Nats went to bat in each of the fourth, fifth and sixth innings, with lefthanded Howard Mills the subject of the carnage after Kramer had been removed. Nine of the fourteen Nats' hits were achieved at the expense of Kramer.

By the time the Nats got around to scoring, the Browns had five runs off young Masterson. They picked up three in the first inning after a wild throw by Early and a pass to McQuinn. Singles by Hoag and Mazzera produced the runs.

In the third the Browns performed the feat of scoring two runs on no hits whatsoever. A walk, a wild throw by Lewis and a hit batsman

Chapman Beats Yates in British Amateur Golf

Holt, Another U. S. Player, Also Gains English Semifinals

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Sports Correspondent.

Hoylake, England, May 24.—Dick Chapman, a crooner from Greenwich, Conn., with a rhythmical putter, defeated Defending Champion Charley Yates, of Atlanta, Ga., in the third round of the British amateur golf championship today after one of the truly inspired half hours in the history of this tournament.

Chapman, who went to the semifinals of the United States Amateur last year, turned back the Southerner, 5 and 3, and with him into the fourth round went "Trailer" Bill Holt, of Syracuse, with a 3 and 2 decision over D. S. Coates, of England.

Ellsworth Vines, better known for his tennis, also fell by the wayside, losing to John Baillieu, a splendid player from Australia, 2 and 1, after giving a fine exhibition in turning back E. N. Ratcliffe, of England, 4 and 3, earlier in the day in a second-round encounter.

Putting Beats Yates

Four putts eliminated Yates, and they were all crowded into that one-half hour.

The first came at the tenth, where the Royal Liverpool Course runs over to the edge of the Irish Sea. Chapman, 2-up at the turn, had cracked a No. 3 iron shot pin high to the sloping green. More than a thousand spectators scrambled high on the surrounding sand dunes to watch the New Englander putt. He tapped that 30-foot putt high on the hill and watched it roll until it reached the cup and disappeared.

Momentarily Chapman faltered at the short eleventh, where he missed a putt and lost the hole, but he was back again at the twelfth with a putt that finally broke the champion's heart. After two great shots, Chapman's ball lay high above the pin on the fringe of the green, 45 feet from the cup. Yates was dead in three and it looked as if Chapman would be lucky to get a half.

Drops 18-Footer

But the New Englander bolted the ball down the hill with his ancient aluminum putter and it must have seemed to Yates to roll forever as it jumped across that fringe and rolled and fell and curved against the hill until it finally vanished.

Even then, though he was 3 up, the crooner wasn't through. At the fourteenth, again smoking cigarettes in chain fashion, Chapman dropped in an 18-footer to go 4 up. He marched from there to the fifteenth, hit his third shot 20 feet dead above the hole and with scracely a glance at the cup rammed the putt down.

Yates took off his old tan cap, ran his hand through his hair as the putt

Tigers Rout Ferrell, End Yank Streak, 6-1

Trout Gives 7 Hits, Hands Champs First Defeat in 13 Games; Gehringer and Walker Hit Homers

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Proving that the world champion Yankees are vulnerable sometimes, if not often, the Detroit Tigers slugged their way to a 6-to-1 victory today to give New York's American League leaders their first defeat in 13 games.

While Paul (Dizzy) Trout, a rookie righthander, was scattering seven hits and keeping well out of danger, the Bengals worked out on three Yankee hurlers for ten hits.

Gehringer Starts It

The veteran, Charley Gehringer, started the trouble in the first frame by sailing a long liner past Tommy Henrich in centerfield for a home run inside Yankee Stadium. It was his sixth of the season.

Wes Ferrell got over this hurdle and lasted until the fifth, when the Tigers really tore into his offerings, getting 4 runs on four hits and leaving the bases filled when they were finally retired.

Trout himself opened the firing with a single, and Dixie Walker brought him around with a homer into the rightfield stands.

Two Relief Hurlers

After Gehringer walked and Hank Greenberg doubled, Steve Sundra went to the mound and purposely passed Roy Bell, filling the bases. Ralph Kress' sacrifice fly brought in a run, but Billy Rogell walked, again loading the bases, and George Tebbett's scratch hit over second scored another.

Detroit's final run came in the eighth after Bump Hadley had taken charge for the Yankees. Barney McCoskey walked, advanced on a sacrifice and scored on Gehringer's single.

The Yankees averted a shutout by

Virginia Hurdler Out of 4-A Games In Fall Down Steps

Charlottesville, Va., May 24 (AP).—University of Virginia officials said tonight a leg injury suffered in a fall on Fraternity House steps would prevent Frank Fuller, ace Cavalier hurdler, competing in Saturday's I. C. 4-A meet in New York.

Strained muscles and bruises will keep Fuller off the track during the remainder of the current season.

Boston, May 24 (AP).—Tranier Willie Sorrentino, of New York, as well as all horses owned and trained by him, were suspended today by stewards of the Suffolk Downs race track. The stewards announced that a saliva test of Last Romance, Sorrentino-owned entry which won the last race Saturday at odds of 11 to 1, had showed a positive reaction.

Eddie Smith Holds A's in Night Game To Gain 4-1 Victory

By International News Service.

Philadelphia, May 24.—Eddie Smith the young southpaw Jimmie Dykes picked up from the Athletics three weeks ago for the waiver price of $7,500, came back to haunt Connie Mack right in his own backyard tonight when he hurled the Chicago White Sox to a 4-to-1 triumph.

The chunky blond, who had asked for the pitching assignment against his former mates, allowed only five hits.

After the Athletics had got their one run in the fourth, the White Sox tied up in the fifth on successive singles by Tresh, Smith and Bejma. Then in the eighth Bejma opened with a whistling single that launched a three-run splurge.

Nyack, N. Y., May 24.—Two-ton Tony Galento, wearing an ice cream suit and a large stogie, invaded Lou Nova's conditioning grounds today, without invitation, and threw the training camp into temporary confusion by:

(1) Irritating Nova and Manager Ray Carlen with his presence and pleasantries;

(2) Predicting unexpectedly that Nova "will knock out that bum, Maxie Baer, before the tenth round;"

Davis Hurls St. Louis To Victory

Sixth Straight Triumph; Play Cincinnati Friday, Saturday and Sunday

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 24.—Curt Davis gave another example today of the brilliant pitching that has sent the St. Louis Cardinals to the top of the National League and has kept them there ahead of the charging second-place Cincinnati Reds.

Davis, who came to the Cards from Chicago in the Dizzy Dean deal, blanked the Boston Bees, 7 to 0, for his sixth victory of the season and his second shutout. It was the Cards' sixth straight win and their twelfth in the last 14 games.

Davis pitched only day before yesterday, coming to the rescue of Morton Cooper in the ninth inning and turning back three men in a row to save a 2-to-1 victory over Philadelphia. I the last six games, Cardinal pitchers have allowed only 6 runs and 39 hits.

After another game with the Bees tomorrow, the Cardinals take on the Reds in a four-game series, ending

Phillies Lose 7th in Row To Cubs, 3-2

Passau Gives 7 Hits And Fans Eight But Mates Fail

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 24.—Claude Passeau limited the Chicago Cubs to seven hits and struck out eight today, but the Philadelphia Phillies went down to a 3-to-2 defeat—their seventh in a row.

Although Larry French gave up 11 hits, the veteran lefthander was able to win his third successive victory of the season. French suffered only one bad inning, the seventh, when the Quakers landed on him for five singles in a row. A double play finally got him out of the jam and he went on to finish the game.

Passeau mowed down the Cubs in all but the first and fourth innings, the Chicago scoring frames.

Pirates Chase Tamulis, Beat Dodgers, 6-3

Brooklyn's 6th Defeat In Row; Dolph Camilli Hits Eighth Homer

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 24.—Batting Vito Tamulis out of the box with a 4-run flurry in the sixth inning, the Pittsburgh Pirates stopped Brooklyn, 6 to 3, today for the Dodgers' sixth successive defeat.

Joe Bowman went the route for the Pirates on nine hits, of which seven came in the last four innings after Pittsburgh had moved out in front.

Dolph Camilli's eighth homer of the spring put Brooklyn out in front in the second inning, but even their umpteenth change in batting order failed to help the Dodgers and their only other scoring was a run in the eighth on Goodie Rosen's triple and a sacrifice, and a run in the ninth on Fred Sington's double and a pair of singles.

In the meantime the Pirates tallied once in the third on a walk and Arky Vaughan's double, 4 in the sixth on two passes and four hits, and once in the eighth on a walk and two singles.

Tamulis was succeeded by Fred Fitzsimmons and Hugh Casey.

Newark Again Beats Orioles

Newark, N. J., May 23 (AP).—Newark made it three in a row here tonight by defeating the Orioles, 6 to 5. Marcus Beddingfield made his starting debut for the Bears and gave up seven hits in seven and one-third innings, giving way to Norman Branch in the eighth.

Harry Matuzak opened for the Flock and got off to a shaky four-run, five hit first inning. He gave way to Jim Reninger in the ninth.

Schulte paced the 11-hit Bear attack with four safeties. Holm homered for Newark and Gabrielson for the Birds.

President's Letter Praises Memorials To Baseball Game

Cooperstown, N. Y., May 24 (AP).—President Roosevelt called nationwide attention to the hundredth anniversary of baseball in a letter made public today by the National Baseball Museum.

The Museum and Doubleday Field, named for Maj. Gen. Abner Doubleday, who "invented" the game in much the same form as it is now played at Cooperstown in 1839, will be dedicated June 12.

The President's letter said:

"It is most fitting that the history of our perennially popular sport should be immortalized in the National Baseball Museum at Cooperstown, where the game originated and where the first diamond was devised a hundred years ago.

"Baseball has become, through the years, not only a great national sport, but also the symbol of America as the melting pot. The players embrace all nations and national origins and the fans, equally cosmopolitan, make only one demand of them: Can they play the game?

"It seems to me that the museum will be a place of special interest, particularly in this centennial year of baseball."

from Orange, N. J., might ruin Nova's morale by calling Lou a "bum" during his workout.

Hence there was electricity in the air today during young Nova's seven fast rounds with Jorge Brescia and Jimmy Smith in the indoor gymnasium. Like a G-man covering a spy, Carlen watched Tony's every move.

But there was no cause for alarm. Tony surprised everyone by praising the young Californian to the stratosphere. He said, "Lou looks awful good. What a left hand! Why, it's almost as good as my own. An' he steps aroun' like a lightweight. I kin see he's a puncher, too, the way he throws that right."

Hudlin Hurls As Tribe Beats Red Sox, 6-2

Fifth Victory for Veteran Hurler; Willis Hits Homer, Double

Boston, May 24 (AP).—Willis Hudlin, dean of the Cleveland pitching staff, clubbed and hurled the Indians to a 6-2 victory over Boston's Red Sox today in the opener of a two-game series.

It was the fifth victory for Hudlin, who a few seasons ago couldn't win a game until the next-to-last day of the baseball year. His second-inning double off Jack Wilson, Boston starter, brought home the Tribe's first two runs. His ninth-inning homer off Joe Heving, Wilson's successor, accounted for another run.

Hudlin gave up only four hits as his mates got 11, and lost a shutout because two Cleveland errors were mixed with singles by Cramer and Cronin in the sixth, when Boston scored its two runs.

Bladensburg Nine Wins, 15-2

Behind the six-hit pitching of Blythe, Bladensburg High won its third victory of the season yesterday, smashing two Maryland Park High hurlers for 18 hits and a 15 to 2 triumph. The long range hitting of Kutch and Rowlands, the first with triples in the second and eighth and the second with a two-run homer in the fourth, featured the game.

Maryland Park knotted the score once, in the third with its only two runs of the game, but three tallies in the fourth put Bladensburg out in front for good. Parker and Palmer, of the losers, contributed a pair of hits apiece, but the rest of the club was unable to solve Blythe's style.

Derringer Blanks N. Y. With 5 Hits

Gumbert Chased In Fifth Inning; McCormick Hits Eighth Home Run

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 24.—Paul Derringer shut out the New York Giants on five hits today as the Cincinnati Reds slugged their way to their ninth consecutive victory, 6 to 0.

Starting with two runs on three hits in the first inning the Reds punched disrespectfully at the offerings of Harry Gumbert, the Giants' No. 1 flinger, until they brought about his removal by a three-run splurge in the fifth.

Lonnie Frey tripled, scored on Ival Goodman's double, and he in turn came in on Bucky McCormick's eighth homer of the season. The Reds got two more hits and filled the bases later in this frame without further scoring.

Their final run came in the eighth off Dick Coffman, who had followed Jim Lynn to the mound. Bill Werber doubled and two sacrifices brought him home.

It was the fifth victory for Derringer against one setback.

Dempsey Here to Urge Repeal Of Law Prohibiting Fight Films

National figures of the prize fight industry, including Jack Dempsey and Col. John Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, will urge the repeal of the Federal law prohibiting the transportation of fight films at a hearing before a Senate committee today.

Author of the bill to rescind the law is Senator Warren J. Barbour, of New Jersey, the Senate's foremost fistic figure. Senator Barbour, former national amateur heavyweight champion, was time-keeper at the Willard-Dempsey fight at Toledo in 1919.

Represented also at the hearing will be the National Association of Broadcasting Companies, which is interested in producing television of fights and considers the present law an obstacle.

Maj. Ernest E. Brown, superintendent of the District police, and chairman of the District Boxing Commission, will also testify on behalf of Senator Barbour's bill.

The hearing opens at 10 a. m. in room 412, Senate Office Building.

Navy Plebes Track Team Beats Tome

Strong Yearling Squad Takes 7 Events; Fort Deposit, 105¾-11½

Annapolis, Md., May 24.—Scoring firsts in all seven track events, the Navy Plebe team, probably the strongest the yearlings have ever had, overwhelmed Tome School here this afternoon, 105¾ to 11¼.

Hahnfeldt, weight man; Gutting, hurdler and broad jumper, and Herzberger, sprinter, scored among them a total of 39 points for the Plebe.

The Plebes took firsts in the mile run, 100-yard dash, shotput, pole vault, javelin, discus and pole vault.

Ed Hahnfeldt, former athlete of Bullis School, easily won all weight events, heaving the 12-pound shot 56 feet 11½ inches. This, however, was not up to his own record.

Phil Gutting, another next year's varsity hopeful, won the low hurdles and tied for first in the high hurdles and broad jump.

Alex Hopley, Plebe sprinter, did not compete today because of a bad leg, but firsts in both the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes were taken by Roy Herzberger.

District Women Golfers Beat Baltimore in Inter-City Match

Mrs. Davy's 76 Lowest Score of Day

Meckley-Brown Show Best Teamwork With Par 70; Play There in October

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Treating their guests to the hottest scoring show of the season, Washington's all-star women's golf team routed Baltimore's best, 15½ to 2½, in the first inter-city match of the season yesterday at Manor.

Mrs. Myron Davy, playing on the No. 2 team with Mrs. Walter Stokes as a partner, was just six shots over men's par with a 76, lowest score of the day by two shots and the lowest competitive round of her career.

But the best teamwork went to the top team of the winners, Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and the host club star, Marion Brown, who matched par figures with a 70. Mrs. Meckley had 78 and Miss Brown 80, but they halved only three holes all day in recording the par total.

Sizeable Victories

Mrs. Stokes cut five shots off Mrs. Davy's score as they were a stroke higher with 71.

Mrs. Meckley and Miss Brown won each nine and the 18-hole match by sizeable margins, over the newly crowned Maryland State champion, Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Suburban, and the medalist in the same event, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore C. C.

The victims of the Davy-Stokes combination were Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, ruler of the Maryland State throne for many years, and Mrs. M. Louise Bell, of Rodgers Forge.

3-Point Sweep

The other duo scoring a three-point sweep was the Manor's combination of team captain Mrs. J. F. Dowdall and Mrs. H. J. Simons. Chevy Chase's inseparable team of Mrs. Landra Platt and Mrs. Bishop Hill accounted for 2½ points for their contribution.

Mrs. C. D. Warfield and Mrs. W. D. Bahn accounted for over half of the vistors point total, breaking even with Mrs. Hume Peabody, newcomer to inter-city play from Army and Navy and Indian Spring's southpaw, Mrs. K. S. Giles.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern and Mrs. L. G. Pray halved one nine and won the other and the 12-hole match in scoring 2½ points over Mrs. H. C. Trace and Gladys Greiner.

Play in Baltimore Next

The losers will entertain the District team in October in an attempt to avenge the most one-sided decision in the series. Washington won both matches last year but by closer scores.

Mrs. Davy was out in 39 but a stroke off par figures by starting back 4-3-3 on the outside nine. She lost two strokes on the fourteenth with a disastrous six, but it was her only real slip of the round.

The victory was partial revenge for the loss of the medalist and championship honors in the State play at Congressional last week, to the Baltimore delegation.

Washington, 15½; Baltimore, 2½

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and Marion Brown, Manor (Washington) scored 3 points to 0 for Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Suburban, and Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore C. C.

Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, and Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring (Washington) scored 3 points to 0 for Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, Elkridge, and Mrs. M. Louise Bell, Rodgers Forge.

Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase (Washington) scored 2½ points to ½ for Effie Bowes, Baltimore C. C., and Jeanette Myers, Suburban.

Mrs. C. S. Stern, Indian Spring, and Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor (Washington) scored 2½ points to ½ for Gladys Greiner, Baltimore C. C., and Mrs. H. C. Trace, Rodgers Forge.

Mrs. Hume Peabody, Army and Navy, and Mrs. K. S. Giles, Indian Spring (Washington) scored 1½ points to 1½ for Mrs. C. D. Warfield, Green Spring Valley, and Mrs. W. D. Bahn, Baltimore C. C.

Mrs. H. J. Simons and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, Manor (Washington) scored 3 points to 0 for Mrs. William H. Evans, Elkridge and Mrs. Alexander Gordon, Elkridge.

dropped, and then walked over and shook Chapman's hand. "By George, that was miraculous," said the champion. A half-hour later Charley was singing, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

Holt, a big, strong up-State New Yorker and Dixie champion, simply outhit Coates. The Englishman, a superb putter, reduced Holt's lead to one hole at the short thirteenth, but the American met the challenge like a champion and he may yet prove to be America's best bet.

Chapman meets A. S. G. Thompson tomorrow morning and if successful will play Gordon Peters, Scottish star, in the afternoon. Peters figures to give the New Englander a real test. Holt tackles J. W. D. C. Golfers Shoot Today In Baltimore

Five Farms Invitatoin Attracts Field Topped By Volney Burnett

Volney G. Burnett, 1936 champion, tops a small District representation in the Baltimore Country Club Invitation tournament today at Five Farms. The Indian Spring threat plays his qualifying round at 10:45 with Donald Hammond, of the host club.

District junior champion Dick Meyer, Manor, and Bart Yount, the colorful youngster from Columbia, semifinalist in the Chevy Chase Invitation last week, play together at 10:15.

Albert R. MacKenzie, Columbia, and W. R. McCallum, Congressional, play at 1:20, while Martin R. West, Columbia Club president, and Dr. Paul Stewart, golf committee chairman, play at 1:25. The other local player is G. W. McMahon, who plays with Walter Leonard, Mount Pleasant, at 11:25.

A field of 124 will play in the three-day affair, with match play tomorrow and Friday following today's medal test. The host city stars, Otto Greiner and Spencer Overton are entered, as well as several well known golfers from Pennsylvania.

Harry G. Pitt, Manor's golf committee chairman, who won the tournament three consecutive years to retire the original trophy, is the District's most successful campaigner in the traditional event.

Landon Tennis Team Wins, 3-2

The netmen of Landon Prep registered their second consecutive victory yesterday on the home courts when St. John's High was met and defeated, 3 to 2. Hibbins and Perkins gave the Green its margin in the final doubles match, beating Mauling and Batchelder, 6—2, 4—6 and 6—2.

In the opening singles, Quent Rayhart needed three sets, but finally defeated Hughes, 11—9, 3—6 and 6—1. Jimmy Mulvihill won the only singles for the Johnnies when he whipped Amussen, 10—8 and 6—1. He later paired with Hughes to defeat Landon's No. 1 doubles team, Rayhart and Amussen, 6—3, 6—2. Perkins won the final singles for Landon, beating Mauling, 6—1, 6—1.

Maryland Polo Club Downs Third Cavalry

For the second time this season, Maryland Polo Club defeated the Third Cavalry quartet, of Fort Myer, yesterday on Potomac Park field, 7 to 6.

Golfers Named For Bi-State Competition

Opening Match To Be Held Saturday At Purcellville

Alexandria, Va., May 24.—A lineup of 12 golfers, to include 10 starters and 2 alternates, has been announced by Bob Blickle, Belle Haven Country Club captain, for the opening Bi-State Golf Association match of the year, to be held at Purcellville on Saturday. The Loudoun Golf and Country Club will be host to the association, which includes in addition to Purcellville and Belle Haven, the Winchester Country Club and the Opequon Golf Club of Martinsburg, W. Va.

The match is the first of five carded for the bi-State clubs. The next three will be held over the home courses of the remaining members, while the fifth will be contested at the neutral Farmington Golf Club, in Charlottesville.

The Opequon club enters the campaign in the role of defending champion, the West Virginians having displaced Belle Haven in last year's final match at Bedford, Pa., after the locals had held the title for two successive years.

George Washington High School was forced to cancel its scheduled triangular track meet with Fredericksburg and Hopewell High School teams today, due to the fact that the Hopewell squad was unable to make the trip.

The G. W. baseball teams makes its final appearance in interscholastic competition tomorrow afternoon, entertaining Central High on the local diamond at 3:30. The Presidents bring their season to a close on Friday, with the first annual varsity-faculty tussle.

The Franconia Athletic Club will sponsor a benefit boxing show tomorrow night on the lot adjacent to the community fire department, when ten amateur bouts will be presented. Proceeds will be devoted to the purchase of uniforms for the junior baseball team.

Undefeated C. U. Trackmen Meet LaSalle

Meet Here Saturday Battle Between Two Unbeaten Teams

Booked as an ordinary dual meet, the tracks meet between Catholic University and LaSalle, of Philadelphia, at the C. U. field Saturday, now looms as a championship affair.

Both teams are unbeaten. LaSalle has won seven straight meets, while the Cardinals have won five dual or triangular meets in addition to the Mason-Dixon Conference championship at Baltimore last week.

Despite the Cards' fine record, Coach Dorsey Griffith is pessimistic about his team's chances against the Explorers.

"Our only hope," Dorsey explains, "is to break through LaSalle's monopoly in the field events. They figure to get first and second in the shot, javelin and high jump. We should take the mile and 2-mile, but the sprints will be a toss-up.

With the exception of Johnny Corbett, C. U.'s sensational sophomore, who is undefeated at the mile and 2-mile, LaSalle's comparative records are better in every department.

War Netmen Win, 5-0, Over ICC

War Department swept its doubles tennis matches with Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday on the Potomac Courts, 5 to 0, each of the engagements ending in straight sets. Capt. Sherburne and Wilson started the winners off with a 6—1, 6—2 triumph over Pierce and Franczyk; Betonti and Foster trounced Leslie and Brownlow, 6—2, 6—0; mith and Skaggs defeated Posner and Roberts, 6—2, 6—2; Swenson and Jamison defeated Reznek and Folger, 6—2, 6—4, and Anderson and Andary defeated Pettit and Krueger, 6—3, 6—1.

Irish War Veterans Defeat Dr. Pepper, 3-2

Irish War Veterans took the measure of the fast Dr. Pepper team in a well played Metro League softball game at Seat Pleasant, 3 to 2.

"Tarzan" Webb and the youthful Selko hooked up in a sensational pitcher's duel which was decided by Ray McCutchen's big bat and fleet feet in the fifth inning.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

One of the customers who read our remarks on gents' hats wants to know what we think goes best with a derby. We think a cigar. A chin is almost essential, too. We do not care for derbies without chins to go with them, although there is no law against chinless chaps wearing derbies. Something goes with every kind of hat as naturally as ham goes with eggs. For instance, a flowing necktie goes with a floppy-rimmed black hat, such as worn by Morris Guest, the theatrical producer. It has to be one of those neckties with long loose ends that flutter behind like pirate flags in a breeeze. Bushy hair sticking out from under the hat brim is also a nifty touch, but not absolutely necessar,.

RUNYON

A Southwestern drawl is required to lend the proper atmosphere to the soft-brimmed, sand-colored lids that you always find on the bean of Col. Amon Carter, the hidalgo of West Texas, unless you catch him on a state or ceremonial occasion, when he will surely be wearing a regulation 10-gallon Texas sombrero off the celebrated hat tree on his farm near Fort Worth. Everybody knows a pair of high-heeled cow puncher boots goes with that kind of hat.

Pet Headgear

A cigarette, drooping slightly from the lips in nonchalant fashion, is appropriate to the soft hat with a low crease down the center of the crown and with the brim pulled low over the eyes that is the pet headgear of Walter Winchell, the columnist. The hat is worn slanted jauntily a trifle to the northwest. Winchell wears a hat of this type very well. In fact, we would say that it is a dead heat between Walter and Billy, Gaxton, the actor, as the best snap-brim hat wearers in New York.

The greatest derby wearer we have ever known is George McManus, the cartoonist, author of "Bringing Up Father." He has the knack of draping a derby across his skull so that it not only sets on his countenance to the best effect but gives the impression of security, which is important in derby wearing.

Most derby wearers either wear them in precarious fashion so the derbies teeter around on their knobs like badly fitting trench helmets, or they pull them down so far on their heads that they distort their ears. McManus wears his derby as if it were a part of him, which is the true trick of derby wearing. Under a derby, with a big heater, or cigar, in his mouth, McManus has the cockiest appearance you can imagine.

"Palmer House" Ryan, the turfman, and James J. Johnston, the boxing fellow, are also first class in the matter of wearing derbies, and have the knack of making the derbies seem to be a part of them, but neither of them smoke, and they, therefore, lose some of the eclat of derby wearing that McManus has perfected. Former Mayor James J. Walker was another great derby wearer, but he did even better with a soft hat with the right side of the brim tilted upward and the left side pulled down like those Australian soldiers wore them in the big war.

Walker was undoubtedly the best all-around hat wearing mayor that New York City ever had. He was prime in a silk top hat. He was even a better top hat fellow than Grover Whalen. We have never seen our present Mayor, Fiorello LaGuardia, in a top hat, but he does not strike us as a top hat type. He has evolved his own style of hat by crossing a Morris Guest, or floppy-brimmed black hat, on an Amon Carter, or Texas sombrero, and the result is a kady that is of no specific sectional breed and yet cannot seriously offend any one part of the country.

Smith's Famous Derby

In mentioning the derby wearers, we must not overlook former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, whose brown derby is famous. However, we consider it more of a personal trade mark than just an article of cranial adornment and perhaps Mr. Smith should not be admitted to competition.

Oddly enough, a lot of derby wearers, including George McManus, "Palmer House" Ryan and James J. Johnston, always replace their derbies in summer with those hard, flat straw hats which also require a certain knack in wearing. We never could keep one of them on our noggin in the lightest of zephyrs. Harry Richman, the actor, is the greatest exponent we know of that type of straw hat, and in fact his imitators think all they need to give an impersonation of him is a straw hat worn slanted over one ear.

Those straw hats look mighty jaunty and dressy when properly worn, but we would have to wear a chin strap with them. Maybe our head is not shaped just right. A fellow once gave us a beautiful and and costly Panama hat, and do you know what everybody said? They said it looked as if we had a basket of peaches on our head. What was the use of telling them that those lumps were just our bumps of knowledge?

Night Play Drives to Victory in Charles Town Feature Race

SmallChange, The Favorite, Runs Second

Jockey Bernhardt Rides Victor, Which Pays Backers $5.80; Double Brings $37

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., May 24.—Night Play, owned by Dick Pending, track superintendent of the Bowie course, drove to a length victory in the fifth race that served feature purposes on today's card. The Chance Play gelding took the measure of the highly regarded Small Change by a length. Third money in the limit field of eight went to Rocky Mount.

Small Change was installed the favorite in the test of four and a half furlongs and held the lead most of the way while saving ground. Night Play was off in good fashion and responded to Jockey R. Bernhardt's urging to come up on the outside and wear down the leading choice.

Night Play paid a $5.80 mutuel.

The day's biggest surprise came in the sixth race and marked the defeat of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Enthusiasm. The 7-year-old son of Bubbling Over finished third while the victory went to J. Skarbek's Gem Wick at a healthy $96.80 mutuel. Gem Wick, beaten off 23 lengths in her previous start, came up under Jockey W. Vassari's handling to win by two lengths over Allen Caid, another long shot.

The combination of "8 and 8" proved the right one in the daily double and the pay-off was $37. Jockey Leon Garrett gave Miss Trycom a good ride to win by a head over Chief Hollis in the second race, while Jockey W. Nertney overcame a poor start with Shanteb to bring the Flying Ebony gelding home ahead of National.

At Play, 10-1 Shot, Scores at Belmont

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 24 (AP).—Coming from next to last place in the field of ten sprinters, Mrs. Clyde Phillips' At Play, a 10-to-1 shot, got up to win the twenty-fifth Hollis Claiming Stakes by a head here today. Mrs. Clara Lyon's John's Heir, a 15-to-1 chance, was second, with A. G. C. Sage's Mahdi third, a neck behind. Three additional lengths away came Bill Farnsworth, the 2-to-1 choice, to finish fourth.

At Play ran the 6 furlongs of the Widener straightaway in the flashy time of 1:10 flat, the fastest performance of the meeting for the distance. The Chance Play 4-year-old's share of the purse was $3,350.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., May 24.

Dear Al:

Russell Oakes is the new "voice of Charles Town." He does a good job. In answer to inquiry: Johnstown carried No. 6 on his saddlecloth in the Derby. However, he started out of No. 5 stall gate because Challenge, assigned No. 1, was scratched. Seabiscuit's full sister, Beaten Biscuit, has a new baby colt by Mowlee, Alan Clarke's up-and-coming sire. Beaten Biscuit, by Hard Tack, never raced. She and the little one are owned by E. A. Nicodemus. Last year, Beaten Biscuit had a filly, her first foal. She is known as a "good mother" on the Huntington farm near Ellicott City, Md. Jockey Lou Machado lost his whip in the stretch while trying to get Hagerstown Boy home in third race. It was a tough break for Clocker Mike, who had a daily double riding on him. He should have strung along with us. The races here are being speeded up and the customers are thankful for getting home earlier. Johnny Shanks, Washington jockey, has been doing well up here. He hasn't been getting many mounts but has been getting a lot of run out of his horses. He had hard luck with Ocean Roll last Saturday. Maurice Enright, ace basketball official, was a visitor from Washington. His first visit to a track since 1930.

BILL.

First race—Nanci's Best turned in a good race first out over this course and seems to be the right one. the Faulconer entry of Playing Polly and Miss Watch appears to hold a strong hand. Queen Teddy comes from a barn full of fit ones.

Second race—Madfoot appears to be much the best of the eligibles in this field. Needs only the right ride. Game Chaser is far down the list, but would be a keen factor if in action. Gray Gleam is a fair sort and could awake with a bang.

Third race—Free Ride turned in a good race last out and may improve on that. Needs only to move out of the "also eligible" column. Green Water should go well in this company. Whisk Up drew some wise money last out.

Fourth race—Consistent is moving up after scoring with the greatest of ease. This looks like another spot for a winning effort. Crossing Over won at the first asking and is dangerous. Justa Jimmie is fit as hands make horses.

Fifth race—Royal Veil showed plenty of speed here last week. With proper handling, this one should not miss. Sune En has good foot and should be in the thick of contention. Enthusiasm, if sent back, probably will take part of the pay.

Sixth race—Tuleyries Lin gets call in this event. Likes the route and should come home with the bacon. Clever Girl races for a new owner, but has won two in impressive style. Lead Please scored here early in the meeting.

Seventh race—Worthowning seems capable of carrying 116 pounds to victory in this field. Turned in a nice second in most recent outing Stealing Home, tipped last out, had plenty of trouble. Razzle Dazzle is honest and fit.

—Eighth race—Justa Pilgrim and Heart Play may battle it out for the chief award in this field. Clymene's last was a good sprint and this one will be right in there knocking

Substitute race—Hurdy Gurdy needs only the right help from the saddle, Ivonia and Chessie to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—Hurdy Gurdy.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PARKING TICKET, $4.40, $3.20, $2.40; FLYING HEART, $9.80, $5.20; BARRACA, $3.40.

PARKING TICKET, sent to front at once, held sway thereafter and was under light drive at end. FLYING HEART, close up from start on inside, dropped back approaching stretch and came with good energy at end. BARRACA, slow to begin, was forced to race very wide while improving position and closed full of run. PRINCE JOCK closed ground from slow beginning. SAIL BY raced closest to pace in stretch and weakened. WHITTLE PETE was squeezed back at first turn. LUCIE MOWLEE stopped when crowded at turn.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:12. Off 3:16½. Winner, H. Scheel's br. m. (8), by Tryster—Comical II. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS TRYCOM, $9.40, $5.00, $3.80; CHIEF HOLLIS, $5.20, $4.20; FRED'S WARNING, $7.40.

MISS TRYCOM, nicely handled, was steadied along on outside of CHIEF HOLLIS to straighten course when pulled wide and wore down pacemaker to win. CHIEF HOLLIS outbroke field, was hustled along and appeared short. FRED'S WARNING saved ground throughout and closed with good courage. MR. DEEDS was backing up when start came, had to be rushed to gain contention and closed gamely. The others were not prominent.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40. Off 3:42. Winner, Mrs. W. Whitney's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELLTHORN, $4.60, $3.00, $2.60; ELSIE J., $4.60, $3.40; ADO, $6.60.

BELLTHORN, sent to front going to turn, shook off repeated challenges of ELSIE J. and won under drive. ELSIE J ran closest to pace from start and closed gamely under pressure. ADO worked way to contention on inside and appears ready to win. GOANTELL off slowly, moved up with rush along backstretch and weakened in final drive. CANTERET went well for three furlongs. CHILLY EBBIE could not keep up.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:37. Winner, R. Pending's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GEMWICK, $96.80, $32.80, $12.00; ALLEN CAID, $23.60, $7.00; ENTHUSIASM, $2.80.

GEMWICK, within striking distance from start, came around horses with bold rush entering stretch, took command and won while opening gap. ALLEN CAID, slow to begin, worked way to contention on outside and closed with fine move. ENTHUSIASM set good pace, but tired in final test. TRIXIE LASS closed full of run. KITTY'S RIVAL went well placed to stretch and stopped. RUTH LERNER was closest to pace to stretch and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:28. Off 5:29. Winner, C. E. Brining's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETEE LAD, $40.20, $14.80, $6.20; AUFOIN, $5.40, $4.40; CHANNING, $5.40.

PETEE LAD, off alertly and saving ground from start, drew clear of DUNRITA and CHANNING and was kept to drive to stave off AUFOIN. The latter, always within striking distance, closed with rush on outside. CHANNING moved up boldly to press pace and weakened gradually through stretch. CANIMAR saved ground when outrun, came through on rail entering stretch and was weakly handled in closing stages. DUNRITA had good early speed, but flattened when placed to drive. HUPPY was through early.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:57. Off 5:58½. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Bond's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENCADER, $10.80, $5.00, $4.20; FAMOUS CLAYTON, $3.80, $2.80; PEPPER PATCH, $3.20.

PENCADER, well placed from start, came through on inside entering stretch and under good handling, held sway to end. FAMOUS CLAYTON, sent to top in opening furlong, withstood challenges of PEPPER PATCH and closed willingly under punishment. PEPPER PATCH saved ground and was hard ridden. RED TRAP closed with good energy. MAMUCK came willingly in final test. GOLD D'OR stopped.

Horses to Watch At Charles Town

TRIXIE LASS—Showed good effort in last after getting off badly. Should score shortly.

ADO—Received very little help from the saddle when he finished third on Wednesday. Change of riders will help.

ALLEN CAID—Came from far back to finish second. About seven-eighths of a mile should suit.

CANROCK—Showed good efforts over this trip last year. This son of Canter prefers an off track.

Du Pont Assails Government's Vast Spending

It Has Not Produced Recovery, He Says, But Paralysis and Fear

Wilmington, Del., May 24.—Federal financial policies were vigorously assailed today by Lammot du Pont in a statement addressed to "Stockholders, Employes and Friends of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co."

Asserting that true recovery can be achieved only by the time-tested method of encouraging men to work and capital to produce, the chemical company's president called for an immediate lifting of present tax burdens which, he declared, are confiscatory in their effect. Our spending program, he added, has produced, not recovery, but paralysis and fear.

"In 1932," he said, "we were justly appalled by the tremendous increase in Government expenditures which had taken place since 1927; but now our total annual expenditures (excluding interest and debt retirement) are more than double the 1932 figures and more than three and a half times the 1927 figures!

53 Billions in 7 Years

"Our total Federal expenditures, excluding Postoffice expenses, for the seven years from July 1, 1932, to June 30, 1939, will amount to more than $53,000,000,000. This is twice as much as the National Government spent from the time of its creation in 1789 to the end of the fiscal year 1916—a period of 127 years which included all of our wars prior to the World War.

"This astounding increase in the annual rate of expenditure has taken place during a time when the average national income has been subnormal. The result has been that during the last seven years the Federal Government has spent 13½ per cent of the total national income produced, as against less than 6 per cent during the preceding ten years. All forms of Government in the United States for the past two years have been spending around 30 per cent of the national income, as compared with 14.5 per cent in 1929.

"These huge expenditures have been made largely in the name of emergency—to provide relief and to induce recovery. But the commonly accepted estimates show almost as many people unemployed now as in 1933. And no wonder. The very method adopted obviously defeated its own end.

Taxes and Confidence

"The tremendous debt created and the heavy tax burden required have prevented the development of the confidence necessary to resuscitate the capital goods industries and to induce the creation of new enterprise. Since the fiscal year 1932 the national debt, including 'guaranteed' debt, has increased almost $25,000,000,000.

"Lasting confidence, necessary to free the capital goods industries and to re-employ millions of people, cannot develop under such conditions. New capital cannot be created. Capital which remains available for use in new enterprises is being paralyzed by fear and rapidly confiscated through the heavy burden of taxes.

"Our spending program has produced, not recovery, but paralysis and fear. Is it not high time that we discard this program which bids fair to perpetuate our difficulties, and to return to the time-tested method of encouraging and fostering the free play of fundamental economic forces, of encouraging men to work and capital to produce? Is it not evident that in this way only can true recovery be brought about?"

'Big Board' Expels H. C. Elfast, Now Sought by Police

New York, May 24 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today expelled Henry C. Elfast from its membership for not crediting customers accounts with deposits due them.

Meanwhile detectives from the office of State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., vainly sought Elfast to question him. His office and home were closed. Bennett obtained a Supreme Court writ against him.

A number of complainants will appear before Assistants Attorney General Ambrose McCall and Max Furman tomorrow at the first hearing into the affairs of Elfast and his erstwhile stock exchange firm, Elfast, Frisk & Co., which was formally dissolved March 24 after existing only seven months.

A stock exchange representative said the firm's affairs had first been called to its attention in March by Arthur C. Frisk, Elfast's partner, and a highly regarded Swedish broker. Most of the firm's securities business was said to have originated in Sweden.

Frisk, following an audit by exchange agents, voluntarily made good an $18,000 shortage discovered in two accounts only, and then returned to Sweden, pledging his full co-operation to authorities. A third partner, Walter R. Lindall, was also cleared by the stock exchange investigation.

Controllers Elect Lloyd President

Humphrey Lloyd, of Washington Properties, Inc., was elected president of the D. C. Control of the Controllers Institute of America at the final meeting of the '38-39 season, held at the Carlton Hotel, preceding the monthly dinner of this group.

Other officers elected for the coming year were Harold G. Haydon, of Potomac Electric Power Co., vice president, and Ralph E. Heitmuller, of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., secretary-treasurer. The board of directors consists of the three new officers and William R. Little, of the Evening Star, retiring president; Franklin H. Kenworthy, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and Otis H. Ritenour, of the Washington Gas Light Co.

Crop Damage Lifts Wheat To New Highs

Futures Gain as Much As 3⅛ Cents in Heavy Trading

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 24.—Wheat shot up 3⅛ cents to new season highs today as fear of crop damage stirred trade estimated to have been the heaviest since last summer. The advance was the sharpest in months.

Buying orders poured into the pit, easily absorbing profit-taking. All contracts opened at new highs, quickly scored gains of 2½ cents, paused briefly and then surged to new highs, wheat for July delivery reaching 78, up 2⅝; September 77⅞, up 2⅞, and December 78¾, up 3⅛. New season highs also were established at Kansas City and Minneapolis. Winnipeg was closed for a holiday. Strength in wheat carried other grains into higher ground.

Wheat here closed 2⅜ to 3¼ up, July 77⅞ to 78, September 77¾ to 77⅞; Corn 1¼ to 1⅜ up, July 51⅞ to 52, September 52½ to 52⅝; Oats 1¼ to 1⅞ up, July 34 to 34⅛, September 32⅜ to 32½; Soy beans ¼ lower to 1⅜ up, July 92¾, September 82⅞; Rye 1¾ to 1⅞ up, July 54¾, September 55⅞ to 56; Lard 5 to 7 cents higher. Kansas City wheat closed 2⅜ to 3⅛ up and Minneapolis 1¾ to 2⅛ higher.

Scorching temperatures were reported yesterday in the Southwest and the forecast was for continued clear weather. The Government's weekly summary indicated rapid deterioration in Nebraska during the week and said damage had been serious in many parts of Western Kansas. A leading Kansas elevator company estimated the State's crop at 101,800,000 bushels on the basis of present conditions, or 14,000,000 less than a month ago.

Ford Motor Co. Surplus Slips To $588,821,274

Boston, May 24 (AP).—A decline in the surplus account of the Ford Motor Co. for 1938 was reported today in its annual statement to the Massachusetts Department of Corporations and Taxation. For the year the account totalled $588,821,274. For the preceding 12 months period it was $608,085,935.

For the first time the name of Henry Ford, 2nd, Edsel Ford's eldest son, appeared in the list of directors. The certificate was signed by Edsel Ford, president and treasurer, and by P. E. Martin as vice president. The balance sheet as of December 31, 1938, follows:

Assets:

Assets:
Cash, notes and accounts receivable, stocks, bonds, securities and patent rights, $307,973,615.93.
Real estate $130,398,264.97.
Machinery, equipment, furniture and fixtures $145,006,010.96.
Merchandise and supplies $83,237,331.79.
Prepaid insurance, taxes, etc. $6,681,060.71.
Total $673,496,284.26.

Liabilities:
Account payable $57,521,618.41.
Reserves $9,888,890.95.
Capital stock $17,264,500.
Surplus $588,821,274.90.
Total $673,496,284.26.

The certificate showed a total of 20,000,000 shares of common stock authorized, with a total par value of $100,000,000. The total number of common shares, issued and outstanding was listed at $3,452,900, with the amount then "paid thereon" $17,264,500.

Stocks Recover Strength and Activity Buyers Favor Rails and Industrials Average of 100 Stocks Near May High

New York, May 24.—The best buying movement of the month lifted stocks an average of slightly more than a point today and individual favorites added fractions up to 4 points in trading of more than 1,000,000 shares. This was the most active day enjoyed by the big board since April 12 and equalled about 40 per cent of the weekly volumes of business of the last three weeks.

The list was broken out of the narrow rut into which it has been confined during this period. The composite average of 100 representative stocks, at its high today, was only 0.05-point under the recovery high reached on May 10. Based on closing levels, this average was at its best for the recovery. As both the rails and industrials penetrated their former recovery tops, the opinion of chartists is that the intermediate trend of the market is upward. The Dow theory still indicates that the major trend of the market is down, but even in accordance with this theory it could be possible for the April lows to be the extremes.

The action today was satisfactory to the bullish forces. The opening was fractionally higher and in the second hour the list turned stronger on increasing volume. The major mark-up came in the final hour with some sizable blocks of the leading issues changing hands. The volume in the last hour exceeded 320,000 shares and final prices in the majority of cases were the best.

Coal Peace

Settlement of the coal strike is expected to make the various charts of business look better. The betterment will be particularly noticeable in railroad carloadings and reports from individual carriers received thus far illustrate this. Electric power production, although down 0.01 per cent from the previous week, is 10.3 per cent better than a year ago and the best improvement came in the central industrial district. Seasonal demand for gasoline has rdeuced gasoline supplies and the steel industry is more hopeful, with operations increased by the settlement of the coal strike and the booking of large business during the recent wave of price-cutting.

On the unfavorable side the tax and labor situations loom large and important. Since the President's speech the street is fearful that little worthwhile tax revision will be accomplished at this session of Congress. Without an adjustment of the tax burden, and faced with the prospect of continued labor unrest throughout the next few months, there is little to attract risk capital out of hiding.

U. S. Rubber a Feature

United States rubber was a feature in today's trading, soaring 3 points. Steel and Bethlehem added 2⅝ each, Chrysler 3⅞ and General Motors 1⅜. Aviations again were prominent with Douglas up 2¾ and Bendix 1⅛.

Most of the commodities moved along with securities today. Hogs were an exception, sinking to a five-year low. Wheat went to new highs for the season in heavy trading, helped by reports of a heat wave in the Southwest. This renewed fears of crop deterioration. Winnipeg was closed for a holiday but the Kansas City and Minneapolis markets moved along with Chicago, where all grains followed wheat. The close was up 2⅜ to 3⅛ cents a bushel. Hide futures soared 43 to 47 points on record sales, rubber 24 to 36 points, cocoa 12 to 13 cents and copper 3 to 5 points.

Bonds Share in Advance

Listed bonds shared moderately today in the improvement that took place in financial sentiment. Almost all groups of issues advanced in a turnover of $6,510,000, which somewhat exceeded recent performances. Domestic bonds with a speculative interest did better than high-grade securities of the strict investment type. Foreign dollar bonds also improved.

Medium-priced railroad issues came to the fore, as they usually do when speculative ideas prevail. Gains in the active bonds ranged from fractions to 3 points. Borderline rails and default issues were less in demand. Both rail and utility holding company obligations reflected demand, while industrial Convertibles followed their related equities upward. Local tractions attracted only a modest following, but Western Union and Postal Telegraph issues advanced readily on good buying. International Telephone proved another bright spot.

In the foreign department advances in Brazilian, Peruvian and Colombian bonds suggested a revival of interest in Latin-American default securities. German and Greek bonds were in mild favor among the European defaulters. Italians showed small gains, while the high grade bonds of Scandinavian, Canadian and Australian origin marked time.

Long-term United States Treasury bonds were soft, owing to the absorption of dealers in the exchange of a guaranteed issue for new bonds, but the declines only ranged to 6-32 point, and the price structure was thus little changed. The guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were neglected. Telephone bonds were quiet, in view of the impending refunding for New York Telephone. Best power and light bonds held well, with some fresh highs noted here and there. Leading rails and industrials were idle around previous levels.

Business Needs New Billions Hoffman Says

Money Ventured Now Only in Millions, Says Studebaker President

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 24.—Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation, tonight warned organized business that there can be no forward surge of business, such as has pulled us out of every previous depression we have experienced, until the flow of new venture capital into industry is once more measured in terms of billions annually instead of scant millions.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce at the William Penn Hotel, Hoffman pointed out that venture capital must be assured of reasonable safety and a fair return. He charged that this country has done more in the last six years to drive such capital out of industry than any other civilized country in the world. This we have done largely, he said, by a destructive, chaotic and punitive system of taxation.

He urged business to insist and obtain the appointment of a competent and nonpolitical commission of experts to recommend a long-term tax program, at least as sane and constructive as the tax system of such nations as Great Britain and Sweden, which were based on the recommendations of commissions, dominated by Socialist and Labor Party philosphy. He condemned the widespread tendency of organized groups and whole industries to ask for Government regimentation, licensing and control, in order to regulate prices, production and distribution in the hope of limiting competition and guaranteeing profits.

Competition Repressed

"Our capitalistic competitive economy has suffered not alone from lack of new venture capital, but from an abatement of competition itself," he said. "Certain governmental groups and certain business groups have, by action and inaction, threatened the vitality of our economy by attempting to take competition out of the competitive system.

"As a corallary to this drying up of venture capital and devitalizing of competition, we have 10,000,000 unemployed and many more millions who are seeking security rather than opportunity. Their attitude was well expressed by a distinguished Senator of the United States, who said, 'We can't eat the Constitution.' True—but there is a terrible menace in such a philosophy. It suggests a static rather than a dynamic America. It is an admission of spiritual bankruptcy.

Bold Money Essential

"The Biblical injunction, "Man shall not live by bread alone," operates with full force in the field of commerce. The spirit of advanture must pervade industry, and bold dollars must replace timit dollars before any real recovery is possible. Fear must give way to courage and confidence before there can be real work for every man who wants to work. The question is when and how this can all be brought about. Many businessmen feel that if Hitler and Mussolini would just calm down, all would be well. I don't. Most businessmen feel that if we had an Administration more friendly to business, confidence would be restored and prosperity would be ours willy-nilly. I don't. I hold the deep conviction that certain basic corrections are necessary before our economy can again flourish.

"First of all, we must bring venture capital back into the market. Industry stands ready with inventions and discoveries that will absorb billions of new capital and give new jobs to millions of workmen just as soon as bold dollars are available. Will they be available if confidence is restored? To some extent, yes. But dollars become bold only when there is a reward for boldness. There must be some incentive to speculate and to pioneer in industry, as well as to invest in it."

PAUL G. HOFFMAN, president, the Studebaker Corporation

N. Y. Tel. Co. Plans Refunding Issue Of $90,000,000

New York, May 24 (AP).—The New York Telephone Co. announced today that it had asked approval of the State Public Service Commission to issue not more than $90,000,000 in bonds. Interest rates and maturity dates will be worked out later.

The issue probably will not be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission until sometime late in the summer.

November 1 the company must meet a $60,865,380 maturity of first and general mortgage 4½ per cent dollar and sterling bonds, issued between October, 1909, and September, 1912.

In addition the company plans to fund as long-term debt advances of $17,600,000 or more made to it by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns all the New York company's stock. The balance may be used as new capital for plant construction.

Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc., will head the underwriters.

Hecker Products Votes 40 Cents Extra

New York, May 24 (AP).—Directors of Hecker Products Corporation, makers of food products, today declared an extra dividend of 40 cents a share on common stock, payable June 14 to holders of record June 3. In recent quarters company has paid quarterly dividends of 15 cents a common share.

Directors of American Bank Note Co. failed to take action on a common stock dividend. In January and April this year the company paid 10 cents each on common stock.

Cotton Climbs 40 to 65 Cents A Bale Higher

New York, May 24 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 8 to 13 points higher today, carried up by a wave of rising security and other commodity prices. Offerings on the whole were tightly held and buyers were forced to raise quotations to obtain contracts. At that, professional operators were unable to obtain desired amounts. Profit taking and Southern liquidation chipped away at top marks.

Buying also followed the House action of sending the agricultural appropriation bill to conference without amondments limiting the use of funds for parity payments. A feature of the morning trade was selling in July by Liverpool and Bombay, which was replaced by buying in later months.

National Bank Deposits Largest In U. S. History

Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano announced yesterday that the total assets and total deposits of national banks in the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, and the Virgin Islands of the United States on March 29, 1939, the date of the last call for condition reports, were greater than on any previous call date in the history of the National Banking System.

The total assets of the 5,218 active banks were $31,844,396,000, an increase of $178,219,000 over the amount reported by 5,230 active banks on December 31, 1938, the date of the previous call, and an increase of $2,039,973,000 over the amount reported by the 5,256 active banks on March 7, 1938, the date of the corresponding call a year ago.

The deposits on March 29, 1939, totaled $28,169,251,000, exceeding by $118,575,000 and $1,931,009,000 the amounts reported on December 31 and March 7, 1938, respectively. Savings deposits included with time deposits of individuals, partnerships, and corporations, amounted to $6,716,423,000 and represented 16,025,982 accounts.

Electric Production 10.3% Over Year Ago

New York, May 24 (AP).—Electric Power Production in the United States during the week ended May 20 totaled 2,170,496,000 kilowatt hours, only slightly below 2,170,750,000 in the preceding week but 10.3 per cent more than 1,967,807,000 in the comparable 1938 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The decline from last week, though small, was against the usual seasonal trend. Hence the Associated Press Index of Production, based on 1929-30 as 100, dropped to a new low for the year at 112.3 from 113.2 in the preceding week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term movements, stood at 103.8.

Anacostia Nine Plays McKinley High Today

Victory Will Put Tech in Playoffs For Eastern Title

Anacostia High's second-year ball team faces its most crucial game of the current interhigh series today when it meets McKinley's winless nine on the Eastern diamond at 3:30. If it can repeat a previous beating of Tech it goes into a playoff with Eastern for the East section title. If not, it drops back into the also-rans, allowing the White Tide undisputed reign in Northeast and a chance at the city championship, slated for Wednesday, May 31.

Except for a lapse that presented Eastern with a 16 to 3 triumph, the little Anacostians have had a highly successful year. They were out in front of their division until the letdown, and have played smart ball. The Eastern beating was Art Faircloth's only loss of the season, despite inexperienced fielding behind him, and he will be heavily favored over McKinley's Heinie Webb today.

Anacostia Beats Montgomery Blair

Warming up for his important interhigh pitching assignment today, Art Faircloth pitched the last five frames of Anacostia's 11-inning game with Montgomery Blair yesterday, holding the suburbanites to two hits and taking credit for a 10-to-9 victory.

Perry Seaman's timely hitting, as well as Faircloth's mound work, gave the Indians the game. After Bob Gordon had fanned in the eleventh, Seaman pounded out a screeching homer for the winning run. In the ninth he deadlocked the count with a triple, scoring Gordon and Scott.

Anacostia was forced to make one of its biggest rallies this season to win. Trailing, 9 to 3, going into the seventh, the Indians registered five straight singles for four runs, and Seaman's triple did the rest. Blair's Johnny Norris was touched for 14 safeties.

James N Wins Suffolk Feature

Boston, May 24 (AP).—James N., owned by Miss Mona Manya, a professional dancer, scored a front-running, four-length victory today over a mediocre field in a $3,500 claiming sprint of 6 furlongs which topped an all-claiming card at Suffolk Downs race track.

Shipped over from New York this week, James N. was established the favorite in the nine-horse field. He won handily in 1:15 over a strip made heavy by the rains of the past two days.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Genie Palatine came with a belated rush to place, three lengths in front of Zenana. The winner paid $8, $5.20, $3.80. Genie Palantine paid $5.80 and $4.20 while Zenana returned $4.40 for the show.

Blue Peter Wins Epsom Derby

alent of several million dollars on Blue Peter's victory.

When it was all over, Blue Peter and his jockey, Ephriam Smith, were brought into the winner's circle. The jockey, touching whip to his cap in salute to occupants of the royal box just above him, was the coolest person on the course.

"Easy Victory," Says Jockey

"It was easy all the way and just another job of work for me," said the 24-year-old jockey who had just ridden his first Derby winner. "We never were seriously threatened after we reached the stretch and had fought off Fox Cub."

Lord Rosebery came out of the grandstand to lead in his winner. "I'm glad to carry on the tradition of my house," he said.

The last horse to carry the colors of the Rosebery family to triumph in the Derby was Cicero in 1905.

The race was worth approximately $50,000 to the winner's owner, but several millions in bets and sweepstakes changed hands.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

[Editor's note: Esther Elizabeth Dodd, who wrote a guest column for Bill Ackerman today, works with fish during the hour of labor at the black bass section of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. She knows their haunts and we think she has a good angle from the woman's standpoint.]

By Esther Elizabeth Dodd.

Women wree active participants in the ancient and honorable sport of angling as far back at 30 B. C. Most renowned among them was Cleopatra, who did her fishing in the Nile, where such species as bream, cheatfish, carp, dogfish, barbel and blenny abounded. It was none other than Shakespeare who envisioned Cleopatra addressing Antony thus:

"Leave the fishing rod to us, your game is Cities, Provinces and Kingdoms."

Years later it seems the Fuegians heeded that advice for the women would draw in the lines and quickly seize the fish as soon as the whalebone hook with its feather and bait disappeared on the running line.

6,901,587 Licensed

Angling was never thought of in this country as being co-ed until the twentieth century. True it is, women did fish, but not to any great extent. Among men from the days of the Pilgrim fathers, it was strictly a man's sport, as polo is today. Although there are 6,901,587 licensed anglers in the United States according to the latest census, there are probably less than 500,000 women anglers, licensed and unlicensed. There are but five States that have a license especially for women; seven States do not require women to have a license, and the rest of the States make no distinction between men and women in their license requirements. The five States that do require women to have a special license issued in 1936-37 approximately 60,000 licenses.

April 1, 1939 the opening day of the trout season this year, in one of the States found the women on one of the Nation's famous trout waters outnumbered 28 to 1. In this connection it is intersting to recall Dr. R. William Eschmeyer, of the Institute of Fisheries Research, Ann Arbor, Mich., is authority for the statement women are not as good at trout fishing as men. He cites several reasons for this—the necessity for careful wading in relatively cold water, which women aschew, the annoyance from mosquitos, and the fact that it is nonsocial, indulged in alone. But that as it may, many acquaintances, who are women, find the full creel in trout fishing not the exception but the rule. The writer's first fish, as a child, was a trout caught in one of the feeder streams of the well known Beaverkill.

Noted Anglers

Among women who have made names for themselves in salt water fishing is the grand dean of women anglers, Mrs. Oliver Grinnell, who on June 22, 1933, with the assistance of her boat captain, fought a battle with a 450-pound broadkill swordfish lasting 20 hours. A new world's record for women anglers was established by Ruth Edmands, Newton Center, Mass., this spring when she landed a sailfish weighing 104½ pounds at Miami Beach. Also prominently identified with big game fishing are Mrs. Michael Lerner, who has made record catches in the waters of Nova Scotia as well as Florida; Mrs. Marion B. Stevens and Mrs. Orton G. Dale.

Women recognize in fishing the recreation men have found from time immemorial in this form of recreation—they are alert to the problems of the day: War—"A nation engaged in healthful sports activity is a happier, sounder country than one whose energies are centered up war;" Society—"Of 8,000 inmates in a national penal institution not one had fishing as a hobby." Offering to society a stronger bond for better living and to warring countries a means of peace.

Mrs. Gross Increases Lead in Hinshaw Golf

Mrs. J. F. Gross increased her lead in the W. W. Hinshaw Trophy play at Columbia yesterday, adding a 78 net to a previous 82 for a 160 total at the halfway mark of the 72-hole medal event.

Mrs Gross had a gross 91, minus a 13 handicap for the 78.

Other low second round scores included Mrs. A. C. Minnix, 95-15—80; Mrs. G. E. Straternieyer, 96-14—82; Mrs. H. P. Foley, 104-22—82; and Mrs. F. G. Crisp 95-10—85.

The first round low scorers, Mrs. Chapman, Fisher, Mrs. Rountree and Mrs. Stabler finished with net scores above the 85 mark, as Mrs. Gross went several strokes ahead of the field.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Rookie Johnny Welaj draws the chief award in the Nats' Man of the Month contest following his performance yesterday in the victory over the St. Louis Browns.

To Welaj, four points, because he put the Nats back in the ball game in the third inning with his two-bagger that drove in three runs, and because he drove out another double and a single later in the game.

To Ken Chase, three points, because he allowed the Browns only one unearned run in his six-inning relief job.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because his homer with a man on base put the Nats in the lead in the fourth inning.

To Charley Gelbert, one point, because his double, which scored three runners in the fifth, virtually clinched the game.

The totals:

Taft Wright	24	Jake Early	8
George Case	19	Buddy Myer	7
Cecil Travis	16	Joe Haynes	7
Jimmy Wasdell	15	Rick Ferrell	6
Joe Krakauskas	13	Dutch Leonard	5

Ellender, Taft To Sift Charges Against NLRB

Two members of the Senate Labor Committee served notice yesterday that they would search the records of the Labor Relations Board for evidence that the board had been biased in favor of the C. I. O.

Senators Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, and Taft (Republican), of Ohio, declared their intentions after George A. Googe, chief Southern organizer for the American Federation of Labor, had testified that Lawrence Hunt, a board lawyer, addressed a New Orleans mass meeting staged by Harry Bridges' C. I. O. Longshoremen's Union. The committee is considering a number of proposals to revise the Wagner labor relations act.

Googe touched off a roar of laughter among committee members and spectators when he told Committee Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, he had not invited Hunt to a rival A. F. of L. longshoremen's meeting "because we were afraid he would make a speech for the C. I. O."

Magazine Sues Farley to Block Fraud Order

The Home Circle Magazine sued in District Court yesterday to prevent postal fraud order against the subscription contest in which the magazine promised a $1,500 trip to the World's Fair as first prize.

The magazine has 500,000 subscribers, claimed the publishers, National Weeklies, Inc., in their suit against Postmaster General Farley, Postoffice Department Solicitor Vincent M. Miles and Postal Attorney Thomas J. Murray.

The circulation drive was based on a "movie scramble contest" in which entrants solved a puzzle composed of film stars' names in order to be eligible to win prizes for sending in the largest number of subscriptions. Murray recommended a fraud order after a three-day hearing which began May 10.

Pastor Reported Lashed by Mob

Atlanta, Ga., May 24 (INS).—Members of the Church of God in suburban Egan Park reported to authorities today that their pastor, the Rev. Grady R. Kent, had been seized and horsewhipped by a band of about a dozen men who kidnaped the preacher last night.

Church members said they believed the incident was caused by trouble the church recently has had with residents who claimed the services were being held too late at night and that members were disturbing the peace.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

THE Justice Department appropriations, as reported by the House Committee, are seen as the means of correcting three situations in Federal penal institutions.

1. The women employed as warders at the Alderson institution for women in West Virginia would receive one-step promotions, each under the new appropriations. This group has had no promotions for years. And, as importantly, Attorney General Murphy has approved reallocation of their jobs on such basis that they will receive the same pay as men employed as custodial officers in prisons for men. At the present, the women warders in Alderson receive several hundred dollars less a year than men employed as custodial officers, though they perform equally as exacting duties. They must, in fact, control their charges entirely through persuasion and discipline, while prison guards, generally, are armed, it was pointed out.

2. It is anticipated by the committee report that a progressive reduction will be made in the long hours now in effect in the prison service. The report expresses the view that with the new appropriation, a 50 to 52-hour week can be introduced generally and that many employes can get a straight eight-hour day. The American Federation of Government Employes—which has battled for improved conditions for Federal penal employes—says that conditions at Atlanta need improvement in particular. Both President Stengle, of the A.F.G.E. and Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, appeared before the committee to urge a correction of the situation at the Atlanta institution.

3. The committee approved additional funds for the National Training School for Boys in the District of Columbia. The view is to improve the situation in the dining room and kitchen. Besides, provision was made for employment of additional help in certain "much-needed categories," the A.F.G.E. said.

TWO score members of Congress were entertained the other night at an initiation ceremony sponsored by Federal Lodge No. 1, F.A.A.M., at the historic lodge house in Fredericksburg. They were: Representatives Austin, Beckworth, Bell, Bolles, Brooks, Bryson, Cartwright, Case, Clason, Cole, Curtiss, Dondero, Durham, Ellis, Gathings, Gossett, Graham, Green, Griffith, Hill, Jensen, Knutson, Lewis, Marshall, Martin, Mason, Moser, Murdock, Norrell, O'Neal, Patrick, Patton, Poage, Reed, Rutherford, Schwert, Seccombe, Sparkman and Stefan. With the party were Edward Tucker and Harry G. Ritner, of the General Accounting Office, and Edward Suhr, of the Danish government, who is in America studying the patent system.

NATIONAL Organizer Matilda Lindsay, of the N.F.F.E., has returned here after an organization trip to Jackson, Biloxi and other Southern cities, during which she participated in the formation of the Mississippi State Federation of Federal Employe Unions. Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally says that the organization of the Mississippi State Federation brings the total of State and regional federations of the N.F.F.E. to 23.

THAT brand new camp for Federal employes in the Catoctin Mountains, near Thurmont, Md., will be visited by a large group on Sunday, June 4. The camp, directed by the Federal Camp Council, has been named Camp Hi-Catoctin. It is a cool, pleasant retreat that should prove popular. Incidentally, the Camp Council is sponsoring a party, to be held Wednesday evening, May 31, in the Interior Auditorium. Movies will be shown.

There seems to be a bit of confusion anent an item in this column concerning "Government Employes' Day" at the World's Fair in New York. The District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes Unions makes it clear that June 24 has been set aside as "Federal Employes' Day" at the World of Tomorrow and they prefer we use the word "Federal" instead of "Government." Okay, there it is.

Bob Burns Says—

It seems to me that no matter how much money a man makes, he always complains about paying his taxes. I know a big director out here in Hollywood who makes $5,000 a week and when the tax collector came around, the director opened a bottle of Champagne and while they drank it the director started tellin' the tax collector about all his expenses, dependents and back-bills—and before the tax collector left, they were both cryin'.

My Grandpa Snazzy had his financial worries figured out pretty good. He use'ta say, "All a man's gotta do is stand on his own feet with his back to the wall, keep his ear to the ground, his shoulder to the wheel and his nose to the grindstone and he can usually make both ends meet."

Listen to Bob Burns tonight on WRC—between 9 P. M. and 10 P. M.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's hand is taken from the first American Bridge League championship, held at Chicago in 1928. This is not to be confused with the American Contract Bridge League which developed from the former organization. The deal features an all-star team of Ely Culbertson, Theodore A. Lightner, Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz and E. C. Wolfe, who played brilliantly against the many stalwart auction veterans to win the title.

Opening lead: A ◇.

Squeeze plays and unorthodox leads were not unknown to the rising champions even then, and it required both of these plays by each side of the team to win the board conclusively.

Richards executed a neat squeeze, aided by the defense, to win an overtrick at his bid of three spades, doubled. Baron von Zedtwitz made the unusual lead of a singleton queen against the same bid, undoubled, which proved to be the only lead which would prevent the squeeze.

The bidding as it occurred at Richards' table shown along with the hand in the box. Here is how he developed the squeeze:

East opened the ace of diamonds and followed with a low diamond, declarer playing the nine from dummy. West covering with the ten and a low trump from the North hand winning.

Richards next led a trump which was taken by West's ace. West in turn played the heart king. East overtook with the ace and continued with the heart queen. Declarer ruffed and ran the remainder of his trumps, squeezing West in clubs and diamonds.

West let go a low club on the last trump lead, saving his diamond king, and Richards took the club ace in dummy and then won the king and nine in his own hand to make four spades. He lost a diamond, a spade and a heart.

At Table 2, where Richards' teammates, Baron von Zedtwitz and Culbertson were playing, the bidding progressed like this:

East	South	West	North
3 ♡	Pass	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♣.

The Baron's unconventional, intuitive lead of the queen of clubs killed the squeeze. If the declarer won the club lead in the closed hand with the king the play would develop so that the dummy was squeezed before West. If he won the club lead with the ace in dummy, it would eliminate the necessary diamond menace, the diamond queen, to West.

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

In the weeks that followed Hewitt was given his partnership, and at his insistence Peg returned to the office. One day she saw a brief news item that Paul Stranyan had been brutally assaulted on a dark street and left unconscious. He was in a hospital recovering. Peg rushed to the newspaper office, and, looking over back files, learned the complete story. She went to the hospital to see him, and, upon leaving, almost bumped into an old lady who was carrying a bunch of flowers. As she left she didn't see the old woman come out of the hospital, throw the flowers away and follow her.

CHAPTER XVIII

The State Department, an immense granite structure epitomizing in many ways an epoch in American architecture, stood in the noon sunshine, a confused impressionistic picture of broken lines and planes, of broquerie gone frantic.

Peg hurried up the steps of the south facade, sent a runner to Anthony's office. She waited for him just outside the door of the anteroom of the offices of the Secretary of State. She waited, clenching her fists nervously in the patch-pockets of her coat, her cheeks pale and her heart pounding.

Around her tourists were milling, heads thrown back to gaze at the portraits of former Secretaries . . . Jefferson, Madison, Clay, William Jennings Bryan. It seemed that she stood there hours, feeling some one horrible in that crowd, feeling that somewhere behind those mild gawking faces there was a threat, personal danger.

She saw Anthony coming down the granite stairs, his hand running along the bronze baluster. He was wearing a gray tweed suit, a light blue shirt and a dark blue tie. He looked very young and very handsome and copletely worried.

She Meets Anthony

He said quickly, "Peg! What's wrong? What is it, dear?"

"Anthony, I'm—I'm in a jam. Can I see you some time today? I know I shouldn't come here like this. But—but it is important."

Anthony sounded comfortingly anxious and very dear. He said: "Any time you say, of course. Have you had luncheon?"

Peg had not had luncheon; she hadn't even known that it was near luncheon time. When she told Anthony this, he said: "Wait a second. I'll dash back to the office for a moment. There are one or two letters I've got to get off by air mail. Wait right over there by that door. When I come back we'll go across the street."

When they got to the restaurant and sat there at a small table, bright with a green-checkered cloth, Anthony wouldn't let her talk until she had eaten.

He said: "Plenty of time afterward. We'll walk over to the Lincoln Memorial and sit there in the sunshine with the rest of the unemployed. Maybe someone with a top hat wil come along and we can heave a snowball at him."

It was a clear blue-skied day with no wind, with a good bit of warmth melting the hard-frozen crust of the snow. Peg and Anthony walked along past the Navy Building and across the Mall to the great temple with its Greek doric columns. They sat on a bench at the edge of the reflecting pool.

Anthony was looking deep into her troubled eyes. "You're calm now, Peg," he said evenly. "What were you going to tell me? Something about—Hewitt?"

Peg flushed suddenly. She didn't know exactly why. But suddenly she caught herself wondering why she had gone straight to Anthony today in her trouble instead of to Hewitt. She found herself wondering, too, with that swiftness of thoughts, what Anthony would be like as a lover. Like the other night on Buffalo Bridge when he had kissed her—tender and gentle and yet passionately possessive? Hewitt was the only man she had ever really kissed. Those innocent litle pecks in a rumble seat or behind a walled garden in Richmond or in the shadows of great elms at the University of Virginia didn't really count. Not even Anthony's kiss on the bridge. Her flush burned deeper at her thoughts, and then she said quickly: "Anthony, did you read about Paul Stranyan?"

He said: "Yes, I did. I meant to call your attention to it, but somehow I couldn't bring myself to do it. After all, that was your coat there beside him. You had come home hysterical that night.

"I thought that it wasn't any of my business what had happened that night. If you had wanted me to know, you would have told me." He paused a moment. "I didn't have the right to ask you anything about it, Peg."

Peg Tells About Card

Peg told him all about the gold chatelaine, the crazy thing she had done, the card with the strange message on it. She said: "That's what was the matter with me the night I had hysterics, Anthony. I couldn't tell you then. I was so ashamed of what I had done, of having a few cocktails too many." She told him the rest, slowly, very carefully. Her belief in what happened, her visit to the hospital.

As she talked she pulled a twig from a little pine which stood behind the bench they sat on and broke it into tiny needles. She had a handful of them now and she threw them away, nervously, and put her fingers over her face. When she took them down she went on.

"It frightens me, Anthony. What happened to Paul and to that waiter might just as easily have happened to me. May still happen. I don't know what made me do what I did, but at the time it seemed a very right thing to do. When I get an idea like that I can no more stop myself than you can stop a dynamite explosion once it has started. And with a few cocktails, which I'm not accustomed to . . . well, I just did it, that's all."

She wrung her hands together. "Anthony, am I—crazy? Am I being melodramatic and highly imaginative in thinking what I do about Nadeja Damara and those men? Or do you believe they didn't have a thing in the world to do with what happened to Paul and that waiter?"

Anthony said grimly: "I don't know, Peg. Paul Stranyan has a way of having unpleasant things happen to him. Washington husbands resent backdoor romances. Four years ago a Washington husband resented it so fiercely that Paul Stranyan found himself lying in the grass in La Fayette Square with a bullet wound through his shoulder. It was meant for his heart. He was recalled instantly, that affair didn't get into the papers. But it has been gossiped about over teacups ever since. Something like that might have happened last Friday."

"But the waiter, too, Anthony?"

"That might have been a coincidence. And then again, you might be completely right in your deductions. I don't know, of course."

Peg sat quietly looking at a squirrel lugging a battered peanut over the frozen ground and tears gathered quickly in her eyes, sparkled on her long dark lashes.

"Anthony—I'm afraid."

Promises

Anthony turned a little on the bench and faced her squarely. He did not so much as touch her, but when he spoke his voice broke. "Peg, don't you know I'd never let anything happen to you? Don't you know how much I want to take care of you? That I've felt that way ever since I first saw you at the house on Massachusetts avenue? That I'd die before I'd let anything happen to you? Look at me, Peg, and tell me you know that."

Blinking through searing mists, Peg met his grave eyes. After a moment she nodded. "Yes," she said, simply, "I suppose I do, Anthony. If I hadn't believed that I wouldn't have come straight to you. I—I wouldn't have thought of you first as I did."

"If you ever tell me that you want to be taken care of in every sense of the meaning—I'll be there, Peg. Always there. Waiting." And then he said, quickly, "I think I ought to have a look at that card of Nadeja Damara's. That's the first thing. I'll drop around to your office tonight and pick you up there. In the meantime, sit tight. Don't worry. Don't talk to anyone about this. Not Aunt Mehalie or Duncan or Hewitt or Joan. Remember that, Peg. After I see the card I'll decide then just what we should do."

They got up then and walked through the park toward the river. They passed a great many people sitting on benches, sitting supinely in the sun waiting for nothing to happen. On one bench was a small, wrinkled old lady bending over a worn purse, her mittened fingers fumbling clumsily for something in its depths. She looked up as Peg and Anthony passed. Peg thought, vaguely puzzled and disturbed! "Why I've seen her before, poor old soul . . ." and didn't place her at all. Promptly forgot that she had thought it.

At the corner of the Naval Hospital, Anthony flagged a cab and gave the number of Peg's office. "I'll ride along with you to the door," he said. "Just playing cozy, darling. Though I don't for a second think you're in any danger."

Scolded

Mr. Nelson was coming out of his private suite that afternoon when Peg got back to the office. He said, gruffly: "Well, I hope you had a nice time, Peg. Some movie you just had to see? Or weren't you in the mood for the office today. Listen to me, Peg Patterson . . ."

She was in for a scolding, she knew. Yet she couldn't explain just what had kept her away from the office for so long today. Nor was she the slightest bit of good at lying. So she said, interrupting him with the rush of her words: "I'm awfully sorry, Mr. Nelson. It—it won't happen again. I promise you that."

"Now you listen to me, young lady," Mr. Nelson began afresh. "I'm paying you $20 a week to sit behind that desk and work! Not to idle at home on the pretext of being ill, not to galavant around the streets in the middle of a working day with the most flimsy excuse for your absence. I don't know what has got into you in the last two weeks. And don't think I've forgotten that wild goose chase you sent me on . . . a woman shooting a man in a garage. If I live to be a hundred, which, fortunately, isn't probable, I'll never forget Mr. Gonzales' face when I told him.

He broke off abruptly, for the door had opened and a group of men came into the office. Mr. Nelson moved away from her desk, shook hands. He beckoned to prim Miss Chase his secretary; he said, "Bring me that Dickenson file, please," and, to Peg's immense relief, ushered his visitors into his office. Before he closed the door he turned once and scowled furiously at Peg. His blazing eyes said, "I'll attend to you later, Miss." Then he was gone, slamming the door behind him.

Mrs. Morley Is Dead at 73 In Baltimore

Mother of Christopher, Novelist; Felix, Editor, And Frank, Publisher

Mrs. Lillian Janet Morley, widow of Prof. Frank Morley, of Johns Hopkins University, died at her residence, 100 West University Parkway, Baltimore, last night. She had been in poor health since the death of her husband on October 17, 1937, and for the past eight months was confined to her apartment under constant medical care.

Mrs. Morley was born in London, England, on March 27, 1866, the youngest daughter of James Bird, whose father had established a comfortable fortune in the early days of the British iron industry. James Bird was for some years a director in the publishing firm of Chapman & Hall, which brought him into close association with many literary figures of the Victorian era, notably Charles Dickens and George Meredith. On the maternal side her family was prominent in the history of the Cambridge University Press.

As a child, Mrs. Morley lived for the most part at the country home of her father, in Sussex, acquiring there the knowledge and understanding of nature which later helped to endear her to a wide circle of friends in Baltimore. Here, too, she developed outstanding talent as a violinist, leading to her selection to play first violin in the famous Brighton Orchestra while she was still a schoolgirl in that fasnionable English resort.

Turned to Teaching

Many of the properties in which the Bird family were interested were in Lorraine and when that French province was annexed by Germany, in 1871, the change was reflected in the circumstances of Mrs. Morley's parents. With a courage and initiative which were characteristic through life she met adversity by turning her great musical abilities to practical use, both in teaching and concert work. It was while teaching music at Bath College, in 1887, that she met Prof. Frank Morley, who was then instructor in mathematics at this institution.

Prof. Morley came to the United States, to teach at Haverford College, Pennsylvania, that same year. In the fall of 1889, Mrs. Morley accompanied him to this country as a bride. Their first residence in this country was at Bryn Mawr College, in an apartment just vacated by Prof. (later President) Woodrow Wilson. The couple then lived for ten years on the Haverford campus, where three sons, Christopher, Felix and Frank, were born.

Moved to Baltimore

In 1900, the late Daniel Coit Gilman, then president of Johns Hopkins, brought Dr. Morley to the Baltimore university to head its department of mathematics. For over 30 years the Morleys lived in the 2000 block of Park avenue, removing in 1932 to 100 West University Parkway, where they spent their closing years.

Although a quiet and retiring couple Dr. and Mrs. Morley won for themselves the close friendship and respect of a host of Baltimoreans, by no means limited to academic circles. The scientific abilities of the husband were matched by the musical, social and literary talents of his wife. And while Mrs. Morley gave up her violin years ago, there are still many there who remember the "musical evenings" on Park avenue at which she would entertain her friends with a virtuosity indicative of what she might have become in this line.

In addition to these interests Mrs. Morley had pronounced educational talent. She herself taught her three sons to read and write and instilled in them at an early age the literary tastes which in each case have been apparent in later life. Her oldest son is Christopher Morley, the novelist, poet and essayist. Felix is editor of The Washington Post. Frank has for some years been a member of the London publishing firm of Faber & Faber, and in July will join the firm of Harcourt Brace & Co., in New York, as a director and head of the editorial department.

All 3 Were Rhodes Scholars

All three sons have been Rhodes scholars at Oxford University, from Maryland, a coincidence made more interesting by the fact that Prof. and Mrs. Morley, were married in Oxford, 50 years ago next July.

In recent years Mrs. Morley and her husband frequently spent the summers in England, where three sisters still survive her. But a deep affection for Baltimore made her decide to stay there after Dr. Morley died, even though none of her sons remained in that city. The two older ones were with her at the time of her death. There are 11 grandchildren, the oldest, Christopher Morley, jr., a teaching fellow in the history department of Cornell University.

While her husband belonged to the Society of Friends, Mrs. Morley was a lifelong member of the Episcopal Church, of which her only brother, Clement Bird, was a clergyman and one-time Canon of Chester Cathedral, England.

New Trial Hearing Today on Assault

Attorneys for Jesse Parker, 24, colored, of Washington, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in Montgomery County Circuit Court Monday after being convicted of assault on a white woman, yesterday filed a motion for a new trial. Hearing on the motion will be at 1:30 p. m. today.

The motion, filed by Attorneys Thomas L. Dawson and Kenneth Lyddane, declared new evidence would be presented.

MRS. LILLIAN MORLEY

Rep. Bert Lord, Of New York, Dies at 69

Heart Attack Suffered At Fair Is Fatal; Burial Saturday at Afton, N. Y.

Representative Bert Lord, of New York, died early yesterday in Naval Hospital after more than 30 years of public life devoted to "getting the farmer out of the mud."

The 69-year-old Republican was stricken with a heart attack while visiting the New York World's Fair with a group of Congressmen about ten days ago. He was admitted to Naval Hospital May 15, and died at 1:30 a. m. yesterday.

His wife, the former Mrs. Margaret T. Gregg, of Afton, N. Y., was at his bedside, as were his two secretaries, John P. Carr and Miss Louise Hymer, and John Gregg, his wife's son.

Third Term in Congress

Mr. Lord was serving his third term in Congress, representing the Thirty-fourth District, in central New York. He entered public life in 1915 as a member of the New York State Assembly.

Before entering the New York State Assembly he had been engaged in lumbering and mercantile activities. His home was in Afton.

New York associates of Mr. Lord joined in expressing sorrow at his death yesterday.

Besides Mrs. Lord, whom he married last fall after the death of his first wife, Mr. Lord is survived by two foster children.

House Adjourns

The House adjourned yesterday out of respect to the Representative. Flags on the Capitol and the two House buildings were flown at half staff.

Representatives Crawford, of Michigan, and Cole, Byrne, and Rockefeller, of New York, will accompany the body to Afton tomorrow night for funeral services and burial Saturday at 2 p. m. Pallbearers will be Afton friends of Mr. Lord.

Bus Line Sought To Aid Girl Visitors At Naval Academy

Baltimore, May 24 (AP).—The traveling habits of pretty young visitors to the Naval Academy were spread on Public Service Commission records today as two transportation companies argued over the right to carry passengers between Baltimore and Annapolis.

The hearing was the latest in the nine-year history of dissension between the Red Star Motor Coach Company and its predecessor and the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad and its predecessor.

The railroad, asking permission to supplement its rail service with bus transportation, said the present rail station was inconvenient.

Harry Connolly, general manager of the railroad, said the girls throng the streets about 5 p. m. on Sundays—"they linger as long as they can."

He said his proposed service might run through the Naval Academy grounds, giving a direct ride to Baltimore

Clarence Miles, attorney for the Red Star, said the proposed bus service wa.. an "attempted raid" on the railroad.

Joe E. Brown Here, Pleading For Refugees

To House Committee, Comedian Urges Children's Admission

Forgetting the comic antics that have made him famous on the screen, Joe E. Brown appeared before the House Immigration Committee yesterday to plead for the admission to America of 20,000 German refugee children.

"These youngsters are not only children without a home; they are children without a country," the film star declared. The Wagner-Rogers bill before the committee would admit 10,000 children this year and next outside quota limitations for Germany, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

Apologizing for being "a little bit nervous" at his first Congressional hearing, Brown said his four children were "four very good reasons why I a minterested in this bill." Two of Brown's children are adopted.

Flies From Hollywood

The comedian, who made a special airplane trip from Hollywood to appear before the committee, said, "I believe children have to be helped, no matter where they are." A few weeks ago, another film star, Helen Hayes, asked a joint Congressional sub-committee to recommend the Wagner-Rogers bill.

"I believe that the admission to this country of refugee children in the numbers indicated would not lessen in the slightest degree the care and protection afforded a single American child." Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, said in a statement to the committee.

She pointed out that 10,000 children 14 years or under "represent three one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the total population of the country, according to the 1930 census. The proportion of children to the total population is decreasing, she declared, adding that "children are becoming increasingly precious in this country."

Miss Lenroot said the plans for selecting the refugee children and providing for them in the United States "are in accordance with the highest standards of child-caring work."

Attorney Testifies

She reminded the committee that while the condition of many American children is below standard, their problem is not the same as that of "a refugee for whom a home must be found."

Cheney Jones, Boston attorney and social service expert, said, "This addition to our population would constitute a strong infusion of many high qualities which would work only benefit to our population."

Senate Indorses Allen as D. C. Reorganizer

Will Act as Liaison Officer Between President and Congress

The Senate late yesterday confirmed the President's nomination of George E. Allen as Commissioner of the District of Columbia.

Commissioner Allen succeeds himself in the position, which he held from 1933 until last September, when he resigned to enter the insurance business.

Appointment of his successor was held up pending reorganization of the District municipal affairs, as there was a possibility the commission form of government would be abandoned.

Commissioners Hazen and McCoach yesterday went to the Capitol to present their reorganization ideas to Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, but the meeting was called off until Allen could be present.

Commissioner Allen's principal duty will be to convey to Congress the President's own ideas on the type of government the District should have.

Although Commissioner Allen was confirmed for a term of three years, it is understood that he will resign when the reorganization plan is completed—or within the next 12 months.
